THE WISTARIA'S WAYS AND WANTS

In landscape adornment, vines as well as shrubs and trees can often be used to advantage—to the advantage of both gardener and grounds. Vines increase the possibilities for variety and effectiveness in design, thus adding to the trade's opportunities. And few vines are more serviceable in this way than the wistaria.

NO ONE vine, of course, will answer all the different purposes for which vines are wanted. It may not be possible, even, to find a vine that is perfectly suited to any one purpose. The commercially perfect vine, or commercially perfect plant of any sort, never yet has been obtained and probably never will be obtained, catalogues to the contrary notwithstanding. All normal products of nature, such as plants, may be perfect in their own way, but as soon as man begins to adapt these natural products to artificial conditions—then, in the words of the famous jingle, “needles and pins, his trouble begins;” he begins his ceaseless effort toward what he calls improvement, improvement that ever leads onward to greater improvement. In plant raising, as in other human undertakings, our present best will generally be followed by a future better. Thus the world “do move,” and for that let Providence be thanked!

So the wistaria, commercially speaking, has its defects as well as its merits. Or, if the admirers of the wistaria will not admit that it has any defects, they will at least acknowledge that it has its limitations.

About Its Name.

The wistaria is more than ordinarily beautiful. It has a most unique and distinctive sort of beauty, and even the name “wistaria” is pleasing enough to accord well with the grace and charm of the plant. The name is pretty enough to fit the plant and that is more than can be said of hosts of other plant appellations. The word “wistaria” has in it a suggestion of music and romance; it is such a name as chimes well in song and story.

Yet there is nothing mysterious or romantic about the origin of the name. The wistaria was so called in honor of Caspar Wistar, who was professor of anatomy in the University of Pennsylvania about the beginning of the nineteenth century. When he was thus honored by having the plant as a namesake, he had probably done something else to earn such a distinction, besides simply bearing a name that would sound well when adopted for the vine, but even the suitability of his name is of no slight importance when one considers the uncouthness of the names which have been inflicted on many beautiful but helpless and hapless flowers.

The wistaria also has had other botanical names and it is still listed occasionally as a glycine. Familiarly it is sometimes called the kidney-bean tree, the grape-flower vine, etc. But, luckily, it is most frequently known as the wistaria.

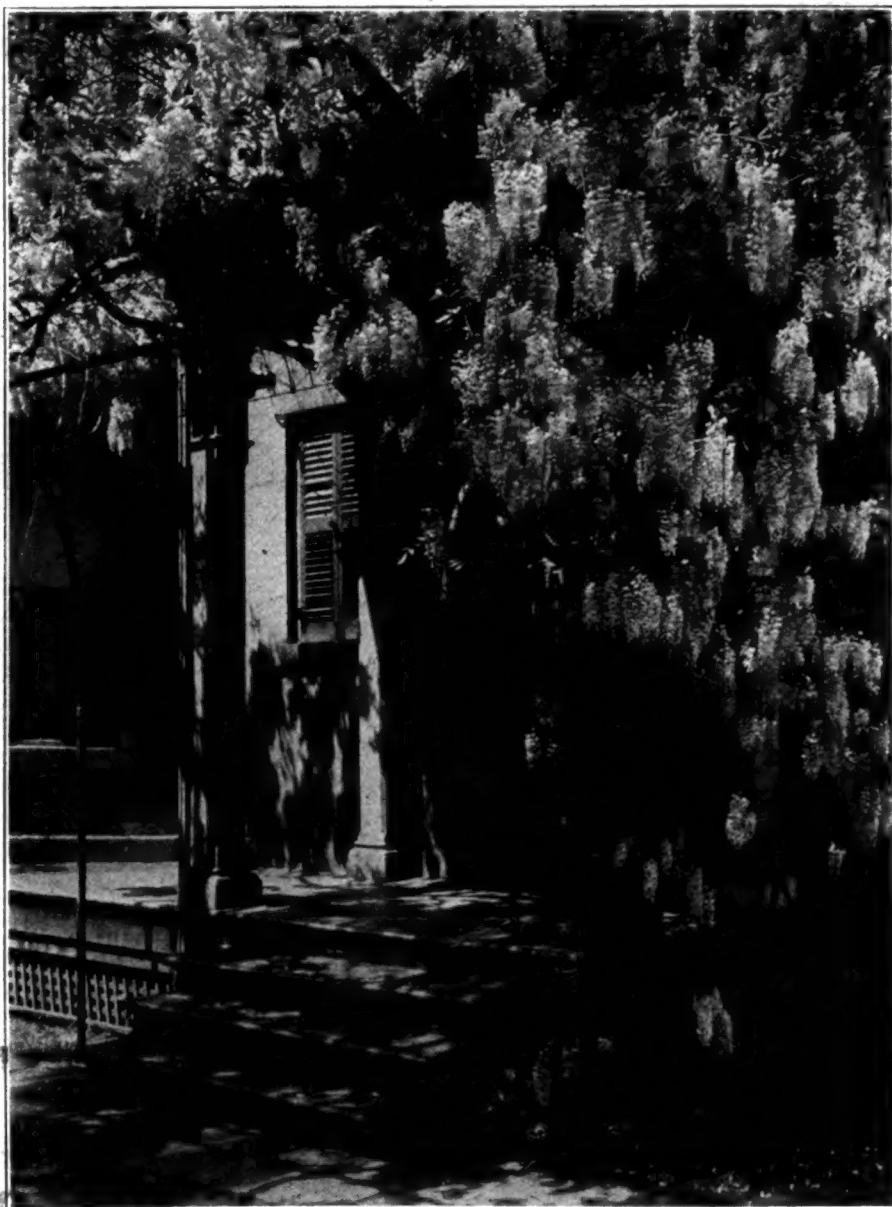

Its Family Relationships.

The wistaria belongs to the leguminosæ, that immense order or family whose members vary in size from the slender, fragile sweet pea to the huge, rugged coffee tree, honey locust and others. The wistaria's pea-shaped flowers and pods are sufficiently suggestive of its family connections. Though there are both giants and dwarfs in the leguminosæ family, the family resemblance is plainly visible in nearly every individual, whether huge or tiny.

The defects—no, the limitations—of the wistaria are less obvious than its beauties and should therefore be emphasized. To begin where the plant begins, it is somewhat difficult of propagation, as cuttings of it do not root readily unless the conditions are exactly right. It can be grown from seeds, but with uncertainty as to the character of the seedlings. A method sometimes employed instead of the use of cuttings is to graft a small shoot on a piece of root, but an easier and surer process is to layer the young growing shoots. However, as far as the florist is concerned, a still easier and more practical method is to let the nurseryman do the propagating and all the attendant worrying. Indeed, the nurseryman is so accustomed to the job that he can dispense with most of the worrying; for him there is only enough difficulty in the operation to make it interesting.

Its Start in Life.

It is advisable, then, that the nurseryman start the little wistarias into life and keep them in his possession until they are

The Wistaria on a Rochester Workman's Porch.

3 or 4 years old. Even then, however, the young plants may be disappointingly slow in their development, unless they have been pot-grown or have been frequently transplanted in the nursery row, for the wistaria roots are naturally limited in number and are deep-growing, making few fibers. To insure quick, satisfactory results, the soil must be a good, well manured loam.

After the plants are thoroughly established, they grow with remarkable vigor if they have a fairly rich, loamy soil and a sunny position. Even in a somewhat dry and sandy soil they maintain an existence, but they respond magnificently to generous treatment, fully repaying it with splendid growth and with glorious displays of flowers in long, dense, drooping clusters or racemes.

Another limitation of the wistaria—a real limitation in this instance, if not an actual defect—is its comparative tenderness. It is not absolutely, unfailingly hardy in the most northerly states of the Union. Even in the north-central states, say in the latitude of Chicago, it may sometimes need a little protection in winter. But, as already said, it pays for all it gets. The wistaria shown in the illustration was growing at a home in Rochester, N. Y.

On Porch and Pergola.

The wistaria is limited, too, in the amount of shade that it supplies. If dense, impenetrable shade is wanted, some other vine will be preferable. But that is only saying that the wistaria has its own character and its own proper place. Look at the wistaria-covered porch shown in the illustration; observe the way in which the vine and the sun together have flecked the stairway and floor with fitting, changeable light and shade; take note of the whole effect and say whether the wistaria was not a fairly good vine for the place.

Besides, if the wistaria alone does not provide sufficient shade, it may be used in combination with some other vine in order to produce the desired result. The writer has seen a picture of a pergola that was thickly covered with a species of ivy; above the ivy were some wistaria vines, so trained that their flower clusters drooped over the upper part of the ivy, like long, silken tassels over rich drapery. Such a combination does not seem to be especially difficult, and the results are such as might win praise even from the most dyspeptic and jaundiced of fault-finders.

As to the best variety of wistaria for American culture, there seems to be general agreement. The Chinese wistaria, or Wistaria Chinensis, which is shown in the illustration, is probably the most popular variety in this country, and apparently with good reason, as it surpasses the others both in vigor of growth and in floriferousness. W. multijuga, or the loose-clustered wistaria, is the favorite sort in Japan and flourishes magnificently there, but is said to be less satisfactory in the American climate. The American species, W. frutescens or W. speciosa, is also inferior to W. Chinensis, both in growth and in freedom of bloom.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

BRIDE'S BOUQUET ON CASKET.

Did you ever hear of a bride's shower bouquet as the only flowers on the casket at a funeral?

It happened in a fashionable Chicago suburb.

The circumstances, of course, were exceptional. A young woman, engaged to be married, the daughter of a wealthy family, met an accidental death. The flowers sent by the prospective husband consisted of a large shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, such as he would have supplied for the wedding. The bouquet, which was placed on the casket, was made by the E. Wienhoeber Co. and is said to be the only instance on record where a wedding bouquet was sent to a funeral. The circumstances were so unusual as to attract much attention.

KERR'S CEMETERY BRANCH.

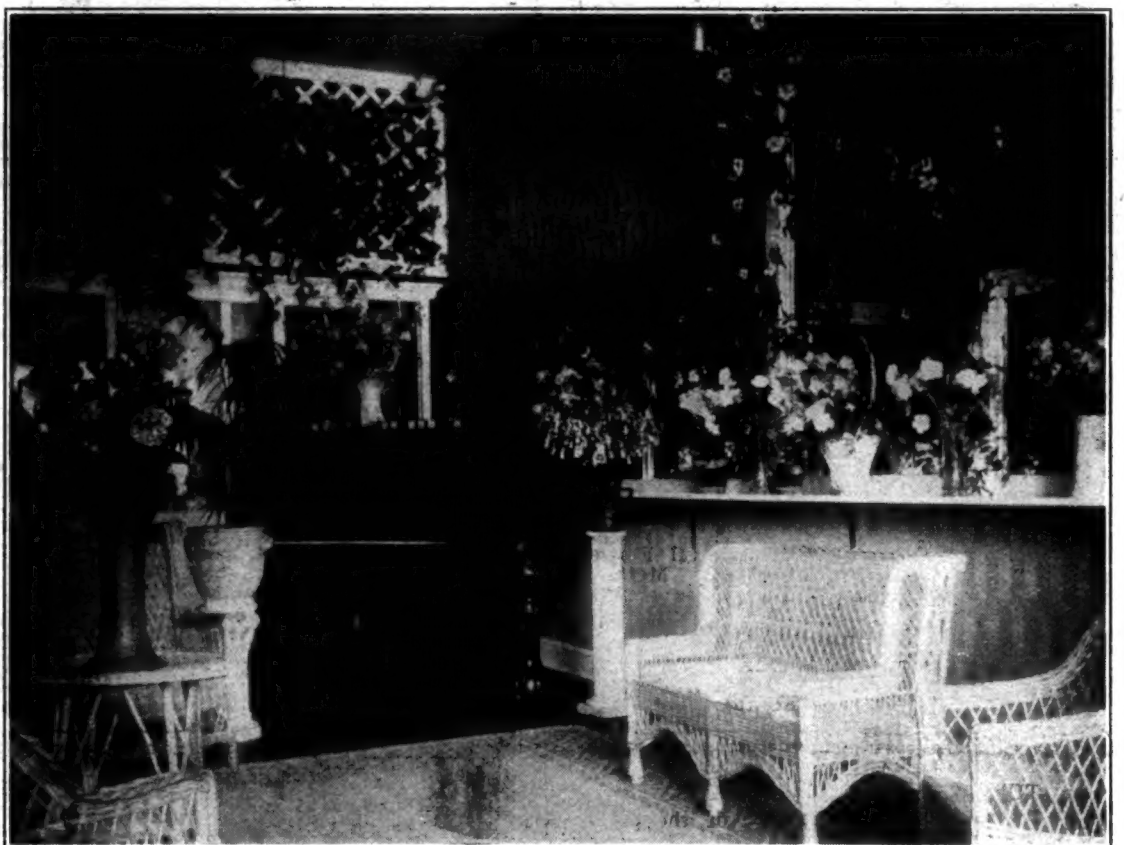

R. C. Kerr's store at Main and McKinney streets takes ample care of his flower trade in the downtown district of Houston, Tex. To provide for equally expeditious handling of the cemetery trade, he has built a branch conservatory across from the Glenwood cemetery. This is now in running order, as may be seen from the photograph of the establishment reproduced on page 13. It is an attractive place and, says Mr. Kerr, is quite an addition to that end of town.

WHAT EVERYBODY'S DOING.

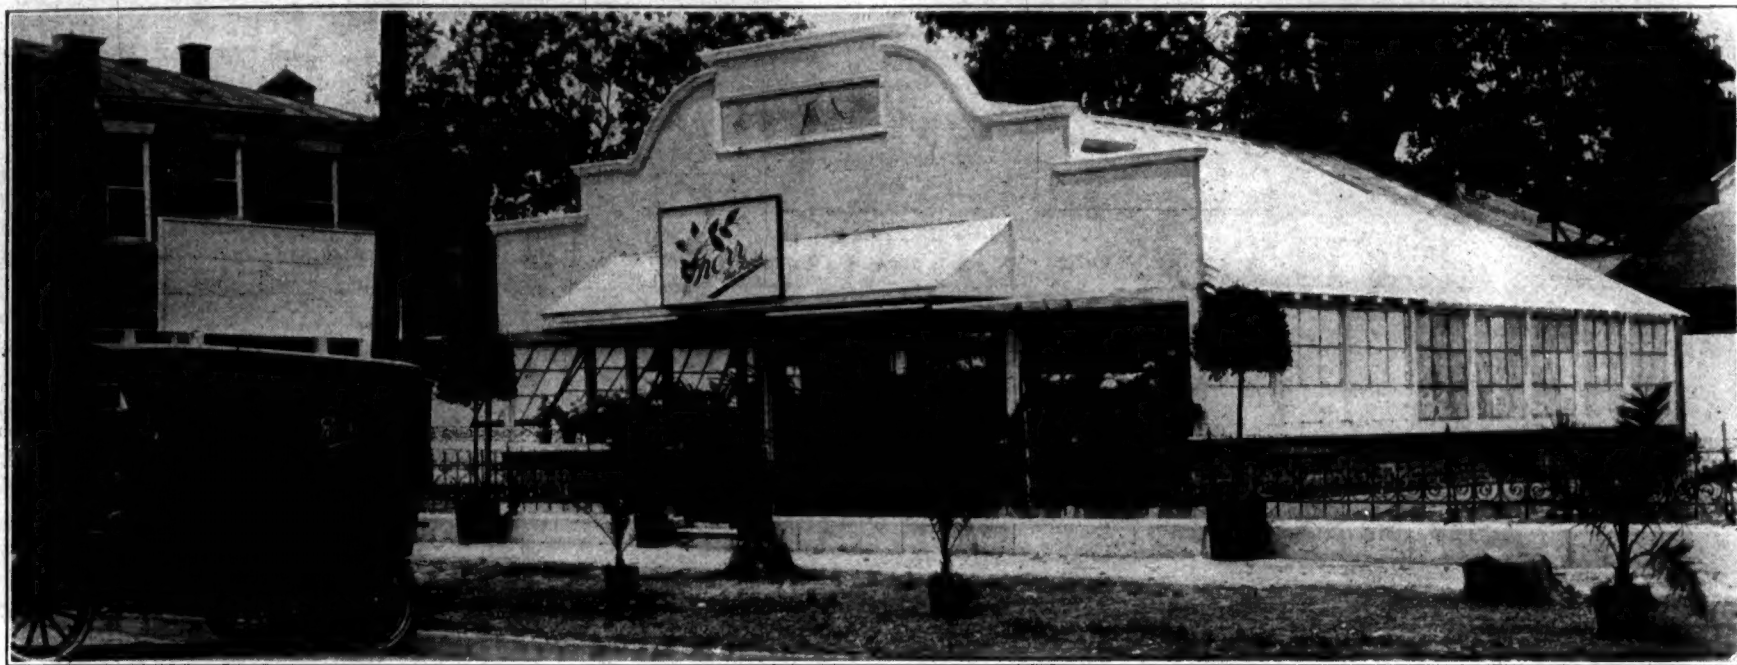

What everybody's doing, is, in homely phrase, what the orator means by "the trend of the times." The fact that everybody's doing it now, sets the stamp of progress as well as fashion upon the act, whether it is holding tango teas, buying a certain make of automobile, or eliminating the counters from the flower store and installing a piano. Most of us want to know about the things upon which that stamp has been put, whether the mark is that of fashion or of progress. That is the reason that readers of The Review are so interested in the things that everybody's doing now, as set forth in its illustrations and articles. From these they are ready to adopt the things that they believe will help their own progress towards the goal, success. Miss Fannie D. White, of Lexington, Ky., who is now well along in her progress thither, availed herself of this source of suggestions in planning her new store, the interior of which is shown in the illustration on this page. She writes, "I received some fine ideas for my store from one of the pictures in The Review." And, after looking at the accompanying picture, one observer is moved to remark that Miss White picked out some excellent ideas.

DECORATE STRAUSS TABLET.

The memorial tablet to Isador and Ida Strauss, who lost their lives on the Titanic, placed in the building of R. H. Macy & Co., at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, by the employees of the concern, was decorated by Woodrow & Marketos, the New York florists. The work may be seen in the accompanying illustration. The same firm decorated the Strauss memorial park, formerly the home grounds of Mr. Strauss, at One Hundred Seventh street and Broadway.

PROGRAM OF TEXAS MEETING.

The second annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, July 6 and 7, at Fort Worth. Efforts are being made to make this a convention of florists from all parts of the south, and President Kerr expresses the expectation of a large attendance. The program is as follows:

TUESDAY, JULY 6, 9 A. M.

Meeting called to order by Vice-president W. J. Baker, of Fort Worth.
Opening invocation.
Welcoming address by L. J. Tackett, president of Fort Worth Florists' Club.
Address of welcome on behalf of the city of Fort Worth, by the mayor.
Response, by H. B. Beck, of Austin.
President Robert C. Kerr takes the chair.
"Coöperation of the S. A. F. and the Southern Florists," by Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F.
"What We May Expect at the Frisco Convention," by Daniel MacRorie, vice-president of the S. A. F.
"What the Big Growers Think of the South as a Market," by August Poehlmann, member of S. A. F. board of directors.
"The Florists' Part in the Texas Arboretum," by J. S. Kerr, of Sherman.
"The Possibilities of an Experimental Range of Glass at College Station," by E. J. Kyle, of College Station.
"How I Am Growing Carnations Successfully in Southern Texas," by Mrs. E. O. Wessinger, of Beaumont.
"The Effect of the War on the Southern Florists," by H. O. Hanna, of Sherman.
Round table discussion: "The Retail Flower Store and Its Management, and Some Methods of Saving Time and Materials," led by H. Greve, of Dallas.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 6.

Report of the secretary-treasurer.
Appointing of committees.
Reports of the presidents of the Texas local florists' clubs.
Report and recommendations of Tom Wolf, chairman of the flower show committee.

TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 6.

Dinner at 8:30 p. m., in honor of the president, by local florists.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 7, 9 A. M.

Invitation for next convention.

Invitation for annual flower show.
Election of officers.
Report of standing committees.
Report of special committees.
Unfinished business.
New business.
Adjournment.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 7.

Entertainment by local florists.

INVITATION TO FORT WORTH.

The florists of Texas extend a most cordial invitation to all florists to attend our Texas convention at Fort Worth, July 13 and 14. We especially appeal to the southern florists, as we want them to see for themselves the great good derived from these conventions from year to year.

Remember, we do not want to detract from the S. A. F. meeting at San Francisco, and of course if you are going there it would not be consistent to attend both conventions. But if you are not going to San Francisco, this would be an excellent opportunity for you to attend a live gathering of southern florists.

Take particular note of our program. You will notice that President Welch, Vice-president MacRorie and August Poehlmann, of the S. A. F., will be with us.

We should be glad to have a card from anyone who expects to attend. We assure you of a good time and an instructive meeting.

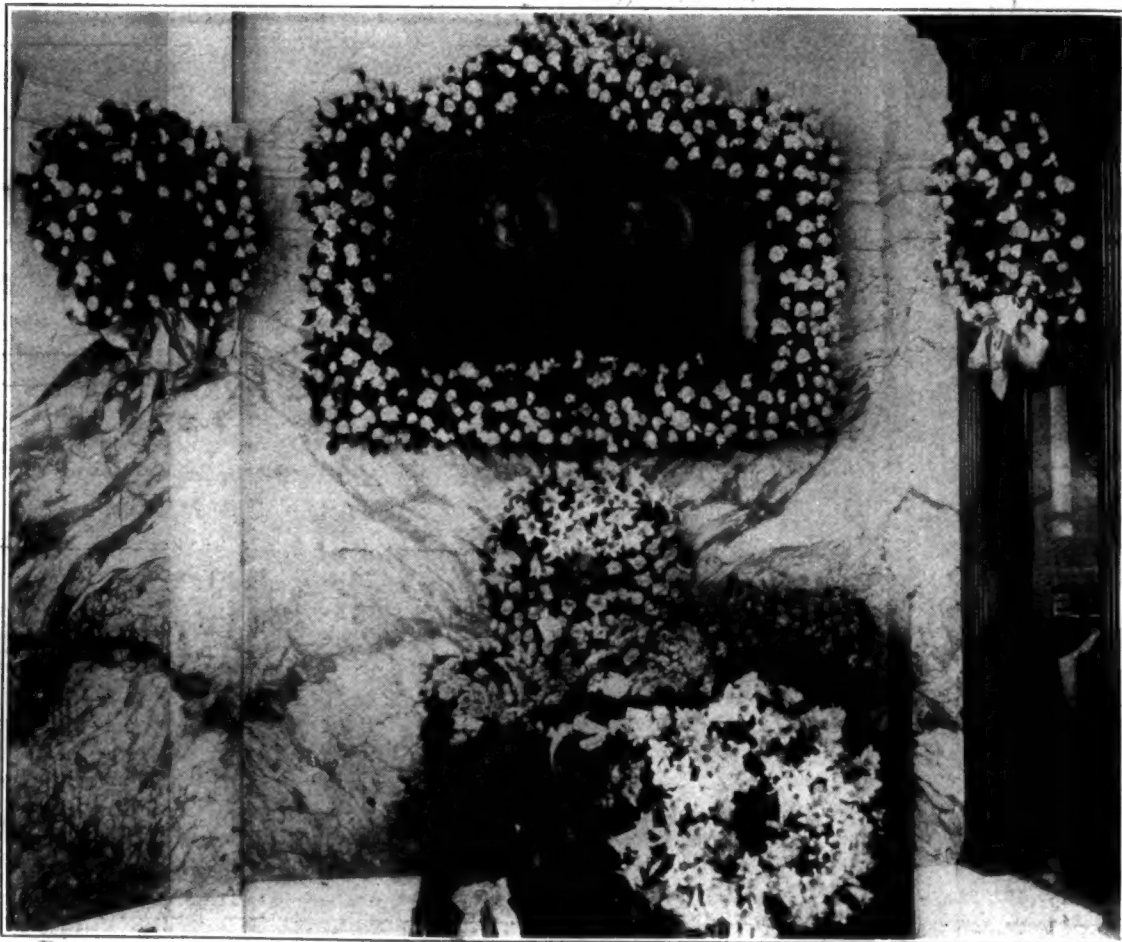

R. C. Kerr, Pres.,
Texas State Florists' Ass'n.

P. S.—Address your card to Secretary L. J. Tackett, Fort Worth, Tex.

MAINE FLORISTS TO EXHIBIT.

The executive board of the Maine State Florists' Society met at Lewiston May 7, and decided to hold a number of flower exhibits through the year to stimulate interest in the trade.

The first one is to be held at Portland during the early part of June, as a part of the Maine exposition. It is proposed to stage a separate exhibit every day for ten to twelve days.

Decoration of the Strauss Memorial on Titanic Anniversary.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS.

QUALITY COUNTS BEFORE PRICE.

I wish to write you a few lines in regard to Mothers' day here in Fort Smith. The day would have been a success had the wholesale people sent good stock, but the stock received from them, both by myself and the Electric Park Flower Store, was so poor that it caused us a great deal of trouble. We had set the price of carnations at $1.25 per dozen, but upon receipt of the stock we were glad even to get 75 cents. It seems as if the cities get the best stock and we get what is left.

Mothers' day here would have made me some money had I the stock, as I had advertised heavily, but as it was I will do well to break even. I had 600 carnations and lost over half of them on account of being unable to use them. I am not writing this as a roast to the wholesale people, but in justice to the florists in this part of the country.

George Rye.

THE PRICE IS THE THING.

Regarding Mr. Washburn's article, "Where is the Outlet?" I would say, give the country dealer a chance. At all the big flower days, Christmas, St. Valentine's and Easter, the big city growers and dealers cater to the rich. Could the country dealer buy his flowers at a more reasonable price, he could do an enormous business without scaring his customers out of buying flowers for the rest of the year. He could maintain a fair average price the year around and could push for business in the surrounding towns if he was sure of his supply at a reasonable price. The masses, and they are going to be the flower buyers of the future, do not want to pay more than 75 cents or $1 per dozen for their carnations and $1 and $1.50 per dozen for their roses. If the growers and the dealers in the big cities would take a little less for their goods on the big days, the country dealer would use a lot more stock during the so-called gluts.

NATIONAL DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Responding to the call of R. Vincent, Jr., the organization of the National Dahlia Society was consummated at an enthusiastic meeting at the Grand Hotel, New York, May 10. Those present were:

Austin, F. R., Tuckerton, N. J.
Benjamin, J. R., Calverton, L. I.
Brown, E. S., East Moriches, L. I.
Bunyard, H. A., New York.
Dick, J. H., New York.
Duthie, James, Oyster Bay, L. I.
Ebel, M. C., Madison, N. J.
Faulkner, A. F., New York.
Hall, F. H., Geneva, N. Y.
Hendrickson, I. S., Floral Park, N. Y.
Kerr, George W., Doylestown, Pa.
Kind, Hugo, Hammonton, N. J.
Kirby, James, Huntington, L. I.
Lane, J. J., Hempstead, L. I.
Merritt, John W., Farmingdale, L. I.
Peacock, L. K., Berlin, N. J.
Rigby, P. B., New York.
Shaw, J. Austin, New York.
Stewart, W. J., Boston.
Stillman, George, Westerly, R. I.
Vincent, John S., White Marsh, Md.
Vincent, R., Jr., White Marsh, Md.

The purposes of the organization were fully discussed, all those present taking part. Messrs. Brown, Austin and Hendrickson drew up constitution and by-laws, closely following those of the American Gladiolus Society, which were adopted. Officers and committees were chosen, as follows:

President—R. Vincent, Jr.
Vice-presidents—George Stillman, E. S. Brown, L. K. Peacock and W. W. Wilmore.
Secretary—J. J. Lane.
Treasurer—F. R. Austin.
Executive committee—I. S. Hendrickson, George W. Kerr, James Duthie, Hugo Kind and John S. Vincent.
Nomenclature committee—F. H. Hall, James Kirby, E. S. Brown, L. K. Peacock and Leonard Barron.

It is planned to hold a big show of dahlias, the largest America ever has seen, in New York in September.

HYDRANGEAS NOT BLOOMING.

We are having trouble with hydrangeas not blooming. We propagate about June 1, the old stock being planted outside and the young stock kept inside, and shift to 4-inch pots in February. We keep the plants cool and on the dry side until the latter part of March. The old stock is lifted, placed under a bench and allowed to dry until some leaves drop. We have propagated each year largely from blind wood, but until this year the young stock has nearly all bloomed well. A large percentage of old plants fail to bloom each year. We grow chiefly Avalanche, La Lorraine, Hamar, Riverain, hortensis and Otaksa. What is the trouble? J. J. G. & S.—Ohio.

Your treatment of the hydrangeas seems to be, in the main, correct. One thing to remember is that to have success with Avalanche, La Lorraine and others of the French type the plants must not be exposed to even light freezings. This will not harm Otaksa or hortensis, but will spoil the French varieties, which are much more delicate. They should be kept, after being potted, in a coldframe, where they can have full sunlight. If placed below a bench they are liable to get more or less drip, and it does not take much to cause the buds to damp off on the French varieties. I think your winter treatment causes many buds to decay, with a consequent loss of flowers. The tops must be kept dry or you are sure to have trouble. C. W.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Dayton, O.—E. E. Schaefer, the Arcade florist, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the U. S. District court May 1. The statement filed shows liabilities of $12,295 and assets of $9,977.55. Attorneys Burkhart and Heald acted for the petitioner.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Peonies.

The peonies are now making a rapid growth. Even if they had a winter mulch of old manure they will appreciate some additional feeding now. In order to benefit the plants at once, some quick acting stimulant must be applied. There is nothing better than liquid cow manure, applied after a soaking rain. If time will not allow of this being given, a top-dressing of nitrate of soda or dried blood should be used, scratching the soil over after applying it. It is really surprising what a benefit this will prove to the peonies, which are hungry for plant food at this season.

Use the Coldframes.

The rate of growth is now rapid among bedding plants and between these and the special Memorial day crops there is always the danger of overcrowding. In such cases a good block of coldframes proves a wonderful help. The bedding stock in them thrives better than in the greenhouses, becomes stockier and is much more easily hardened off. Too few florists appreciate the importance of coldframes. They are vastly superior to heated greenhouses for the production of bedding plants in spring. Given the sashes alone, it is a simple matter to build a plank frame to stand them on, and a wonderful relief from overcrowded greenhouse conditions is soon obtained.

Gladioli.

The earliest planting of gladioli is through the ground and now is the time to make an additional large planting. Do not put all the bulbs in now, but reserve some to go out until the first week in June. These late planted gladioli do not possess the strength of the earlier ones, but they will flower later, which is what is wanted. Plant the bulbs five or six inches deep. This will keep the plants erect after the flower spikes appear. If planted shallow they will fall over with every wind and rain storm that comes along. Do not plant mixed gladioli; there is little sale for them. Pink is the best selling color, and America is still the leading commercial sort of moderate price. White comes next in popularity. Yellows have some favor, while scarlet and crimson do not sell particularly well.

Entirely apart from growing gladioli for cutting, there is a great field for using gladioli on the many small estates or public squares which country florists are asked to care for. In solid beds with a ground cover of some low growing plants, or as clumps in mixed borders, is the best way to use them.

BOILER BILL IN ILLINOIS

LICENSE LAW IN LEGISLATURE

Legislation requiring license for operators of boilers working 5000 feet of radiation in state of Illinois up for passage in lower house

SINCE Ohio greenhouse owners opened their fight on the enforcement of a musty and hitherto moss-hidden statute providing for the examination and licensing of firemen operating boilers of thirty horsepower or more, florists in nearly every state in the Union have learned that they face the possibility of a similar fight. The article on this subject in last week's Review called attention to the extent of this widespread and sudden legislative activity. No less than seventy-five bills have been introduced in various state legislatures within the last year.

In Illinois the bill on this subject has reached a more advanced stage than those in most other states, and prompt action is necessary if its passage is to be prevented. Manufacturers' associations, apartment house owners' organizations, real estate boards, boiler concerns, etc., are all taking active steps to oppose the measure. Greenhouse owners should lend their aid promptly and fully, for the provisions of the bill are such that practically no grower will escape the hardships imposed by its passage.

Pressure Limit Low.

House bill number 563, which was introduced March 31, 1915, by Lee O'Neil Browne, of wide and unsavory reputation since the Lorimer fumigation, has already been taken up, read a first time, and ordered printed and to a second reading without being referred to a committee. Recent advices state that it has reached a phase where it will be passed this week, or killed. A similar bill—an identical bill, indeed, save for the insertion of the word "stationary" between the words "operating" and "engineer"—was introduced March 17, 1915, by the same gentleman, and referred to the committee on license and miscellany, from which it has not yet escaped.

Verbatim extracts of the bill, including the provisions most important to greenhousemen, are given herewith. It will be noted at once that the limit of pressure or radiation has been placed so low that few boilers can be operated without a licensed fireman. Ten pounds is the maximum pressure allowed on a boiler operated by an unlicensed fireman. And to prevent greenhousemen from heating their ranges on low pressure, there is the additional limit of 5,000 feet of radiation, no matter what the pressure.

This low limit has been imposed, it is quite apparent, without the consultation of expert engineers and boiler manufacturers. Such men, backed by the higher authority of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, have given it as their opinion that low been brought forward, not one by one, as though there might be a dawning recognition of the fact that a danger to life and property had been overlooked in allowing unlicensed firemen to operate steam boilers of the size aimed at in these bills, but they have all been presented more or less suddenly and all more or less at the same time. It is also noteworthy that such legislation has made its appearance since the beginning of the business depression, caused by the war or whatever you choose, that closed many factories and threw out of employment the operators of many steam plants. The inference is natural, therefore, that organized labor is responsible for the sudden legislative activity on this head, in its attempt to secure positions for those whom the business depression rendered jobless.

The Danger.

A law that requires the addition to the small grower's payroll of at least two extra men threatens hardship to a large majority of the trade, but that which, in addition to this requirement, means the entrance of organized labor into greenhouse work, carries danger to every grower. One has only to consider what would be the effect of a sympathetic strike of firemen, for the petty grievance of some other trade, in the neighborhood of the Christmas and New Year's holidays, when, perhaps, the mercury is hovering about the zero mark, to realize the danger this law involves to big grower as well as little.

Not only must the fireman who wishes a license pass an examination "in the construction and operation of steam boilers and power generating and driven apparatus," but he also must have had three years' experience of boilers and power driven apparatus, must be 21 years old, and must be a citizen of the United States or have declared his intention to become one. Those acquainted with the trade need not be told how hard these requirements will strike growers in general. Few of those now operating their own boilers could obtain a license, except,

SALIENT SECTIONS OF ILLINOIS BILL.

Section 9. No person shall operate any manufacturing or commercial plant or any steam boiler carrying a pressure of more than ten pounds gauge or any heating plant of more than 5,000 square feet of radiation without first obtaining a license to do so as provided by this act.

Section 14. Any person over 21 years of age who is a citizen of the United States, or who has declared his intention of becoming such, shall be eligible to make application for license as a steam and operating engineer, provided he has had three years' experience on boilers and power driven apparatus; provided, that any engineer who shall make affidavit as having had three or more years' experience prior to the passage of this bill as a steam and operating engineer, next preceding his application, and upon certification of such fact by his employer, shall be granted a license for the plant he is then operating without further examination.

Section 17. Whoever, being an engineer or owner or user of a steam boiler, heating, manufacturing or commercial plant, violates any provisions of this act except as specified, shall be fined not less than $10 or more than $100.

pressure heating boilers carrying fifteen pounds or less steam pressure should be exempt from inspection and the requirement of a licensed engineer. That, in the face of such authoritative statement, not by one but by many, the legislature should fix the legal requirement at ten pounds steam pressure shows only too plainly the absence of even the ordinary examination of facts expected of the lawmakers.

What's Behind.

It is noteworthy that the present bills requiring licensed firemen have possibly, under the provisional clause of section 14 granting a license to those who, at the time of the bill's passage, have been employed as steam or operating engineers for the last three or more years. But this license allows them only to hold their present jobs, and if an employee who has been granted such a license should seek another position, he would then have to pass the examination. The provision that licenses shall be granted those who already hold municipal licenses will not likely help many.

Greenhousemen will find nothing favorable for them in this law, and the best action is prompt action toward its defeat. Each one should at least write his representative at Springfield of his opposition to the bill and his objections to it. Here is the opportunity for action on the part of our state vice-presidents of the S. A. F., the Illinois State Florists' Association and florists' clubs throughout the state. Strong action, taken immediately, is needed. It may already be too late to affect the action of the lower house, but the bill will then go to the state senate, where the interests affected should have a chance to be heard. Write today. Insist on delay until the trade can be heard.

CHICAGO CLUB MEETING.

Renewed Interest Manifest.

It is quite probable that the members of the Chicago Florists' Club have never spent an evening with more profit to themselves and the concerns they represent than that of May 6. The interest of the meeting centered in a talk by H. L. Fogleman, of the Sheldon School, on "Business Building and Salesmanship." In rapid succession the speaker touched upon those things that are essential to business building, such as right quality, right quantity, right price and right manner of conduct. Under the last division, he spoke strongly of the value of courtesy and the absolute necessity of keeping your head, as applied to every employee, from the president of the concern down to the delivery boy. After a number of cogent illustrations, Mr. Fogleman proceeded to handle the subject of salesmanship in a manner that will no doubt be reflected in the florists' trade to a greater or lesser degree, as there was not a moment from the beginning to the end of the lecture that attention flagged. Following the talk, there were many and earnest expressions of a desire to study more closely those things that make for greater efficiency, to the end that the trade as a whole may be better able to cope with the problems which confront it.

Following remarks by several members relative to the recent loss the trade has sustained, President Keimel appointed a committee, consisting of H. N. Bruns, Michael Barker and A. T. Pyfer, to draw up resolutions expressing the regret and sorrow of the club in the death of John Zech, April 29.

Pursuant to the announcement sent out, President Keimel appointed William Lorman, chairman; R. E. Moore, Otto Goerisch and Peter Olsem to constitute a committee on sports. During the evening the following were elected to membership: P. M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark.; Philip J. Foley, Jr., Thirty-first street and Spaulding avenue; C. J. Michelsen, 174 North Wabash avenue; F. S. Webb, 30 East Randolph street; H. O. S. Nichols, 508 South Dearborn street.

The following schedule, proposed by the S. A. F., of the special train to the convention at San Francisco, was submitted by the transportation committee and approved:

Leave Chicago August 12th, 10:00 P. M.
Arrive Omaha August 13th, 11:30 A. M.
Leave Omaha August 13th, 11:45 A. M.
Arrive Denver August 14th, 3:00 A. M.
Leave Denver August 14th, 3:30 A. M.
Arrive Colorado Springs August 14th, 6:00 A. M. (Early morning Crystal Park auto tour.)
Leave Colorado Springs August 14th, 10:30 A. M.
Arrive Salt Lake City August 15th, 12:25 P. M. (Organ concert or Salt Air Beach.)
Leave Salt Lake City August 15th, 5:00 P. M.
Arrive Ogden August 15th, 6:00 P. M. (M. T.)
Leave Ogden August 15th, 5:30 P. M. (P. T.)
Arrive San Francisco August 16th, 9:00 P. M.

The information was also given that the lower berth rate from Chicago to San Francisco in connection with this trip is $13.

The advisability of having a flower show next autumn was discussed by Carl Cropp and Nicholas Miller, but no definite action was taken in the matter. The following applications will be balloted upon at the next meeting: H. H. Wilkerson, 56 East Randolph street; Oscar Leistner, 323 West Randolph street; Theodore Kirschner, 323 West Randolph street; Charles O. Youngstrand, Morton Grove, Ill.

After an enjoyable luncheon and a period of get-together, the meeting was adjourned at a late hour and the members and guests departed, congratulating one another and themselves on their good fortune in being present. The attendance rarely has been larger, there having been seventy-five members there.

HOOSIER BEAUTY GETS MEDAL.

A gold medal was awarded Rose Hoosier Beauty at the April show in London of the National Rose Society. It was exhibited by Beckwith & Son, Hoddesdon, England, and one of the British trade papers, in reporting the event, says of it:

"This fine red, raised from Chateau de Clos Vougeot and Richmond by Dornier & Sons Co., the famous American carnation raisers, is all that has been said of it. Perfume galore, and pure rose scent, too, form of both parents, the flowers being large, and petals curving back, with a frilled edge. A glorious rose, and if it does well out of doors here we shall find the perfect red, for unlike Richmond it has more petals, and does not blow to pieces in the summer."

ROSES IN UNHEATED HOUSE.

I have a small greenhouse which is without heat, and which I use only in the late summer and early fall. Would it pay to plant it with dormant roses in the fall and would these come into bloom early in the summer without other heat than that of the sun? What varieties would be most suitable?

A. R. M.—Wash.

You could grow either hybrid teas or hybrid perpetuals in the house mentioned. Of the former, such varieties as Richmond, all the Killarney family, Sunburst, Ward, Prince d'Arenberg and Ophelia would be suitable. Of the hybrid perpetuals a few good sorts are:

Frau Karl Druschki, Magna Charta, Ulrich Brunner, Mme. Gabriel Luizet and Baron de Bonstetten. These latter are hardier than the hybrid teas, but are not so persistent in blooming. You will, of course, have to guard against mildew. These roses would flower in advance of those grown in the open.

C. W.

POTTED FORCING ROSES.

I should like to pot up some roses next fall and bring them into a house, run at 50 degrees at night, about January 1. Please tell me whether this can be done; also state the proper method to pursue and what varieties to use.

A. R. M.—Wash.

Pot them up about the end of October and keep them outdoors as late as possible. Protect the pots from sharp frosts. Good varieties to force are: Among ramblers—Dorothy Perkins, R. excelsa, or Red Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and Tausendschon. Among polyanthas—Mrs. Cutbush, Catherine Zeimet, Orleans and Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. The hybrid perpetuals also make good pot plants, particularly Druschki, Magna Charta and Brunner.

C. W.

BONE MEAL FOR ROSES.

Please inform me whether bone meal should be added to rose soil at planting time, when good cow manure has been used. The soil contains about one-fifth cow manure and was piled last fall. Or, is it better to add the bone later? In either case, how much bone is required?

J. C.

It is usually considered the best course to add bone meal to the soil at the time of filling the benches with new compost, which should contain one-third to one-fourth manure, preferably cattle manure. Add about 200 pounds of the bone to 1,000 square feet of bench. As bone meal decays slowly, it will be several months before the plants will begin to receive any material benefit from it. The best way to apply this is to sprinkle it on the soil and work it in by hand before planting.

FERTILIZERS AND FLORISTS.

A matter of interest to florists is the erection of the fertilizer plant shown in the accompanying illustration, which previously has been referred to in The Review. It is that of the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., the principal office of which is at the Union Stock Yards. The plant is at Osborn, Ind., on the Belt Line railroad. The factory is 60x200 feet, with part of the structure three stories high, for elevator and storage purposes.

The company was organized about a year ago by John P. Bowles and associates, Mr. Bowles holding the presidency. The other officers then elected were: Vice-president, F. S. Markey; secretary, W. R. Love; treasurer, Chas. Goepper; manager, F. E. Moore. F. S. Markey had formerly been identified with the Farmers' & Florists' Tankage Fertilizer Co. John Tiplady, well known as gardener to A. B. Dick at Lake Forest, was secured as one of the department sales managers and later J. E. Pollworth, also well known to florists, joined the staff.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Mothers' day was an immense success in this city as far as sales are concerned. While all the growers and wholesalers had made provision for an extra heavy demand, the supply was nowhere near equal to the call. Carnations were the flower of the day and every last bloom was sold, and when the supply of white carnations was exhausted Sunday morning they would have brought the price of gardenias. Thousands of carnations were sold in assorted colors, by the dozen or two dozen, to people who at other times would not consider carnations at any price. The call also was heavy for all other stock, as hundreds of orders were for assorted flowers, and everything was cleaned up slick as a whistle.

No doubt the growers reaped a nice profit from Mothers' day, and the retail man also made some money, but much of the stock was of an inferior quality and here is where the retailer suffers directly through his flowers not giving satisfaction. Another year special stress should be put on the fact that other flowers or plants are just as appropriate as carnations and then such a fabulous price for inferior carnations will not be necessary, as the demand will be more evenly divided.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan had his window appropriately decorated for Mothers' day. In one corner sat a motherly-looking lady in black with an opened box of flowers on her lap.

The growers of bedding plants are making extensive preparations for a heavy demand in a few weeks. Beard

New Factory of Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., Osborn, Ind.

Bros. are filling baskets by the hundreds, to be ready when the season opens.

Carey the Flowerman recently had both his delivery cars repainted, so that they look trim.

Every store had some suggestion of Mothers' day in the window and a co-operative ad was run in all the newspapers, with good results.

S. S. Skidelsky was a recent visitor, as was Martin Reukauf.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Preparations for Fall Show.

At the last monthly meeting of the Minneapolis Florists' Club it was voted to hold a show in the fall at the West hotel. The flower show committee, composed of Chairman C. F. Rice, W. D. Desmond, Walter Pier, R. A. Latham and Theo. Wirth, was authorized to go ahead and make full arrangements. It was decided to increase the committee to seven and the chairman was instructed to appoint the other two members. He appointed Hugh S. Will and C. N. Ruedlinger. President J. G. Taylor will act as the eighth member, ex officio.

At the first meeting of the flower show committee, held at Rice Bros., the following chairmen of committees were appointed and each chairman was given the privilege of selecting his own members: Finance committee, Walter Pier; premium committee, Hugh S. Will, W. D. Desmond and R. A. Latham; exhibition and hall, Theo. Wirth; trade exhibits, W. D. Desmond; decoration, R. A. Latham; admission, C. N. Ruedlinger; publicity, J. G. Taylor; entertainment, C. F. Rice. Mr. Wirth will cooperate with the premium committee in planning the exhibits.

Minneapolis to San Francisco.

A special train for the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco will leave Chicago from the new passenger terminal, at Canal and Madison streets, about 10 p. m., Thursday, August 12. The route lies over the Chicago & North Western to Omaha, Union Pacific to Denver, Denver & Rio Grande to Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden, and Southern Pacific to San Francisco.

The schedule is most conveniently arranged. Many interesting scenic and historic places will be passed in the daytime and the arrival at San Francisco will be in the evening of August 16, affording ample time to secure hotel accommodations before the opening of the convention on the next day. Plans are already under way for stop-overs and special entertainment en route.

A low round-trip fare of $62.50 from Chicago is in effect daily until November 30, with a return limit of three months from date of sale, but not to exceed December 31, 1915. Choice of routes returning is offered.

Various Notes.

Cal Rice and O. H. Carlson came back from a trout trip with forty-five trout. They distributed all those they did not catch and all the florists thanked them for their offer and enjoyed them greatly.

W. D. Desmond made a recent trip to Chicago to get supplies for the greenhouse and flower departments of L. S. Donaldson Co.

The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, has opened a store at the corner of Seventh street and Hennepin avenue and is doing a good business. The stock includes a fine lot of spring bedding plants.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Mothers' day, decreased shipments and favorable weather combined to make last week's close encouraging, although no notable advance in prices, apart from white carnations, can be recorded. White carnations of course were sold out early; many were shipped to adjoining towns. The education of the general public to use other flowers must continue, before the celebration of Mothers' day becomes what it should be, one of the best days for florists in all the year. Retail florists generally made special efforts in window decoration.

Shipments of the leading cut flowers are much less than a week ago. All roses are steady and cleaning up fairly well without sacrifice. Not so many carnations are arriving and quality generally is deteriorating, owing to the hot spell of a week ago. The orchid supply continues sufficient to meet all demands and prices are steady. A few of the selected flowers have touched 50 cents, but the average top was 35 cents and the bottom figures, fortunately, were not so low that the street merchants could offer them. The same cannot be said of gardenias, for the street men have them, as well as valley, at every corner. Lilies have held at the late quotations, the best touching $6 per hundred, owing doubtless to lighter shipments. Valley is lower, and must now compete with the outdoor offerings. Lilac was abundant last week, immense receipts accumulating and prices falling as the local supply increased. Of tulips, sweet peas, gladioli, pansies and stocks there is "an elegant sufficiency."

A big Memorial day business is expected and the plant growers are ready for the anticipated demand. The plant auctions will continue until July and special sales of bedding plants will be held before Memorial day.

Club Meeting.

An unusually interesting meeting of the Florists' Club took place May 10, when over 100 members were present and the club had as its guests Miss Anna Jarvis, the originator of Mothers' day, and E. H. Wilson, the Chinese explorer. Miss Jarvis gave an address, dwelling on her years of devotion and the efforts she has made to establish Mothers' day as a world movement, emphasizing the choice of the white carnation as indicative of the purity of the mother life. She said the white carnation was an international flower and the society she represents desires its continuance as the emblem of Mothers' day. She said the creation of interest in New York had not been encouraging and that in Buffalo Mothers' day is called Narcissus day, in Washington, Cornflower day, and in Chicago "any kind of flower would do." Miss Jarvis made an eloquent plea to the club for its support and was loudly cheered at the close of her address.

Mr. Wilson gave an excellent illustrated lecture on his travels and interesting addresses were made by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, R. Vincent, Jr., T. A. Havemeyer and others.

President Bunyard appointed as the flower show committee Messrs. Traendly, Duckham, Miller, Atkins, F. R. Pierson, Young, Stumpp, Roehrs and W. R. Pierson.

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; John Everitt, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Robert G. Caldwell, Flushing, L. I., and Louis A. Noe, Madison, N. J., were elected to membership. T. A. Havemeyer, Wm. T. Rodman, H. E. Meughan, B. Irwin and Peter Gailard were proposed.

J. B. Nugent and A. J. Guttman spoke of the treatment of florists by the elevated and subway officials, whereby packages containing cut flowers or plants are barred from all trains. A strong protest to the officials by a committee from the club was suggested.

Resolutions on the deaths of Mrs. Nugent, Dorothy Gunther, Simon Rodh and John Niquet were read by Messrs. Sheridan, Pepper and Shaw and spread on the minutes.

The exhibits were numerous and excellent. S. J. Batchelor, Mamaroneck, showed Carnation Baroness de Brenner, scoring 86 points. Max Schling showed forget-me-not and Darwin tulips; A. N. Pierson, Inc., a large assortment of stock; John Birnie, a fine lot of bedding plants; Charles Hunt, of Staten Island, pansies; Charles Schineg, of Elmhurst, Reider's strain of bellis.

During the afternoon seven committees, the bowlers and the dahlia growers held meetings.

The Bronx Show.

The flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York, in the Museum building at the New York Botanical Garden, May 8 and 9, was an interesting affair. The attendance was large, especially on Sunday, and George V. Nash had a large audience for his stereopticon lecture on "Flowers for the Spring Garden." Of special excellence were the calceolarias from James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable, of Mamaroneck; James Duane, gardener for George D. Barron, of Rye, and John Mellis, gardener for L. C. Tiffany, of Oyster Bay. P. W. Popp also made a fine display of herbaceous stock, bulbous flowers, pelargoniums, calceolarias, etc. Samuel Batchelor, gardener for F. C. Littleton, showed some extremely large blooms of his new pink carnation, Baroness de Brenner.

Various Notes.

The spirits of the trade have been depressed by the latest tragedy, the sinking of the Lusitania, which transcends all the horrors of this infernal conflict. Many of the patrons of the leading retailers are among the 1,200 who lost their lives.

H. A. Siebrecht, Sr., of New Rochelle, who recently returned from San Francisco, says there is no place like California, and his description of its climate and the beauties of the great exposition are entrancing. According to Mr. Siebrecht, the twenty-five New Yorkers who attend the S. A. F. convention will have no reason to regret their journey.

The memorial services for Karl Bitter, at the hall of the Ethical Culture Society, last week were rendered more impressive and beautiful by the massive decorative floral panels, the work of Max Schling, and by the artistic groupings of the designs and palms.

Alfred Kottmiller, 426 Madison avenue, has opened a branch store in the Vanderbilt hotel.

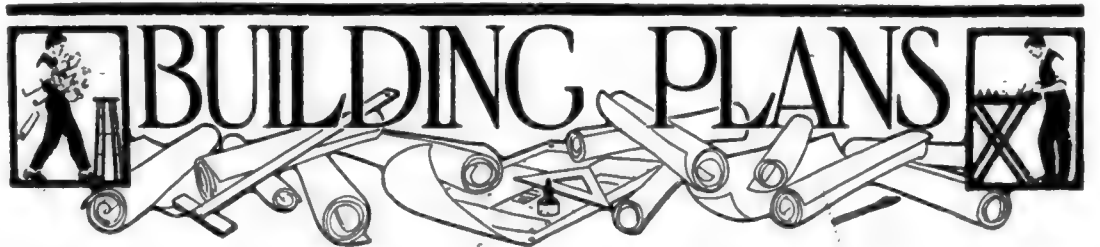

Paul Erber, of Murray Hill, N. J., is shipping excellent Radiance and Shawyer roses to Badgley, Riedel & Meyer.

A. L. Miller, of Jamaica, celebrated his fiftieth birthday May 1. Among the guests at the feast were Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Traendly and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schenck. J. Austin Shaw.

When the American steamer Greenbrier sank in the North Sea as the result of striking a mine a large cargo of miscellaneous German products, from Bremen to New York, was lost. Among the florists' supplies that went down were ten cases consigned to the New York Florists' Supply Co.

The Madison Floral Co. has leased a store in the building at the southeast corner of Madison avenue and Thirty-third street.

John B. Nugent, Jr., Charles H. Brown and M. A. Bowe appeared before the public service commissioners May 5 in behalf of the New York Florists' Club, to protest against the restrictions made by the Interborough and B. R. T. lines on passengers carrying packages. Delivery boys carrying small packages of flowers have been barred from the cars by employees of the roads.

Springfield, Mass.—Robert C. Bath, of 641 Riverdale street, has obtained a permit to build a greenhouse at an estimated cost of $600.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Another greenhouse, 20x100 feet, will be added by the Royal Poinciana Nursery Co. shortly. Palms of various kinds are this concern's specialty.

Kankakee, Ill.—A range of vegetable houses is being erected by the D. F. Harrison Co. The order for twenty-five ventilating machines for the houses has been booked by the John A. Evans Co., of Richmond, Ind.

Lima, O.—An addition to his range to cost $25,000 is planned by Rolf Zetlitz for the coming summer. The town council has granted his petition for the vacation of the alley leading from the Spencerville road to Wales avenue. He will therefore be able to connect the new range with the old houses.

Fairfield, Ia.—Operations are progressing steadily on the service building that is being built at the range of E. H. Montgomery for the greenhouse that is to be erected by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, early in June. Mr. Montgomery has installed a Herrick display refrigerator, and is putting in a number of improvements this spring.

New Carlisle, O.—Charles Taynor is adding another house to meet the increasing demand for plants.

Ottawa, Ill.—The Davis & Steiner Co. is adding a 900-foot house, in which will be used the Challenge ventilating machine of the John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

Conneaut, O.—L. A. Eaton & Son have purchased the greenhouse formerly used by Arthur Venen, on State street. They will rebuild it at their range on Center street. The structure is 18x65 feet.

Wilmington, Del.—M. F. Hayden is adding a greenhouse for roses at his range on Newport pike. The construction is being done by the King Construction Co., of North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Moorhead, Minn.—As soon as the Northern Pacific Railway Co. ratifies the lease by the city of Moorhead of part of Stodder park, at the corner of Front and Eighth streets, J. W. Briggs will commence the erection of a greenhouse on the land. The railroad has allowed the city the use of the land for a park, and will ratify the lease, as Mr. Briggs will plant flowers and shrubbery on that part of the area not covered by the greenhouse.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business the first half of last week was slow, but it began to brighten up Thursday, May 6, and increased to a good trade Saturday, May 8. The huge glut of carnations which we had the week before did not last long; last week there was a decided falling off in supply and by Mothers' day prices were considerably advanced. The supply was none too large for the extra demand. The quality was good throughout.

The demand for roses has not been up to the standard, counter trade having fallen off considerably. There has been little funeral work, and some stock has begun to hang. The supply of jonquils is fair and they sell well. Outdoor stock, such as tulips and poeticus narcissi, does not sell readily. Sweet peas are improving during the cooler weather and sell well. Snapdragons meet with ready sale. Easter lilies are not so plentiful, nor is their quality so good as usual. Valley is of good quality, but does not sell briskly. The demand for orchids is slim. Daisies, forget-me-nots and baby's breath are used in basket work.

Various Notes.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive window display last week. It was a large bed of myosotis, with a center arrangement of pink snapdragons. Small colonial bouquets, a dozen or more in number, were placed in the corners of the window. Large Dorothy Perkins ramblers were in the background.

William Gallentyne, of Greece, N. Y., is kept so busy this spring making large daily shipments of cut flowers that he is not growing any bedding stock.

Jacob Thomann & Sons report quite satisfactory business for the time of year. Their bedding stock is selling well, although it is early yet.

Visitors last week were Saul M. Rosenfeld, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; R. De Jonge, of Schortinghuis & De Jonge, Boskoop, Holland; R. Greup, of Ottolander & Hooftman, Boskoop, Holland, and J. T. Stiles, representing Wm. B. Lake, Philadelphia.

Congratulations are due Mr. and Mrs. Douglas M. White on the birth of a baby girl, Wednesday, May 5. Both Mrs. White and baby are doing finely.

Arthur W. Elder has started on a business trip in western Pennsylvania.

Wm. Peartree, of Geo. T. Boucher, has been on the sick-list for about three weeks with a bad knee and is not yet able to leave his home.

Harry E. Bates, of Lord & Burnham Co., left Tuesday, May 11, for western Virginia for one to two weeks on a business trip.

The Rochester Florists' Association is receiving a large amount of publicity from the local newspapers. A large advertisement for Mothers' day by the association brought good returns.

J. B. Keller Sons had an attractive window decoration May 8. A figure representing an elderly lady with gray hair stood in the window, with a bouquet of carnations at her side, from which she was selecting a bloom. A simple card, "Mothers' Day Tomorrow," completed the arrangement.

C. H. Vick, of James Vick's Sons, has offered to supply free all of the seeds necessary to make the old Carroll-Fitzhugh race a new beauty spot in Rochester. H. J. H.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

There has been a continual rush of business in bedding plants in the last three weeks and all agree that there has never before been so good a demand for this stock as this spring. We had a good, heavy rain in the latter part of the week, the first soaking rain we have had in months, and everyone is feeling better. As a result there is a renewed demand for vegetable plants and seeds. It looks as though everyone would be cleaned out of everything that is really salable in another week. Cut flowers are in large supply and, now that the peonies are in, there is sure to be a good business with the dump heap. Yet all agree that there is the usual volume of business; there is merely an oversupply of flowers. Peonies are more plentiful this season than for several years and the quality is good. They are selling better than almost any other flowers just now.

Mothers' day assumed the aspect of a real flower day this year. Almost all of the churches had special services and many people celebrated the day as a home-going day—a sort of family reunion. Most of the children so celebrating the day took their mother either a bouquet of flowers or a plant. Why is this not a feature of Mothers' day that can be profitably agitated? It is safe to say that there has never before been anything like so good a business for this occasion as this year.

Commencements begin in a week, and as there are forty odd schools and colleges here, besides the public schools, this means a heavy business for the next month.

Various Notes.

The writer saw the first field of sweet peas in full bloom here last week. It was an amateur's garden, but there must have been a quarter of an acre and it was a blaze of bloom. It is unusual for peas to be in bloom here so early in the season as this.

Geny Bros. report that they have had the heaviest plant business this season that they have ever had, and that the cut flower business has been fairly good.

The Joys are continuing their sale of dormant roses. They say that they have had as heavy a demand for cannas as in many years. They have lately had a good cut of fine stocks, which are rather a new feature here, and they have sold well.

McIntyre Bros. had a unique window last week, showing a miniature house, in front of which was a border of salvia, while on the faultless lawn were two beds of cannas and coleus. The suggestion was timely and their sales of bedding plants proved that it drew.

J. F. Corbitt is still doing a heavy business in plants, selling mostly at wholesale, though his retail business has been better this year than last.

One feature of the spring plant business that is generally noted is the larger percentage of high-grade plants, which are being sold at higher prices than usual. For instance, salvias have been selling readily at 75 cents and $1 a dozen, while there has been less demand for the 50-cent size. F. B.

Mainly About People

Des Moines, Ia.—H. E. Lozier has purchased the building at 521 East Locust street. It is a 3-story building, 20x110 feet. The purchase price was about $14,000.

Alma, Mich.—Mrs. Francis King's book on "The Well Considered Garden" has just been published by Charles Scribner's Sons. It is a valuable study for the amateur, and contains a preface by Gertrude Jekyll, the English writer on gardening.

Stillwater, Okla.—Christian Jensen, campus florist and greenhouse superintendent of the Oklahoma A. & M. College, is preparing a landscape plan for the court house grounds and streets of Madill, Okla. He has been retained by the officials of that city for advice in its work of civic improvement.

Freeport, Ill.—Louis Bauscher, since 1909 secretary and general manager of the Freeport Floral Co., has tendered his resignation. He will be succeeded here by Adolph Pitterle, of Madison, Wis., who was at one time employed by the company. Mr. Bauscher, son of one of Freeport's pioneer gardeners and himself a veteran in that business, is one of the city's best known citizens.

Mobile, Ala.—At its annual meeting here the Gulf Coast Horticultural Society elected as directors for the coming year George L. Kittle and H. P. Loding, both members of the local trade.

Washington, N. J.—Nearly a quarter of a page in the industrial booster edition of the Warren Tidings, May 5, was devoted to an account of the business of Alonzo J. Bryan. Mr. Bryan bought his present property in 1905, and now has 134 acres and 40,000 feet of glass in flowers and plants. He recently tapped a mountain spring in the rear of his establishment and piped the water to his establishment, obtaining a higher than 70-pound water pressure.

Hillsdale, Mich.—The New York Central road has appointed W. A. Hagenberger, gardener for the road east of Toledo, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Carl Hirsch, head of the division from Toledo to Chicago. Mr. Hagenberger has his headquarters at Mentor, O. He will retain his old duties and assume those of the new position in addition. Mrs. Hirsch has the contract for supplying the plants for the Toledo-Chicago division. A local assistant may be appointed later.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

The demand for flowers for Mothers' day, while not assuming any extraordinary proportions, was a welcome break in the overstocked condition of the market which has prevailed for some time. White carnations, of course, were in the best demand, with pink as next choice. Roses, lilies and carnations formed the bulk of the available supply. White carnations were bought up entirely at $5 per hundred; colored ones sold at $2 and $3 per hundred. Roses did not bring any fancy prices, although the wholesale stores were able to clean out at fair prices. In the early part of the week business was flat, but is picked up on Friday and Saturday.

Mothers' day was advertised by the florists as a body. Small cards announcing the day were used on all plants and cut flowers sent out during the previous week. Larger display cards were used in all the stores, in addition to an ad in every newspaper published in this city, starting Thursday evening and ending on Saturday morning. A number of stores devoted their show windows to appropriate decorations, calling the public's attention to the day.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 10. The attendance was good and President Hamilton occupied the chair. The committee on resolutions on the death of the son of Treasurer F. G. Burger submitted a report, which was ordered put on the minutes. Charles Klutch was present and is desirous of forming a bowling team among the club members to enter a tournament to be held May 17 to June 4. Anyone wishing to join can secure full information by applying to Mr. Klutch.

The question of "How was Mothers' day business compared with last year's business?" was responded to by many and it was the consensus of opinion that business was ahead of last year by a wide margin. Many reported a good demand for flowers other than white carnations, showing the results of advertising and trying to push flowers in general.

Many of those present did not understand why it was necessary to call two assessments at one time. For the benefit of those who were absent, the following is the reason: The benefit fund was up to the required amount for one death benefit payment, but the following members having died recently makes it necessary to call two assessments at one time: John Geary, Jas. Shortt, W. W. Burger.

Various Notes.

Chas. H. Cook, of Catonsville, has converted his touring car into an auto truck for use between his greenhouses and the markets.

L. Kreuder, of Pierce & Co., paid a flying visit to Philadelphia in the early part of last week.

Samuel Feast & Sons had a most attractive Mothers' day window all through the week.

E. A. Seidewitz, Halliday Bros., Samuel Feast & Sons, J. J. Cummings and James Hamilton united in getting up a most attractive Mothers' day ad and published it in one of the daily papers, in addition to the ads the club was running at the same time.

L. L. Lancaster, formerly of this city but more recently of Edgely, Pa., was a visitor here last week. W. F. E.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

Mothers' day certainly demonstrated that there is almost no limit to the fluctuation in prices. In the course of a week prices advanced beyond all expectations, and from a glut there came a change to a real shortage. The demand for stock for Mothers' day seems to be increasing every year and it will not be long until this day will have to be reckoned with just as much as any holiday. White carnations are in greatest demand, but more and more of other flowers and plants are sold each year, as the public comes to realize that it is the color and not the variety which contains the appropriate sentiment. There is no doubt that collective advertising pays, because a few well placed ads, keeping the holiday before the ultimate consumer, greatly increases the desire to have flowers for the occasion.

The weather has been a great deal colder and the sun has been conspicuous by its absence. This decreased the supply of stock and thus caused what appeared to the public to be a real hardship, as they had been buying flowers for next to nothing. Roses were in fine shape and the supply was fairly large, although many orders were cut to some extent. The prices were quite reasonable, considering the lessening of the supply and the excellent quality of the stock. Carnations were scarce. A week previously they were offered as low as $7.50 per thousand and were hard to move at that price. Conditions changed quickly, so that white carnations brought as high as $8 per hundred, and all of this stock was cleaned up as soon as brought into the market. Stock will not be as plentiful again as it has been this spring, if present indications are any criterion as to the future supply.

Sweet peas are not nearly so plentiful as they have been and their season will be over before they have another chance to be overplentiful. They have been fine this year and the butterfly sorts are still in excellent shape. Peonies have made their appearance on the market and they look well. The bright, warm spell brought them in considerably ahead of time, but if the weather does not get extremely hot, they should be in fine shape for Memorial day. Valley is good and is moving readily. Lilies are also being sold to good advantage.

Various Notes.

William Lubliner, who opened a store in Chicago some little time ago, was in Milwaukee Sunday and Monday, May 2 and 3.

Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., visited this city May 7 and 8. He has been ill for some time, but is his own cheery self again, and although a little pale, he seems to have entirely recovered.

J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., was in town last week and his happy smile was right on tap. His many friends are always glad to welcome him, orders or no orders.

F. Rhodes, of Hartford, Wis., was a visitor last week. H. J. S.

PITTSBURGH.The Market.

Pittsburgh has had much cooler weather, part of it dark, which shortened up stock considerably; then came Mothers' day, with its demand for carnations and cheaper roses, with the natural result that there was not nearly enough stock to go around. Mothers' day is certainly developing into a real flower day. It gets better each year. There are no large sales among the retailers, but the number of small sales is wonderful, showing what developments are brought about by advertising. One of our retailers sent out 10,000 Mothers' day circulars and he says he got the results. The newspapers also helped somewhat and Mothers' day used up all the cheaper flowers that were in the market. The street boys were selling the small artificial carnations on the street at 5 cents each. Some of the florists made up windows full of small tumbler baskets of flowers, selling them at $2 and up. All in all, Mothers' day is a great day.

Outdoor lilacs are done and snowballs are almost white. The early Japanese peonies are in bloom and the early tulips are nearly done. If we had a little more rain this would be an ideal May.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club had a splendid meeting last week. The lecture and pictures were fine and a few good specimen plants, among them pink hydrangeas from D. T. Watson's gardens and a Cattleya Mossiae with an immense lot of blooms from the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., attracted much attention. The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. sent fine cut blooms of the Mrs. Shawyer rose.

W. C. Beckert, the seedsman, has a busy place just now, for it seems that our greatest population is in the suburbs and all are making gardens.

The plantmen are busy getting out porch boxes, which seem to grow more in favor each year, and people are crowding them with orders to make deliveries at once. Clarke.

The writer received a telephone call last Sunday, May 9, after sundown, from Brother Frishkorn. We all know August, but few of us know of his beautiful home at Ben Avon, located in the foothills just above the Allegheny river, about six miles west of Pittsburgh. Not knowing the nature of the call, I thought best to take with me an escort, my wife. As we have just taken up a home in that suburb not far from our host, we were soon there. A block away, I saw a splash of color such as mine eyes had never gazed upon; it was not difficult to single out August's home, for only a florist, seedsman or professional gardener could attempt such a lavish display of one kind of flowers, Darwin tulips, in such a mass that it really is beyond description. Here Mr. Frishkorn spends his leisure time fondling these pets and keeping tab on the production. One hundred and thirty distinct varieties were here in bloom, a wonderful sight indeed.

T. P. Langhans.

MONTGOMERY on Grafted Roses, sent by The Review for 25 cents.

HAIL STORMS

Salem, O.—About 100 lights were broken in the greenhouses of William Mundy, west of the city, by the hail storm Monday evening, May 3. The loss in glass and damaged plants is estimated at $150. Other ranges were not damaged so much.

Sedalia, Mo.—The hail storm of Sunday, May 2, caused a loss of over 10,000 panes of glass at the range of the Archias Floral Co. The company considers itself lucky that its range was only on the edge of the storm; the damage elsewhere was great, to orchards, crops and buildings.

HAIL AT NEW ALBANY, IND.

A severe hail storm passed over New Albany, Ind., and part of Louisville, Ky., Sunday, May 2, at 4 p. m., breaking considerable glass and doing damage to outdoor stock.

At New Albany, J. G. Bettman & Sons lost about 600 square feet of glass, J. D. Bettman about 800, Swift Bros. about 400, Louis Gueltig 300 and A. Rasmussen 5,800. The C. H. Kunzman Estate, in Louisville, lost about 1,450 square feet. The storm came in two distinct showers, about an hour apart. The first storm did the damage in Louisville, and the second in New Albany. After the first storm, Mr. Rasmussen, who is a director of the Florists' Hail Association, was called over the phone to come to the Kunzman Estate, in Louisville, to ascertain the loss there, and while he was there the second storm broke, which damaged the glass in New Albany. The Kunzman Estate and Mr. Rasmussen's place are about two miles apart.

The storm seems to have been most severe in Louisville, as the glass there had nearly all broken through, while in New Albany the largest part of the damage was in cracked lights, which, while bad, at least did no considerable damage to the stock in the houses.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Mothers' day was more generally observed in this city and vicinity than ever before. As a consequence, carnations were at a premium and all other flowers sold well. The demand was active and the well-dressed man, woman or child without a flower Sunday was the noticeable exception. Design work continues brisk and plants and shrubs for outdoor planting are in great demand. Indications are favorable and promising for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

The son of Joseph Koppelman, aged 4, fell from a haymow and fractured his skull a few days ago, but is improving at his home in East Providence.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held at the rooms in Swarts hall, 96 Westminster street, May 24.

Olney Williams, whose Easter plants were late, is cutting thousands of Easter lilies, which are mainly shipped to Boston. He also is supplying the market with other stock of excellent quality.

Joseph Norris, of Little Compton, is receiving congratulations on the recent arrival of a son. Mr. Norris is superintendent of the Watch House estate.

A large importation of boxwoods and evergreens from Holland was received last week by Macnair, of the Sunshine Shop.

Henry Groth, landscape gardener at Warren's Point, Little Compton, with his assistants, is engaged in setting out thousands of plants on the various estates in his charge.

Thomas Kennedy, of Pascoag, who has been confined to his house by an attack of grip, is out again.

George E. Lindeman, formerly with Cob, Bates & Yerxa Co., was in the city last week. He has started in the retail business for himself at 1137 Pleasant street, Fall River.

H. A. Burlingame has two large houses off Fruit Hill avenue, from which he has been cutting large quantities of sweet peas, now planted to cucumbers.

William H. Tarbox, of West Greenwich, has just received a large assortment of new varieties of dahlias, mostly cactus, from Europe. He says it is the largest importation he has made during his thirty years of dahlia growing.

W. H. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

John T. Ingram, Oyster Bay, L. I., has added four superintendents of estates to his executive force, owing to the big increase in his landscape department. His new place at Syosset is gradually getting into shape and will be quite an important branch.

William Eccles, of the Mortimer L. Schiff greenhouses, Oyster Bay, has one house, 50x100 feet, devoted to nectarines, the fruit of which has found a ready sale at Manhattan hotels at 50 cents apiece. Some specimens sold for $1 each. Oyster Bay is the home of some wonderful products of nature.

J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., forces large numbers of Spanish iris, for which his place is recognized as headquarters, and he found them his most profitable crop this season.

Arthur Cockcroft, Northport, had a fine crop of carnations for Mothers' day.

Theo. Polbos, Sea Cliff, and Henry Matz, Glen Cove, L. I., have a large share of north shore business, all they can handle in the busy season.

L. Krause, Mineola, L. I., will remove as early as possible to Hempstead, L. I., owing to the rapid rise in real estate at Mineola, which makes it impossible to continue the greenhouses there.

J. A. Finger, Hicksville, L. I., reports an extraordinary demand for the dahlia and predicts success for the society just formed in its interests.

Charles Weber, Lynbrook, L. I., has returns showing that Carnation Laura Weber has brought about the highest figure in the wholesale market this season.

Superintendent Hendrickson, at Flowerfield, L. I., says they will keep open house during the flowering season of gladioli. Everybody welcome.

C. F. Ankers, Rockville Center, N. Y., has been appointed town assessor. Meanwhile the business will be ably managed by Mrs. Ankers, an acknowledged floral artist.

OBITUARY

Joseph Walter Cragg.

Joseph Walter Cragg, of Irondequoit, N. Y., died Sunday, May 9, at the age of 44. Born and educated in Clyde, N. Y., he as a young man went west, and after a while became engaged as a glass cutter and eventually married. Later, his health gave way, and he with his wife came back east. He became the partner of Frank A. Purrsell, doing business under the name of the Purrsell & Cragg Co., and for about six years he and his partner were quite successful in rose growing.

Two years ago his health began to fail, and about three weeks ago he was obliged to take to his bed with a hard case of progressive anemia. His end came peaceably on Mothers' day. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Virginia and Josephine; two sons, Robert and James; his mother, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles S. Owen and Mrs. George B. Hart.

The funeral took place Tuesday, May 11, many of the local florists attending. Among the many beautiful floral emblems were those sent by the Rochester Lady Florists' Auxiliary, the Rochester Florists' Association and several individual florists.

H. J. H.

Charles E. Wadsworth.

Charles E. Wadsworth, 46 years old, who had been in the florists' business on Bridge street, Brooklyn, N. Y., for the last twenty years, died May 4 from a complication of diseases, at his residence, 197 Bridge street. He was a member of the Sewanaka Democratic Club of the Second Assembly district, and of St. Michael's P. E. church. The funeral was at the residence May 6. Interment was at Newburgh, N. Y., where Mr. Wadsworth was born.

Harry Rodenbaugh.

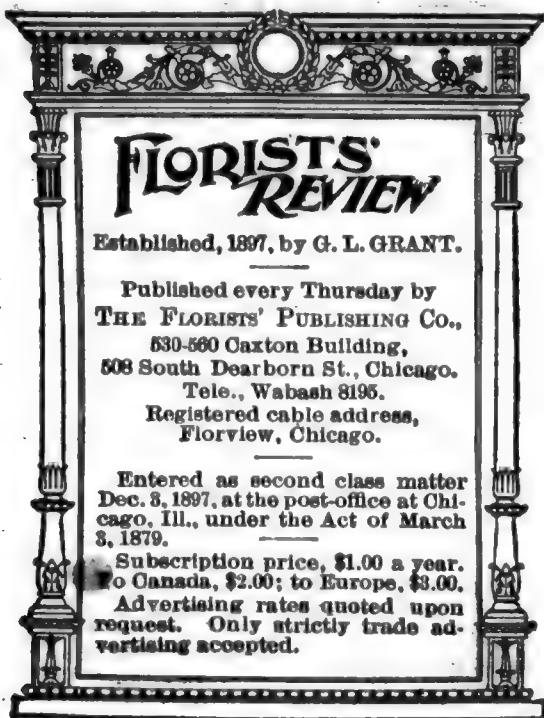

Harry Rodenbaugh, for four years in the employ of Mrs. M. A. Seaman, who conducts a flower store in Merchantsville, Camden, N. J., committed suicide by hanging himself in the shop May 6. Norristown, Pa.; is given as his home town.

E. T. Cook.

E. T. Cook, F. R. H. S., landscape artist and prominent in Toronto, Can., horticultural circles, died Thursday, May 6, of heart failure. Mr. Cook's books were well known in England, from which country he came in 1913.

East St. Louis, Ill.—August Mirring has added a second delivery automobile. He says he keeps one busy delivering in St. Louis and the other in East St. Louis.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Higley Floral Co. was sold by the bankruptcy court to H. W. Johnson and G. A. Kimmell, both at Chattanooga. Mr. Johnson has been conducting a flower store at 11 East Eighth street, and Mr. Kimmell has been manager of the greenhouses of the Forest Hills cemetery for the last two years. The firm will be known as the Johnson Floral Co. and will continue the store at 11 East Eighth street. In addition to carrying cut flowers and plants, the concern will engage in landscape work.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

LET the seller ask himself, "Is it good?" Never add "enough."

SNAPDRAGON as a cut flower has not sold so well this season as last, but, for that matter, what flower has?

FLORISTS who have trouble with root-knot will find of value the recent bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture on "The Control of Root-knot."

BEYOND question, the highest of the many compliments that have been paid the efficiency of Classified Ad Section of The Review is to be found in the number of publications that have attempted to imitate the department.

THERE is much complaint from peony growers just south of the Ohio river that the buds are blasted; most of the growers say they will not get more than half a crop of flowers. The trouble is laid to climatic conditions.

THE unqualified success of Mothers' day should inspire the trade with fresh enthusiasm for Memorial day. May 30 can be made to produce a new record again this year, but it is up to the retail department of the trade to do it.

ACCORDING to those who make a business of growing young stock for the trade, Richmond rose is being planted far less numerously this year than previously. Propagators who are well cleaned out of other varieties report considerable surplus of Richmond plants. Hadley also has failed to sell, but this was not unexpected.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Vorkeller, Charles, South Bethlehem, Pa.
Krebs, H. E. & C. W., Cedar Rapids, Ia.
Sinclair, M., Highland Park, Ill.

TWO YEARS.

Lewis, E. H., Dunkirk, O.
Reichert, A. J., Buffalo, N. Y.
Catanese, W. H., Norristown, Pa.
Schultz, Paul E., Vincennes, Ind.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

MOTHERS' DAY STILL GROWING.

Mothers' day made another fine growth this year; indeed, conditions were such that in a good many places it was impossible to supply all the flowers that were called for. Had it not been for the vagaries of the weather the business would have been much greater than it was. Where cold weather followed high heat, crops were checked to the point where flowers that had been a glut turned positively scarce. It was not favorable to the success of the day in its broader aspects—the event is not yet firmly enough established as a special flower day—a plentiful supply and moderate prices are to be wished.

But it is quite plain Mothers' day still is increasing in importance to the trade. It counted this year with florists with whom it never before has counted, because hundreds who heretofore had done nothing to help the day along, this season put their shoulders to the wheel with the pioneers. It was advertising that did it.

BIG CROPS AGAIN IN SIGHT.

The prosperity of the trade in the west seems again to be assured by the government crop report issued last week. With a big yield of wheat and a certainty of prices above the average, florists in the middle west may fairly feel sure of another good year.

The condition of winter wheat May 1 was 92.9, as against 88.8 a month ago. The abandonment was only 2.7 per cent, as against 3.1 per cent last year, and in acreage was 1,094,000, against 1,119,000. The government estimates the winter wheat crop at 693,000,000 bushels, as compared with 619,000,000 bushels unofficially estimated by the Department of Agriculture a month ago. The crop harvested in 1914 was 685,000,000 bushels.

If the present promise is maintained, that is, allowing for an average season of crop and weather conditions, it will require but 198,000,000 bushels of spring wheat to make a total crop equal to last year's. The 1914 spring wheat crop was only 206,000,000 bushels, as against 240,000,000 in 1913 and the record crop of 330,000,000 in 1912. But spring wheat sowing is farther advanced than last year and the acreage will be larger, while soil and moisture conditions are all that can be desired, so that it will require serious conditions of drought or plant disease to bring spring wheat crop prospects below those of last year. In other words, the outlook is for a record-breaking wheat crop in the United States in 1915.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, May 12, 1915:

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Generally fair weather is indicated during the week, except that local showers are indicated early in the week over the extreme northwest. Temperatures will be moderate, with a rise Wednesday over the extreme northwest.

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Showers Wednesday will be followed by generally fair weather during the remainder of the week, without temperature changes of consequence.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—The weather will be unsettled Wednesday over the eastern portion, but probably without rain of much consequence, and generally fair weather is indicated during the week, with seasonable temperatures.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—There will be rain Wednesday in the South Atlantic states, but otherwise, fair weather will prevail during the week. Temperatures will rise Thursday and will be about normal thereafter.

For the West Gulf States—There are no present indications of rain of consequence during the week, and temperatures will be seasonable.

EAST OR WEST.

East or west, it's all the same; the trade uses The Review as its buying directory. As was said by Clarence L. Spahr, Tarentum, Pa., "Anything I need I can find among Review advertisers." This is the other side of the story:

We have more orders for salvia than we can fill.—Simanton & Pence, Falls City, Neb., May 2, 1915.

I received orders from as far west as Salt Lake City and as far south as Birmingham, Ala., as the result of a classified ad in The Review.—H. F. Gilbert, April 25, 1915.

I thank you for such good results as The Review gives; it cleaned up all my surplus stock. I found the trade obtained through The Review very honest people to deal with and I hope that when I get my new house done I shall be in a position to become a regular advertiser in The Review.—Charles Taynor, New Carlisle, O., May 5, 1915.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Mothers' day was an unqualified success from every point of view. Carnations cleared with a rapidity that was amazing. Most of them sold for the regularly quoted Mothers' day prices, but in some instances belated buyers were compelled to go the round of the entire market to get the desired quantity, and in their dire need offered much more than the market price. In some cases they got what they wanted and paid accordingly. The demand for white carnations was so much greater than for colored, and the supply of the former was so much too short that several wholesalers stipulated in filling orders that the buyer would have to take two colored carnations to one white. Roses were second only in demand to carnations.

Beauties That Will Make You a Profit

 It is not often you are able to get such fine Beauties as our present crop. Cut from plants benched last fall and grown cool all winter for a spring supply. We offer all lengths. Try some today—you will make good money on them.

NOVELTY ROSES

Your sales will advertise you if you use our Novelty Roses: Russell, Milady, Sunburst and Killarney Brilliant. These are specially fine just now and the supply is so large you can get them at prices below what you would expect to pay for such fine stock. Also we have a good cut of Ward, Richmond, etc.

CARNATIONS

Remember, we always have the largest supply of strictly fancy carnations in the west. And two of our largest growers are in full crop just at a time when nearly all growers are off. We can take care of your orders, now and for Memorial Day.

SWEET PEAS

Spring-blooming Spencer varieties and the quality is all you could ask; much better than the run out winter-bloomers generally seen on the market.

SNAPDRAGONS

You will find them ready sellers, especially the pink. They are splendid for decorations, in home or window.

You will find no finer Lilies, Daisies, Stocks, Mignonette, etc. We offer a large supply. Peonies are ready; shall soon have a big supply.

FANCY VALLEY ALWAYS ON HAND

We handle the Chicago Market Brand Valley exclusively. There is none better. A never-failing supply.

Beauties of good quality were scarce and were taken off the market almost as soon as they appeared. Richmond, also, could not be found in sufficient numbers to satisfy the demand. Valley and sweet peas, especially white, sold well. Mignonette, Spanish iris, stocks and pansies were in only fair demand. The call for Easter lilies was quite indifferent, and that for callas was almost mute. When the Mothers' day rush was over, snapdragons and daisies were numbered among those that did not move so well. All these statements, however, are comparative. Everything moved, but in varying degrees of speed. Greens alone were undisturbed by the general tumult.

The volume of business handled, the number and size of shipments, the rush of telephone and telegraph orders May 6, 7 and 8 was the greatest in the recent history of the trade. It is probable that the local retailers looked for a repetition of the conditions that governed the market Christmas and Easter, when to buy at one's own figure was more the rule than the exception. If so, they were most grievously disappointed. As recently as two weeks ago nothing could be moved at a proper price and stock was an ever increasing burden. Last week almost everything cleared at excellent prices soon after reaching the market and stock was decidedly short. These two effects have their origin in the same cause—the unprecedented heat in April. Then, it forced every half developed bud to open far in advance of its appointed time. Last week, as a result, there were few buds to open. Scarcity always creates a demand. When the public sees any commodity fading from its sight, there is always a clamor. And even if this clamor cannot be altogether satisfied, it is a comforting assurance that the buyer has been galvanized into some sort of action.

The last week has taught its lesson. It has convinced the thinkers that Mothers' day is destined to be the greatest flower day in the calendar. All the interests of the day center in the giving of flowers, not by ones and twos as formerly, but by the box. This

This week the market is even shorter than it was last week, as the growers cut anything and everything to satisfy the insistent call for more. In addition to this, some of the eastern shippers have notified dealers they cannot supply ferns after May 20. This will make it somewhat inconvenient for the Memorial day trade, the ups and downs of the market know that prices are regulated by supply and demand—we know there were not enough flowers in Chicago to meet the demand May 8 and 9 and that the price was limited only by what buyers were willing to pay. But the public does not understand—or does it? At any rate this item appeared in the Tribune May 11:

What I started out to complain about is this Mothers' day business. I am the personification of tenderness to my mother 364 days each year, but I refuse to pay exorbitant prices for white carnations just to advertise the fact. And all the family think I am as mean as pussley. Is it true that the National Lemon Growers' Association is back of a movement for the institution of a Fathers' day? SULKY SUE.

23 and the books of the new corporation will be opened the following day. This is a preliminary step to moving into larger quarters.

With a rush of orders for the funeral of Marion Farwell coming on the afternoon of May 7, to be delivered in Lake Forest next morning, the staff of the E. Wienhoeber Co., 22 Elm street, worked all night to complete four automobile loads of flowers, a total of fifty-five pieces. Then they turned to for the house and church decorations and eleven bouquets for the Vail-Follansbee wedding at Highland Park that evening. With the regular business came some extra orders for Mothers' day, so that all hands were on the go for thirty-six consecutive hours.

A large sign on the building at 131 North Wabash avenue to the effect that John A. Colby & Sons will occupy the entire building after it is remodeled is somewhat misleading. G. M. Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., has gone on his southern and western trip somewhat earlier than anticipated. A. Miller, of the same firm, has started on his trip to the coast.

A guileful florist the other day tried to make Henry Van Gelder, president of Percy Jones, Inc., believe that the progenitors of the German emperor were enshrouded in mist prior to a hundred or so years ago. When Mr. Van Gelder got through with him, the guileful one began to realize that he would have to study up some more if he were to trip the wholesaler on his pet subject.

John Michelsen says he expects to see the market much more heavily supplied at Memorial day than was the case last week, but not so heavily as has been the case in the last two or three years.

Government inspectors made a tour of the market district last week to see that all commission dealers had paid the war tax. June 1 they will again be required to visit the revenue collector's office each with a 20-dollar bill.

Easter was rather better than the average with Mr. Reinberg.

John Mangel has discontinued the operation of his stand in the Marshall Field building.

Although he has been in the market for twenty-one years, Charles Erne says he believes he never has seen the buyers scramble for stock as strenuously as they did on the morning of May 9.

When Henry C. Wullbrandt sold some lots in Austin this spring and had to clear them of stock it afforded Miss Lillian A. Tonner the opportunity to acquire a fine lot of peonies, enough to occupy about all the unused space on the Tonner home grounds west of the city. The removal has been completed.

Walter Adams has Mrs. Adams, an excellent saleslady, as his right-hand man in his store on Rush street.

The A. L. Randall Co., occupying the entire second floor of the Lemoyne block, has taken 4,000 feet of space in the basement of that building and installed there its basket-making and wire-work departments. At the same time its storage department is being installed on the third floor at 72 and 74 East Randolph street, which is under lease for three years. The fifth floor in that building will be vacated.

Harry C. Rowe, who recently gave up his store at 160 North Wabash avenue, has secured desk room in the office of Winterson's Seed Store, where he retains the same telephone number he had while in the old quarters. Mr. Rowe expects to open a retail store in September.

Apropos of Mothers' day, William Lubliner, 36 South Wabash avenue, had a most appropriate window display last week. It was a life-sized figure of an old-fashioned, white haired mother receiving a box of flowers from a uniformed delivery boy. The appeal was strong and few passed the window without a lingering look.

There doubtless are places where competition is keener, but the trade rivalry in the thirty nine hundred block on North Clark street has been active enough to suit almost anyone. There are three well equipped, well kept places within half a block: F. C. Bargholz, at 3916; Clody Flower Shop, at 3924, and George Paulus, at 3950. Mr. Bargholz has been missing since April 12 and the greenhouses are being run by his wife.

CINCINNATI.The Market.

Mothers' day business was good. It served to substantially clean up the market of almost all flowers. White carnations naturally enjoyed the strongest call and receipts were far short of the demand.

May 10 the tone of the market was much better than on any Monday since Easter. Receipts were rather limited and cleaned up readily. The wholesalers are confidently expecting a better market in the future than we have had for some time in the past. Reports indicate we will have a good supply of all seasonable lines from now on and this supply will be able to take care of daily needs and still not glut the market.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports that this year's Mothers' day business was easily the largest he has had since the inception of the celebration. H.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

Mothers' day was the event of the week ending May 12. It came on Sunday, May 9, and its coming was foreshadowed for days in advance. The wholesalers drew on all available sources of supply for miles and miles around to get white carnations. An immense number was secured that brought from $6 to $8 per hundred, just a few $10 per hundred. White Perfection, White Enchantress and Matchless were the leading varieties. Boston Market and Alma Ward brought from $4 to $6 per hundred, while poor whites were sold as low as $2 per hundred. Despite the immense number of white carnations, there were not enough to satisfy the demand, even at the high prices. Colored varieties, when well grown, brought $3 and $4 per hundred. The rest of the market became firmer under the influence of the Mothers' day demand. White roses, particularly the shorter grades, advanced in price. Snapdragon, Easter lilies, callas, gladioli and other showy flowers found a market at fair prices, something that was lacking the week before.

To return to Mothers' day business, many of the wholesale houses report that it was solely local, while others assert that the shipping demand, particularly in the smaller towns, formed a good portion of the business. All the houses agreed that Mothers' day is not a fashionable holiday. The classes do not express their sentiment in this way; the masses do; with them the custom is growing. This is shown by the fact that the chief demand does not come from the stores in the heart of the city, but from the curbstone merchants there, while the stores that do call for flowers for Mothers' day are widely scattered throughout the suburbs. The demand is first for white carnations, then for all other flowers. It is divided among boxes of loose flowers, baskets and flowers for wearing in the street.

Local peonies have made their appearance, Pæonia officinalis, the red variety, first as usual. Smilax is scarce. Spanish iris appears less plentiful; outdoor German iris has come. The long-stemmed, showy gladiolus is arriving in considerable numbers. Outdoor lilac is over except the Persian. Sweet peas are on the back track pending the arrival of new-crop outdoor stock; there still are good peas to be had, but they are less plentiful and are far outnumbered by the poor flowers on short stems.

Taken all in all, while not wholly satisfactory, the market is in better shape than at any time since that unhappy Saturday before Easter.

Roses at Riverton.

Half a dozen years ago J. D. Eisele foresaw that the rapid improvements in the hybrid tea roses and in the number of new varieties would increase their popularity tremendously. He laid his plans accordingly. All the new and old varieties of merit were imported from England, Ireland, Germany, France and Holland. Trial beds were laid out and carefully planted, that the varieties might be tested side by side. The aim with the roses, as with the perennials, was that a pot plant of any given variety could be furnished throughout the entire season. This required careful management. Wintering in the frames was not satisfactory. The azaleas were discarded and a whole range of greenhouses was devoted to budded roses in pots. The wisdom of this move is shown in the surprisingly fine condition of the stock today and in the absence of plants that have been winter-killed. The quantity of roses on the Dreer place at Riverton is astonishing; I never saw so many pot roses together before. They were brought out of the greenhouses two weeks before Easter, plunged outside, where they stood the snow storm well, and are now the picture of health. Nearby, five long trial beds and a row of climbers divided by well kept, grassy walks are a treat to see. The demand for these roses, mainly hybrid teas, starts in the south, going steadily over the country as the season advances.

Mr. Bayersdorfer's Farewell.

Harry Bayersdorfer left Philadelphia May 6 for the west, bound for San Francisco, thence May 15 by steamer Manchuria for Yokohama, Japan. This is Mr. Bayersdorfer's first trip to Asia. He left farewell greetings for his friends all over the country. "Tell them," he said, "that we will have plenty of florists' supplies for them next season if any effort of mine can secure them. Tell them also that we have done our best for each and all of them through this war trouble. We have held nothing back, filling every order, or as much of it as we could, as fast as the goods arrived."

Mr. Bayersdorfer exhibited an interesting passport issued by the State Department in Washington. It bore the names and photographs of Mr. and Mrs. Bayersdorfer, is good for six months in Asia and Europe, can be renewed by any United States consul and is signed by Mr. Bryan, with certain extraordinary hieroglyphics in backhand, presumably from the Chinese minister. Mr. Bayersdorfer hopes to return in August, but, should the war end, he will go to Europe for several months.

Various Notes.

George L. Pennock is running the A. J. Pennock place recently vacated by Herbert Baker. Mr. Pennock does this in addition to keeping up his interest in the firm of C. & G. L. Pennock.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the decorations for the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the Union League.

D. B. Edwards has received the contract for planting the roof garden of the Hotel Traymore, at Atlantic City. Mr. Edwards will open a flower stand in the Traymore about June 1. Charles F. Edgar, who is well known in this city, will be in charge.

It seemed like old times to have Secretary George Redles address the Germantown Horticultural Society on "Wild Flowers in Vernon Park" May 10.

Recent visitors include Walter Mott, Beacon, N. Y.; George H. Berke and D. D. Edwards, Atlantic City, and Arthur W. B. Evans, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

H. H. Battles has a most interesting display of vases and pottery in his new store at 114 South Twelfth street. It may be said that 108 and 110 are for the upper crust, 112 is for chieppness fust, while 114 is for earthen dust.

"It made you feel as though you were in the flower business," was Robert B. Bragg's way of expressing his approval of the Mothers' day improvement in trade.

William Swayne and two friends from Kennett, Pa., have gone trout hunting down east.

Elmer W. Gaehring, Mrs. Gaehring, Miss McLaughlin, Joseph G. Neidinger, Mrs. Neidinger and George S. Hampton formed a pleasant bowling party at the Florists' Club alleys May 3.

Berger Bros. are receiving some fine Gladiolus Hollandia.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has had 150 packers and shippers at work at River-ton from April 10 to May 10. Two Adams Express clerks are kept steadily at work in the packing shed weighing

NATIONAL FLORIST

NATIONAL FLORAL CORPORATION

The only organization in the United States for the sole purpose of educating the general public—the people who buy—to buy more flowers, especially as gifts to friends out of town in place of other presents.

No commission to be paid for the orders received. The business will come direct from the customer. All the National Florist will have to do is deliver the flowers in good taste and in good order, and keep the cash. It will be a cash-with-order business.

The National Floral Corporation wants one exclusive representative florist in each city in America to take care of the orders which will be created by the advertising service this corporation will render. The best florist is wanted.

There will be one NATIONAL FLORIST in your town—will it be YOU?

NEWARK, N. J.The Market.

Mothers' day added considerably to the sales of the local florists, the sale of carnations being especially lively. There is considerable grumbling among the retailers, most of whom buy their supplies from the New York commission men, because of the high prices charged during the week for white carnations, which sold at wholesale at $6 per hundred. The red and pink carnations did not cost half of that. The consequently higher prices that had to be charged the customers caused many complaints from them. The quality of the flowers was good, and they were abundant.

Roses were of good quality for this time of the year and fairly abundant. Outdoor tulips continue to come into the market in large quantities and are well colored, but are short-stemmed as a rule. Hydrangeas of fine quality, both Otaksa and the French varieties, are in the market and are being sold at low prices. Lilacs are more plentiful, and, in addition to the cut flowers, some stores carry potted bushes in bloom. Snapdragons of various varieties are quite abundant. Geraniums and other bedding plants are beginning to come into the market in large quantities, and still larger supplies are expected in the next few weeks. Florists feel the effect of the sale of geranium plants and pansies by butchers, grocers and others, at extremely low prices.

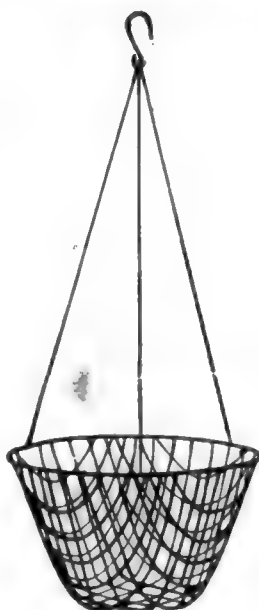

Various Notes.

The Newark Flower Shop reports considerable funeral work recently. The floral department of Hahne's department store, which is under the same management, is doing well, considering the times.

Business is reported as good at Penek's Flower Market. There is an active demand for roses, Killarneys being a favorite.

Strobell & Co. had a few potted fuchsias in their window last week, about the first to be seen this season.

Charles Witherage, 532 Broad street, finds potted bedding plants are selling

The Market.

The bulk of last week's business was funeral work, for trade in general is quiet. There are no weddings and few social functions. Daffodils are about at an end, although a few outdoor varieties are coming in. The market is swamped with tulips in all colors and the price is keeping pace with the demand. Narcissus poeticus is plentiful. Carnations are scarce. These brought a big price for Mothers' day, but roses and tulips also were used in abundance, as the day was better than ever. Sweet peas are getting poorer daily and the supply is falling off rapidly. In consequence, the price is firm. Violets are still coming in, but they are poor. Easter lilies are hard to get and the prices are high. Maryland, Russell, Ward and Taft roses are in excellent condition, but go at a low figure, as all roses are plentiful. Snapdragon, mignonette, marguerites, pansies, forget-me-nots and valley are abundant. Pansy plants, boxwood trees, geraniums, hardy shrubs and all bedding plants are selling well now.

Various Notes.

Edward Walther, of W. J. Palmer & Son's lower store, is again on the sick list.

Joseph H. Rebstock has recovered from his attack of primula poisoning and is at work as good as new.

Joseph Sangster had a good Mothers' day window. It consisted of a large picture of a mother, with varicolored ribbons running from the picture to numerous boxwood trees placed at different angles in the window. He is showing some fine bougainvilleas in pots and reports that business has been good.

S. A. Anderson and family are finding fishing good in Michigan.

J. B. Wiese is having a big sale of bedding plants, Boston ferns and perennials. His delivery auto looks quite slick in a new coat of gray.

At the branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son, there was a special Mothers' day window every day for a week preceding, which gave the day great publicity.

It was with regret that the trade learned of the death of Prof. Cowell, who was honored and loved by all. We shall miss him at the meetings of the Florists' Club.

S. A. Anderson has combined the Rebstock store with the one at 440 Main street, discontinuing the business at the former store May 1.

At Stroh's Quality Shop special sales of different kinds of flowers are being held each day, but sales of short-stemmed roses are most frequent.

D. S. Crum & Co., McWilliams, Ala.BEST YELLOW MARGUERITE.

What is the best yellow variety of marguerite to grow for pot plants and cut flowers. I would prefer a deep golden yellow. J. G.—Mich.

The variety mostly grown is botanically called Chrysanthemum frutescens Etoile d'Or. This is a much freer bloomer than the so-called Giant Yellow, which also goes under other names. None of the marguerites are deep golden yellow in color. Their color most nearly approaches primrose or lemon yellow. C. W.

REMEDIES FOR THRIPS.

What is the surest and best way to dispose of a surplus stock of thrips? We have been using the acid method as a pest destroyer, but find it has no effect on the thrips. G. & S.—Ohio.

There must have been something wrong with the treatment if hydrocyanic acid gas had no effect on the thrips; it is the last word in fumigants, destroying everything that breathes. Ordinarily the use of any of the standard nicotine insecticides will clear out the thrips. Where the grower does not have success with his fumigant the trou-

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

Mothers' day proved to be a grand success this year and better results were realized than ever before. Cut flowers were plentiful, considering the weather prevailing during the last two weeks. Roses and carnations were in fine shape and the cut was good. With long stems and good flowers, they helped to increase the sales by their excellent appearance. Sweet peas were in fine crop and brought good returns. Mignonette, daisies and snapdragons also found favor with the people.

All florists in the city were well pleased with the outcome and seem to have renewed confidence in trying to boost Memorial day, so as to make that day more of a success than ever. The leading florists of the city, both retail and wholesale, had a joint meeting to consider Mothers' day advertising, with Mr. Kneisel, the publicity man of the Florists'-Club, as the chairman, and resolved to have a large coöperative ad in the daily papers, the results from which were greatly felt by all. The demand for white flowers was done away with to a great extent, as a result of the ad, which read as to this, "For Mother's memory, flowers white; for mothers living, flowers bright." Roses, tulips and sweet peas found about as good a sale as did the carnations. Another item that amounted to no trivial importance was the sale of blooming plants and baskets. Many people have come to the conclusion that if a plant is sent instead of cut flowers, the recipient will have more pleasure in caring for the plant for some time than by having an exquisite bouquet for a few days. spireas and numerous other potted plants were the leading sellers in the potted line. Baskets of roses, tulips, carnations, peas and forget-me-nots met with great favor. Another idea to help create a sensation for Mothers' day, an idea used last year, was the placing of large banners across the side panels of the delivery machines, announcing the day.

Various Notes.

S. N. Peck reports an increase of nearly thirty-five per cent on potted plants over last year. His store is near the interurban depot and many people from out of town took plants home with them this year, instead of cut flowers; hence the increase.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman had her window beautifully trimmed, with a picture of an elderly lady in the background and large vases of cut flowers around it.

Schramm Bros. report an extra heavy sale on boxes of cut flowers. They advertised a special box of flowers at $1 and the results obtained were remarkable.

Miss Helen F. Patten has been kept busy during the last two weeks with an enormous amount of funeral work. Mothers' day business was a grand success at this store also.

Tom Magee is able to be around the store again, although on crutches. He was severely injured some time ago in an accident; the ligaments of his right leg were broken.

Max Spanner is mourning the loss of his delivery automobile. It took fire last week, and before the arrival of the fire department the machine was entirely consumed.

The city council is conducting another city beautiful campaign and has secured the services of W. H. Steffens, an experienced florist and landscape gardener. Mr. Steffens gives lectures at certain halls and schools and tells the people what, where and how to use plants of all kinds to obtain the best results. This is meeting with great favor with the people and the result can be seen in the greenhouses throughout the city, for the demand for flowers this year is considerably greater than a year ago at this time. Another way in which Mr. Steffens is helping the florists along is by visiting the different factories, investigating the premises, informing the board of directors what would be good to plant to beautify the exterior of the factories, and recommending various florists in the city. In this way many fine contracts have been let and a stronger demand has been created.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There was a decided improvement in cut flower trade, covering the whole of last week, which reached its climax May 7 and 8. The demand for Mothers' day, which started May 6, was greater than ever before. All stock, but particularly carnations, made decided advances in prices. Carnations, which had been druggery at $1 and $3 a week previous, advanced to $5 and $6; inferior flowers made $4 and fancy whites $8 and, in some cases, $10 per hundred. The best demand was for whites, the high colors being least in favor. Prices on carnations averaged better than at Thanksgiving, Christmas or Easter. Most of the growers were somewhat off crop. Roses cleaned up well through the week. Short-stemmed flowers made $2 to $4 per hundred; advances on other grades were not noticeable. Select Beauties have been abundant. Prices of $10 to $15 per hundred are as high as these now realize. Ophelia remains a fa-favorite, but Prince d'Arenberg, Hadley,

Russell and Richmond also sell well.
Yellows are not abundant. Whites met with a particularly good call for Mothers' day.

Yellow marguerites proved great sellers for Mothers' day. They were made up into baskets in great numbers and were next in popularity to carnations. Violets at last are done, although some doubles appeared as late as May 11. Good sweet peas are in demand, Spencers, as usual, selling much the best. The quantity of Dutch bulbous flowers is on the decline; much of this stock now arriving is grown outdoors. Some good Gladiolus America is seen; also small lots of other varieties. Lilies continue druggery, as are antirrhinums, except for good pink shades. Some double feverfew sells quite well, also Gypsophila elegans. Gardenias are good in quality and there is a good call for them.
There is an abundant supply of Cattleya Mossiae. The present week sees warmer weather and considerable recessions in prices. Both roses and carnations show a decided drop.

There is increased call for bedding plants. Among flowering plants hydrangeas and rambler roses sell best.

Various Notes.

Welch Bros. Co. had active business last week and is equipped for a record Memorial day trade. An importation of artificial wreaths from Europe has just arrived. David Welch has for some years made his annual European trips on the Lusitania, which was sunk May 7. No event of late years has caused so much excitement here.

John Barr, of Natick, had 7,500 carnations May 7 and 8. He is busy planting his young stock in the field this week. He has over 100,000 plants.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has a splendid lot of Hydrangea Otaksa carrying fifteen to thirty heads each, also a good lot of roses coming on for Memorial day. Among bedding plants he has 10,000 geraniums, 5,000 salvias and 10,000 other annuals.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day at the Arnold Arboretum, May 21. Members and friends are asked to meet at the Forest Hills entrance at 2:30 p. m. The entrance gates there are only five minutes' walk from steam, elevated and surface cars. Lilacs and many other shrubs will be finely in flower May 21.

James Wheeler, of Natick, is the heaviest shipper of yellow marguerites to the wholesale markets this season. May 7 and 8 he had over 60,000 flowers. He also had a splendid lot of carnations.

I am glad to report Robert E. Montgomery, who underwent an operation at the Natick hospital three weeks ago, as much improved in health, although somewhat thinner. He was able to resume his duties as salesman for his father at the Coöperative Market, May 10.

The general verdict among the local retailers is that the demand for flowers for Mothers' day was far ahead of all preceding years. A large variety of flowers, in addition to carnations, were used. The wholesale markets all had a better trade than at Easter.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is working up an immense stock of bedding plants this season and orders are pouring in. Of hydrangeas in tubs they have a big stock; rambler roses and spiræas are also grown in quantity for Memorial day. Mrs. W. W. Edgar has just acquired a fine touring car.

Penn advertised more extensively than ever for Mothers' day. May 7 he had large advertisements in six leading Boston dailies. Probably no other florist in the United States spent as much on advertising for this occasion. Baskets of yellow marguerites had an immense sale, as had Beauty, Killarney and other roses, carnations, valley and gardenias.

F. W. Holbrow, of Dorchester, had a superb lot of Gladiolus America in the market May 8. The spikes realized $3 per dozen. Mr. Holbrow was early in the field last year also.

The suggestion advanced that Boston should hold a small spring show next year and a large May show is not received with much favor. Growers are mostly too busy in May to exhibit at or attend shows and the public cannot be made to attend such an exhibition or take an interest in it as they would in a spring show. Is there any reason why Boston cannot have a successful spring show when New York, located 240 miles nearer Philadelphia, has plans already well advanced for holding one?

H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, still grows Winsor carnations in quantity and had a heavy pick for Mothers' day. He still grows Enchantress, but no one will buy it when Pink Delight can be had. Other varieties grown are White Enchantress and Beacon.

William H. Carr is getting some splendid ixias from John Davie, of Dedham, and Peach Blossom gladioli from Fruit Hill Greenhouses, of Providence.

Patrick Welch has had splendid business since opening his new store at 262 Devonshire street. The bulk of his flowers are sold right over the counter and everything is wholesaled. It is a fact that some of our so-called wholesale houses do a considerable retail business, even making up floral designs to order. This practice is growing and should be discouraged in every possible way.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. was well satisfied with the Mothers' day business, which went far ahead of a year ago.

The West Street Greenhouses, of Reading, are strong on double bachelor's buttons, yellow marguerites and carnations.

Tomatoes are well set and some fruit is already ripening at Thomas Roland's, Nahant. Two immense houses here, containing 40,000 plants of Comet, are a grand sight. Roses continue in good crop, and Mr. Livermore, the manager, looks for a large Memorial day cut.

The tulip display in the Boston public gardens is at its height this week. Henry Penn took a unique and original way of commending it, and urging people to visit it, in an advertisement in the leading Boston newspapers.

Some carnation growers have their plants all out in the field. Others are busy getting their stock out this week. More field plants will be grown than usual, as the demand for rooted cuttings this spring was less robust than usual.

Wax Bros. had a splendid Mothers' day business and recently have had some large wedding and funeral orders.

Light colored carnations never sold so well before for Mothers' day. Matchless made, in special cases, $10 per hundred, over double the Christmas and Easter prices, and it can hardly be called a white carnation either. It is new, however, has a fine odor, and has proved a good keeper and shipper.

The Market.

The receipts of cut flowers last week continued to be heavy, with quality inferior to that of the previous week.
Prices were low the first few days, but as the demand increased for Mothers' day, they were raised considerably.
Carnations went from $3 to $5 per hundred, though only a few days before 1,000 could be bought at the same prices.
This forced the retailer, who had been selling them at low prices, to quote carnations at 75 cents to $1 per dozen, and it is reported that a number of sales were lost on account of the sudden advance. This, however, was felt more in the downtown district; the uptown florists, who always maintain higher prices, say little objection was made to the advance. So we can safely say none of the florists were overburdened with Mothers' day business.

Stock that is not overplentiful has the best demand, such as gladioli, fancy Beauties, valley and lilies. May 10 prices came down considerably, but the expected oversupply did not arrive. The market was cleaned up early, but it is expected that before this week is over there will be plenty of everything in carnations, roses and lilies. Gladioli are selling at $5 per hundred. Some good cut peonies are coming in daily at $3 and $4 per hundred. Iris and miniature gladioli were a glut. Sweet peas are becoming somewhat scarce. Everything in greens can be had at usual prices.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting May 17, at the Washington hotel. President Chas. Young says that this, being the last meeting until fall, will be of such importance that all members should attend.

Frank A. Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., expects a good representation from here to attend the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held June 23 to 25 at Detroit, Mich.

The sad news of the deaths of John Zech and Prof. John Cowell, which came with The Review May 7, caused a general feeling of regret, as both were well known and had many friends in the local trade here.

Visitors last week were Frank Farney, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., and Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., was in the wholesale district last week buying supplies. He says he has a busy planting season before him.

The Henry Shaw Memorial sermon will take place at the Christ Church cathedral this month. The plant decoration for this occasion will be done by the Missouri Botanical Garden, of which Mr. Shaw was the founder.

Conrad Bergstermann, the well known south end florist, celebrated his fifty-eighth birthday May 6, at his home, 3117 South Grand avenue. All members of the family were present.

Fred Hager, a gardener living in St. Louis county, was seriously injured by an automobile, May 9. He was taken to the City hospital, where it was found he was badly hurt. Mr. Hager is well known among the county growers.

Henry Berning and George H. Angermueller are sporting new high-grade pleasure cars. Mr. Berning has a Flanders and Mr. Angermueller, a Studebaker.

J. J. Windler, who succeeded his brother, Robert, in the retail store at 2300 South Grand avenue, will be married soon. He is preparing to take his bride for a month's trip to see the sights at the Panama exposition, at San Francisco.

The second monthly meeting of the Missouri Botanical Garden Students' Club will take place May 21. H. Von Schrenk, plant pathologist, will lecture on the "Preservation of Woods." The meeting will be held in the lecture room at the garden.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its annual meeting May 5, at the Eleven Mile House. The feature of the meeting was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Fred W. Ude, Jr.; vice-president, William Edwards; treasurer, Hugo Gross, and secretary, Joseph Deutschmann, reelected. After the election, several important discussions took place, after which the meeting adjourned. A nice lunch was spread. W. C. Smith and Paddy Patton were visitors at the meeting.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco,
Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

SEED corn, both field and sweet, is beginning to feel a strong demand. A good run of trade throughout the month is expected.

SOME of the growers are still looking for acreage for beans, but in most cases enough contracts have been secured. However, there is yet time to make up any acre shortage.

THE executive committee of the National Canners' Association will meet at Chicago May 19. So far as seedsmen's interests are concerned, the most important thing to come up will be a choice between Chicago and Louisville for the 1916 convention.

THE season already is well advanced in the south of France and advices from Ollioules indicate that the growers are standing quite firmly in the matter of Romans, with a softer tendency in Paper Whites. It looks like a year in which the apathy of buyers will add materially to the uncertainties of the market.

THE Western Seedsmen's Association, which includes in its membership most of the leaders in the trade from the Mississippi to the Rockies, will hold its fourteenth annual meeting at Omaha May 15. The officers are: President, H. A. Johns, Sioux City, Ia.; vice-president, C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; treasurer, Henry Winheim, Omaha; secretary, Mel L. Webster, Independence, Ia.

THE acreage in onion sets at Chicago this year is about equal to that of last year, the condition of growing crops is fair and the stand is all right, but lack of rain is holding back the growth. To be sure, there has been a little rain within the last few days, but the precipitation has not been great enough to more than go through the surface—two inches below it the soil is dry. So, regardless of the most favorable conditions during the next few weeks, it is more than probable there will be a shortage of sets next year.

EXCEPT for the resident representatives, most of the Holland bulb salesmen have sailed away, principally to England. As a class they report good business—it seems to be regarded as unethical for them to make any other statement—but from the buyers a somewhat different story comes. Many buyers say they have placed their usual or nearly their usual orders with their regular sources of supply, but subject to market prices at time of shipment. More than a few, however, say they have as yet placed no orders and will not buy until conditions become more settled. There seems to be every assurance that there will be plenty of bulbs again this autumn unless Holland should be drawn into the war.

THERE can be no complaint as to the acreage of peas. The seed has been pretty well planted and the growth, so far, is most satisfactory.

THE records of the Panama canal show that 6,088 tons of seed passed through in the month of February, 1915, but all except eighty-eight tons were oleaginous rather than agricultural. There were twenty-one tons from Liverpool to Seattle and seventeen tons from Seattle to Liverpool, with fifty tons from Los Angeles to Galveston.

H. N. BRUNS, Chicago, who gives at least as much attention to lily of the valley as anyone in America, gives it as his opinion that the loss on pips imported this season has considerably exceeded the increase in quantity imported, probably enough to cover the decreased consumption, so that there were May 1 less than the usual quantity of pips in storage.

THE government has issued under date of April 20, effective May 15, new regulations for the enforcement of the seed importation act of August 24, 1912. The regulations vary only slightly from those heretofore in force and published in The Review at the time of their promulgation. Customs officers still are required to draw samples of all importations of alfalfa, Canadian bluegrass, Kentucky bluegrass, millet, orchard grass, rape, redtop, timothy, clover, meadow fescue and awnless brome grass and to detain the shipment until the Department of Agriculture has passed on the samples.

MINNESOTA SEED LIENS.

Before the recent legislature of Minnesota adjourned the law of that state providing for the enforcement of liens against crops to secure payment for seed therefor was amended to read as follows:

"3480. Filing—Duration of lien—To preserve said lien, the person furnishing seed as aforesaid, within thirty days after the execution of such note or contract, shall file the same, or a copy thereof, with the register of deeds of the county in which the land upon which the crop is to be grown is situated. Thereupon the lien shall continue for the term of one year from the date of filing upon the crop growing or grown from such seed, to the amount and according to the terms of the

LIVE WIRES.

The quitter can't survive where the plugger has the ghost of a chance. If you want the plums you can't get them by lying under the tree with your mouth open waiting for them to drop—because there are too many men willing to climb out on the limb and risk their necks to get them away from you. Business is the survival of the fittest—it's a man's game. The successful retail florist is the fellow who keeps the stream of purchasers coming his way. Store location is made desirable by the live wires located near you. It isn't the spot that makes the store pay—it's the man who makes the spot pay. Centers of trade are not selected by the public—they are created by live wires who control the public. Store location is expensive in a degree measured by the live wire near it. Why not be a live wire yourself? Do something—always be doing something. Keep your greenhouses packed with stock—have plenty on hand at all times—and for general floral work, nothing is better than the pure white lilies. Get Horse-shoe Brand bulbs and have lilies all the year through. Send for prices for Cold Storage bulbs to be shipped, say, once a month.

THE SEED TRADE SPECIAL.

Fifty reservations have been made for the special train planned to be run from Chicago to San Francisco for the seed trade convention next month.

S. F. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, chairman of the transportation committee, urges on all those intending to go the desirability of communicating with him at once. Not alone members of the A. S. T. A. are invited to take advantage of the special, but all those in any way interested in the seed business. The reservation of 150 places is necessary to assure the special train. All particulars relative to itinerary, fares and equipment will be found in The Review of April 29.

SEIZED MANY SEEDS.

The British government intercepted the American steamer Ogeechee, from Bremen to New York, and took it into Sharpness, England, where the German cargo was discharged, after which the ship was released. To secure release of the cargo, American consignees will have to prove that the merchandise was contracted and paid for before March 1.

The manifest shows the Ogeechee carried considerable quantities of German seeds, consigned as follows:

Schulz & Ruckgaber, 173 bags seeds.
 Allaire, Woodward & Co., 6 bags seeds.
 M. Thomson & Bros., 20 bags seeds.
 W. Beckert, 17 bags seeds.
 R. F. Lang, 3 cases seeds.
 J. M. Thorburn & Co., 27 bbls. radish seed.
 U. S. Express Co., 1 bag seeds.
 American Express Co., 3 cases flower seeds, 6 bags garden seeds.

The boat also carried a number of shipments of miscellaneous florists' supplies consigned to forwarding agents.

...THE... Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Fiesta week, of course, called for an immense quantity of outdoor flowers and greens, but, outside of this, business has been by no means good—not so good as the normal for this season of the year. Funeral work has been fairly plentiful and has helped out considerably, but this has not prevented stock from piling up to some extent in the wholesale houses.

Everything in the way of flowers is plentiful and good, but the demand is trifling and the dreary weather has put a damper on business generally. The rains have been much heavier than usual for late April and early May, and frost was reported from several localities in the early morning of May day, a most unusual occurrence here. Easterners are fond of chaffing Los Angeles people on account of the large amount of "unusual" weather we get here, but there is surely reason for the term this year. Truck growers have suffered considerable losses in peppers, eggplants and other tender crops, as the cold nights and heavy, beating rains proved too much for the young plants raised under glass. It looks at present as if there would be an unusual demand for late plants of all kinds this season.

Various Notes.

Reports from San Diego show that business has had a considerably better tone in the last few weeks. The number of visitors to the exposition is said to be steadily increasing as the season advances, while the horticultural features are approaching the height of their beauty.

Wallace Boyd, for many years in the employ of O. C. Saakes, of West Fourth street, has left for Honolulu. While Mr. Boyd had hosts of friends in the city and will be greatly missed, all unite in wishing him the best of success in his new sphere of action.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., reports a large demand for all classes of greens for the floats at the fiesta. Business in the better kinds of commercial chrysanthemums has also been excellent.

Murata & Co. sold over 100,000 carnations for the making of floats for the fiesta, but the next day the store was well filled with superb stock, showing the pulling power of this well managed organization.

The almost continuous rains of the last two weeks made everyone anxious as to the outcome of the floral parade in the fiesta, scheduled for May 3. But the day opened brightly and everything passed off without a hitch. Among the most interesting features of the parade were the decorated floats by local municipalities, and here the prizes went, in the order named, to Pasadena, Long Beach, Santa Ana, Huntington Park, Montebello, Inglewood, Monrovia, Burbank, Azusa and Glendale. The Pasadena float represented a scene from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," beautiful girls being chosen for the characters in this fairyland tale, and placed under bowers made of myriads of carnations and roses. Long Beach put up a float of immense floral sea shells, which opened and closed at will, disclosing charming young ladies, one in each. Santa Ana put up a locomotive in red carnations, with the legend, "Santa Ana next stop." A bungalow roofed with callilies was the Huntington Park exhibit. The Montebello float consisted of a pergola over which were festooned 20,000 Cecile Brunner roses, all gathered from Montebello gardens. The Azusa float was a miniature orange grove, with a bungalow and dwarf orange trees full of fruit. In the business floats Howard & Smith won first place with a gorgeous arrangement of showy and first-class stock, Staiger & Mundwiler being second. When it is considered that the rain poured down all day on Sunday, necessitating the flowers being gathered wet and handled in this condition, the turnout was remarkably good and it was the universal opinion that there had never been in this or any other town such a wonderful display.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. has been handling great quantities of pansies, the demand for which has held up well. Brought in daily by the thousands from the nursery on the Whittier road, they clean up well. The demand for certain lines of bedding stock has also been heavy, notably for gazanias, petunias and Centaurea candidissima. Marc Germain left May 5 for a business trip through Imperial valley.

Dan Stathatos has moved into the basement formerly occupied by the late Elmo Meserve and later by the Los Angeles Flower Market. Mr. Stathatos has had the large room fitted up with icebox and other fixtures and it looks well. He has always handled large quantities of stock and it looks as though he will handle more from now on.

G. Rollieri, of the California Evergreen Co., has just returned from a business trip to San Francisco.

The May meeting of the Los Angeles

Horticultural Society was postponed one day on account of an election and was held in Kruckeberg's hall, May 5. There was a large attendance to hear James McGillivray give his lecture on gardening, which, though short, was excellent and led to an interesting discussion. Everyone was glad to see Secretary Hal Kruckeberg back after his illness and a most enjoyable meeting was had. J. Dieterich, as chairman of the picnic committee, reported that the park authorities had sanctioned the use of Griffith park for the purpose, and the form of the outing will probably be an automobile ride through this grand mountain park and thence to Hollywood. The flowers on the table were some magnificent Spanish iris and good sweet-williams and antirrhinums from W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre, and a bouquet of native subjects brought by Mrs. Belle Miller, of La Crescenta. The next meeting night will be wild flower night and it is hoped that Theodore Payne, our ex-president, will be present to expatiate on the beauties of this class of flowers.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Retail trade was stimulated only slightly by Mothers' day. There seem to be few people here who think of the occasion unless their attention is especially called to it, and while some individuals have done a little advertising, there has been nothing like the concerted campaign that is conducted in some eastern cities. Business, however, has been comparatively good at the larger establishments, with numerous orders for social functions and a few large decorations. April closed with a 3-day wind, the worst of the season, followed by several days of heavy showers, and considerable damage was done to outdoor stock. Peonies seem to have suffered the worst, and present offerings are light, though more are expected soon. The supply of carnations is lighter, and shipping demand for Mothers' day brought an advance in prices. Ixias are cleaned up, but a late crop is expected. The cut of iris was light for a day or two, but there is more than ever now, much of it extremely fine, and prices are well maintained. Sweet peas are not plentiful, but there are about all that can be readily disposed of, and a good many are taken by the street venders. A little nice snapdragon is appearing. Gladioli are not yet plentiful, but good weather will probably bring a liberal supply. Some good Ulrich Brunner and Mrs. John Laing roses are coming in and are quite popular, while Cecile Brunner is as popular as ever and moves in large quantities. Some pretty windows of single Irish roses are shown, and attract considerable attention. A few more lilies of the valley are coming in. Gardenias are about as fine as ever, with a fluctuating demand. Cattleya Mossiae is still plentiful, and some phalaenopsis, cypripediums and odontoglossums are shown. Plants are fairly plentiful; there are a good many rhododendrons, blooming finely, and Tausendschon ramblers are a prominent feature in several shops.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, on the evening of May 1, the most interesting feature was Daniel MacRorie's report on preparations for the S. A. F. convention. As to the convention gardens, he announced that there were already some 8,000 square feet of space signed up, with applications coming in all the time, and it looked as if a fine showing would be made. He announced that the ground was thoroughly prepared and ready for the installation of exhibits. H. Plath, on behalf of the exhibition committee, reported that a good sum would be available for prizes for the fall flower show, and with preparations under way so far ahead it should be possible to get up something out of the ordinary in the way of exhibits. He also mentioned the show to be held May 7 to 9 at the exposition by amateur floral societies, and recommended that some of the Horticultural Society members take advantage of the invitation to place exhibits there. He also mentioned a sweet pea show to be held in June, full information on which was not at hand. It was announced that the Ladies' S. A. F. committee would meet May 7, to discuss a program of entertainment for the ladies at the convention. The resignation of Jos. R. Jacques from the office of treasurer was presented and accepted, Mr. Jacques being unable to attend the meetings regularly; Daniel Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery Co., was

Delivery

September Morn Our sensational light pink rose. Throws extra strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet, producing high-grade stock without pinching. Wonderful keeper, full, double, with petals of grand substance waved on edges, giving it a most distinct appearance. Light shade of flesh-pink on outside, shading to pure rose-pink in center. We planted 10,000 of it for cutting and have had more repeat orders on it than on any other rose and at better prices. Flowers every day in the year and never soft in the hottest weather. Strong stems, no mildew or spot. (See our full-page ads. in issues of January 21 and 28.)

Own root plants only, from 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000, 5000 for $1000.00.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

elected to his place. S. H. Gray, correspondent for The Review, was admitted to membership. The principal exhibits for the evening were a bunch of General MacArthur roses by E. Gill, awarded 90 points, and a collection of Primula obconica in twelve different shades, by H. Plath, awarded 90 points.

Various Notes.

S. T. Beatie, who was mentioned last week as sales manager of the new United Flower & Supply Co., has since then severed his connection with that concern. It was his idea originally to go into the shipping business on his own account, but he has not definitely decided on his plans. He expects, however, to be on the road within a week or two, in preparation for the violet and chrysanthemum shipping season, either independently or on behalf of some local concern.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. are again showing some fine Rambler rose arches, similar to those shown during the Easter season.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has completed a large planting of native trees and shrubs on the hills back of Vallejo, Cal., a large contract financed by the various manufacturers of that town.

The jury of awards for the exposition exhibits is organizing this week, and among the judges in the horticultural section are a number of local growers, as well as prominent eastern florists. Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., has just arrived to take his part in the work.

The first exhibit to be installed in the convention gardens in Golden Gate park is that of Henry Turner, of Montebello, consisting principally of Rose September Morn. Among the space reservations are 1,000 square feet by Geo. C. Roeding, the Fresno nurseryman, and 1,500 feet by Domoto Bros., for Japanese plants and trees.

Chas. Navlet's plant department in the Emporium is growing and now occupies three times as much space as last year. The seed department has been a strong feature, and a lively business has been done in ferns. The flower stand recently installed will probably be moved to a more prominent part of the store before long.

J. J. O'Connor, 2756 Mission street, says his business has been good this spring, especially for the last few weeks. In addition to a good run of funeral work, he has had more business than he expected at the exposition.

The Market.

Social affairs and funerals last week took more than an average quantity of cut flowers. Shippers have handled a large volume of business. Near-summer weather has cut down the supply until it is about equal to the demand. Prices at the cut-rate stores have increased accordingly. White and pink carnations and sweet peas are somewhat scarce. Roses, Easter lilies, callas, snapdragons, orchids and peonies are in full supply. Considering the strong competition of outdoor roses and many other varieties of blooms, business is holding up well.

The lack of enough white carnations to supply the demand for Mothers' day was made up by using other white flowers which represented the sentiment of the day. Even if it were possible to keep the benches of white carnations in full bearing, there would be a great shortage if every customer insisted on using that flower, so substitutes must be provided. Bedding stock is being put out in large quantities. Porch boxes, tubs and hanging baskets are being delivered. The quantity of such stock sold bids fair to show an increase over the records for several years.

Various Notes.

The Portland Floral Society will hold its next meeting on Tuesday evening, May 18, at Masonic Temple. Arrangements will be completed for the society's exhibit in the floral center of the rose festival.

D. M. Cookingham added a cool house, 24x60, last fall to his greenhouse range at East Sixty-second and Ash streets. He reports a good business in bedding stock and garden plants.

The Wilson & Crout Co. has had an exceedingly busy season and is nearly sold out of bedding stock.

W. I. Spencer built a range of glass last fall near Lusted Grade, in the Bull Run district. He is growing principally vegetables, but will grow enough miscellaneous stock to supply the local retail trade.

J. Gould has had poor health for several years and has retired from the florists' business to a 20-acre ranch in the fruit district, where he hopes to be benefited by the change. He has sold his flower business and range of glass at Arleta to Andrew Walden. Mr. Walden, since coming to Oregon, has had charge of the range of the Woodmere Floral Co. Previously he was with John Scott and other well known eastern firms.

Julius Brotje is bringing in some fine water lilies.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; Vice-president, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Fortieth annual meeting, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1915.

Two recent bulletins of the United States Department of Agriculture that are of interest to nurserymen are numbers 648 and 650, respectively "The Control of Root-knot" and "The San Jose Scale and Its Control."

THE nurseries that specialize on ornamentals appear to have had a better season than those that devote their energies exclusively to fruit trees. Large orcharding enterprises have been considerably less numerous than usual the last few months.

ON the board of directors of the Gulf Coast Horticultural Society for the coming year is James Brodie, of the Biloxi Nursery, Biloxi, Miss. Theodore Bechtel, of the Bechtel Pecan Nurseries, Ocean Springs, Miss., is vice-president for the Mississippi coast.

MINNESOTA LAW AMENDED.

By a law which took effect April 22, 1915, the provisions of the Minnesota laws relating to inspection of horticultural stock to avoid spread of plant diseases, etc., and requiring certificates of inspection to be attached to shipments, were amended by the enactment of the following section:

"Dealers, and florists not owning nurseries and shipping by post, freight, express, or otherwise, may obtain from the state entomologist a special certificate, in order to comply with the federal and state laws. Such certificate will be granted only upon stock purchased from an inspected nursery or upon foreign stock inspected in Minnesota.

"Provided that, before such certificate is granted, the dealer or florist requesting the same shall furnish a sworn affidavit that he will buy and sell only stock which had been duly inspected by an official state inspector and that he will maintain with the state entomologist a list of all sources from which he secures his stock."

NEW LAW IN INDIANA.

June 1 a new law takes effect in Indiana in regard to the inspection and sale of nursery stock. While it is in some matters a little stricter than the old law, it contains nothing new or unusual in horticultural legislation.

All nursery stock sold in Indiana must bear a tag showing that it has been examined by the state entomologist. Failure to comply with the provisions of the act subjects the person or firm to a fine of from $10 to $100 for each offense. Application to have stock examined by the state entomologist must be made before July 1 of each year. Persons receiving foreign stock must notify the entomologist, who must examine it. Infested or infected stock must be destroyed.

All dealers within or without the state who do business in the state, must secure a dealer's license and make affidavit that they will sell only stock that has been inspected and must furnish the state entomologist with a list of the sources from which stock is secured.

All nursery agents or canvassers, or salesmen doing business in the state, must carry an agent's license issued by the state entomologist.

All persons engaged in the nursery business are prohibited from misrepresenting any stock offered for sale. If requested, such persons must furnish the state entomologist with copies of his order forms, contracts and agreements with customers. A fee of $1 shall be charged for dealer's or agent's license.

Whenever, as the result of an official inspection, the state entomologist, or his deputies, shall order treatment or removal of any trees, vines, shrubs or plants and the owner shall refuse to carry out such order, the state officer shall remove or destroy the infected plants and the expense of the same shall be added to the taxes of the premises.

FIND PEST IN NORTHWEST.

The devastating eelworm, or Tylenchus devastatrix, has been found again in the Pacific northwest, several hundred miles from the point where it was discovered in 1913. This tiny, thread-like organism is a nematode, and is remarkably destructive to many forms of bulbous plants. Commercially, its chief importance is due to its ravages in onion fields, but it also feeds to a great extent upon flowering bulbs such as hyacinths and upon such crops as rye, oats, hemp, potatoes, strawberries, etc. Hitherto, the United States appears to have been practically free from it, but the new infestation in the northwest following upon that of two years ago indicates the existence of danger that it may establish itself here. The devastating eelworm thrives best in moist regions where the temperature varies to a comparatively small extent. These climatic conditions are found in the areas in the Pacific northwest where the pest has been discovered. On the other hand, there is reason to believe that this particular nematode will not survive cold winters in which the ground is frozen solid for a considerable depth, or that at least it will not become a serious menace under such conditions.

The devastating eelworm is so small that it is practically certain to escape observation. The young nematodes hatching from eggs laid in the infested plant feed on the juices and tissues of the plant until it is destroyed. They multiply with extraordinary rapidity, so that the bulb soon swarms with them, and they often find their way into the upper leaves. In the case of the onion, the leaves of the affected plants become swollen and flabby and the bulb soft and puffy. The whole plant has a peculiar stunted and distorted appearance, and ultimately the bulb rots away. If a portion of the bulb or one of the swollen leaves be placed in a dish of water and observed under a magnifying glass, tiny transparent worms may be seen escaping into the water.

Once a crop has become infested with these nematodes, there is no known cure. The most effective measure is to starve the pest out either by allowing the land to lie fallow, or by planting it to crops that furnish little or no nourishment to the eelworm. Corn and barley are among the crops recommended for this purpose. Any diseased

DREER'S Select

STRONG TWO-YEAR-OLD PLANTS FOR

The Dreer Roses for bedding are strong field-grown plants which were potted during the Winter months, stored in cold houses and frames, and are now in the best possible condition to turn over to your retail customers for outdoor planting. They must not be compared to dormant celloared stock and all are in 5 or 6-inch pots, according to the growth of the variety.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The outside temperature has taken a decided drop, in some mornings being as low as 38 to 40 degrees, but so far there has been no report of damage. The cold spell will benefit the large peony growers in this section of the country. Had the hot weather continued, the peonies would have been about over by Memorial day; some of them are in bloom now in sheltered spots.

Business for Mothers' day proved highly satisfactory. All reported their stock cleaned up, with not enough to supply the demand. The white blooms, of course, went first. There was also a good demand for blooming plants, such as begonias, hydrangeas, Easter Greeting pelargoniums, ferns, etc.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' and Gardeners' Association held its regular meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building, May 4. There was a large attendance and several new members were enrolled.

The club was addressed by Secretary Guild, of the Greater Dayton Association, on window boxes, shrubbery, shade trees and general floral display. As Mr. Guild is a great enthusiast along these lines, his talk was much appreciated. The club decided to invite to its next meeting John H. Patterson, president of the N. C. R., who also is a great lover of flowers and thousands of landscape work, spending thousands of dollars every year along these lines.

The association decided to hold a chrysanthemum show in the fall, provided the coöperation of enough of the florists can be secured. The president was instructed to appoint a show committee, which will report details as the matter progresses.

Various Notes.

Otto Morris, formerly section man in the pot plant department of the Miami Floral Co., has taken a position at the A. H. Dew establishment, of Albion, Mich. G. W. B.

The Market.

Mothers' day business lived up to all expectations. Everybody was sold out. This was an unfortunate year for many growers, as some of the stock went to pieces during the extremely hot weather of the last few weeks. There seems to be no limit to the quantity of stock coming in. The call for white carnations for Mothers' day still is as strong as ever. The demand for red carnations, however, was on the increase this year, which, no doubt, is partly owing to an editorial that appeared in one of the local papers calling attention to red flowers for mothers living and white for mother's memory. If there was any doubt in the minds of a few as to the results to be obtained from coöperative advertising of flowers, it must be dispelled now. Only one fact looms up big—the price of carnations should not soar to such heights as they have done in some cases. A few local churches advocate the wearing of a bow of white silk ribbon, which does not look good from our point of view.

F. A. F.

DOVER, N. H.

Charles L. Howe, of the Garrison Hill Greenhouses, has recently purchased a 32-acre farm in addition to his already extensive property and will use the soil in his carnation beds, as it is of extra good quality.

Charles A. Davis is slowly recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

Helmuth Hornig, formerly head rose grower for C. L. Howe, has removed to a large farm near Amesbury, Mass., where he will engage in growing vegetables for the city markets.

Peter J. Hughes, for many years associated with the florists' business, has accepted a position as assistant gardener at the J. E. Spoor Estate at Pittsfield, Mass.

The Market.

The market is full of flowers and the demand is strong. Mothers' day was a good one for the florists, as all flowers were in demand, especially white and pink carnations. Peonies are coming in and a good crop is expected for Memorial day. Considerable bedding out has been done, but the weather has been so uncertain regarding frosts that many people are holding back. The days are warm, but the nights are chilly. During March and April little rain fell and everything was in danger of drying up, but last week we had some fine rains, which put life into vegetation.

Various Notes.

J. C. Elsperrmann is much better and is able to attend to his work at the greenhouses. He has been busy filling baskets and boxes. He has a fine stock of plants for his trade. Funeral work is plentiful.

Louis Fritsch is busy filling baskets and boxes and has considerable planting out to do. He will grow some roses for cut flowers this year.

Theodore Kuebler, of Santa Rosa Fruit Farm, is bringing in excellent American Beauty geraniums. He has just received a new delivery car.

Royston & Fenton have a fine stock of 2-inch coleus in about twenty varieties, for the trade.

Miss Nellie Goodge was busy as she could be on Mothers' day. She had a big variety of stock and sold about everything. She has a fine lot of bedding plants.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are busy with spring work.

C. L. Niednagel has his young stock of roses in splendid shape for planting.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. had a large trade on Mothers' day. Business is almost invariably good with them.

Karl Zeidler had a large call for flowers for Mothers' day. E. L. F.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Mothers' day business was the best this city has ever had. It increased far beyond expectations. Everything was sold out by noon on Sunday. Pot plants and basket work of all kinds sold well. It has become almost as good a day as any of the others, but it is unfortunate that the price of carnations goes so high. Good roses were cheaper than good carnations and the retailer talked roses or small pot plants and they sold just as briskly. The passing of the heavy supply of stock has resulted in prices stiffening a little, except on roses, which stayed normal even on Mothers' day. The supply and demand are more nearly equal than they have been for some time. Lilies and snapdragons are bringing a fair price. The outdoor stock is looking promising for the near future.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had a fine display of gloxinias, which sold readily for Mothers' day.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. cut 30,000 carnations from its greenhouses last week.

Arthur Newell says he sold as many roses as carnations last week, as he did not try to make a big profit on roses.

Miss Edith Roberts, formerly with the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., is with the Costello-Moore Floral Co. permanently.

The Peterson Floral Co. reports a heavy run on corsage bouquets for Mothers' day, especially those made of carnations.

A. F. Barbe, opposite the main entrance to Elmwood cemetery, noticed a large increase in the decorating of graves for Mothers' day. W. J. B.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CAPACITY OF SMALL HEATER.

I have a hot water heater which I used to heat a brooder house, but since I changed the system of brooding I no longer need the heater for that purpose. The temperature in this locality has been known to drop as low as 20 degrees below zero, though below-zero temperatures are rare. I should like to use this heater in a small greenhouse, for forcing bulbs, growing geraniums and other hardy plants, and starting stock for outdoor planting.

The heater is a round affair, with a water jacket around the fire, and the coal is put in at the top. An automatic regulator is attached. The grate area is 185 square inches. The makers claim that, at a conservative estimate, the heater will control 1,000 feet of radiation, with hard coal. I have in use 600 feet of 1½-inch pipe. What size of greenhouse would this heater care for? It must be set in a pit at least thirty inches below the lowest pipe of the coils. I enclose a picture of the heater, so you can see what it is like.

W. W. B.—Pa.

Although the heater is of an efficient type, judging from the accompanying picture, I would not care to use it for more than 250 square feet of radiating surface, which is about the amount that will be furnished by 600 linear feet of 1½-inch pipe. This will heat 1,000 square feet of glass to 50 degrees in zero weather, and this may be what is claimed by the manufacturers, instead of radiation. For a small house a width of twenty feet will be

Rose Range of Riverbank Greenhouses, Geneva, Ill. Charles McCauley, Supt.

Heated by No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler, Kroeschell 2-inch Return Piping System and Kroeschell Generator. Greenhouses each 28 feet by 200 feet. Garland Construction.

The mains are arranged to take care of a future addition of 40,000 sq. ft. of glass; 2-inch returns are used throughout the entire range and each 2-inch return line is controlled by 1-inch gate valve (strictly a Kroeschell feature), insuring perfect control. It is a gravity job; the circulation is perfect, reaching the extreme ends of range in fifteen minutes. The Kroeschell Generator (the high speed gear for hot water heating) is also used for this system.

"Your No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler heats our entire range. We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in our greenhouses, and this temperature is easily maintained even in the very coldest weather. Your boiler has given entire satisfaction. It is the best and quickest heater I have ever used or seen. I have found the boiler very economical in the use of fuel and labor, as it is not necessary to use the best coal, and any labor will do for a fireman. The Kroeschell Piping System with Generator works like a charm. When I want to sulphur, I can heat the water up to 230 to 240 degrees and I get the same results as from steam. Seeing is believing—all growers are invited to call. Any further information concerning boiler and piping system will be gladly given. We had a large number of florists at our place recently, and they all thought we had the finest equipped plant in the business."

THE COAL MARKET.

In these times of sluggish fuel business, the coal dealers are continuing to derive their chief encouragement from the source mentioned in this column last week; namely, the prospect of an increased foreign demand. "The truly big feature of the national coal market this week," say the coal men, "is the announcement that England has decided to confine its export shipments to its own possessions and to allied countries. It is estimated that England has withdrawn from the export market to the extent of about 2,000,000 tons a month. This will mean that America's export trade will be increased by that same amount. The smokeless coal field"—and here is where the florists should sit up and take particular notice—"the smokeless coal field is naturally the one from which this supply will come first, but even by abandoning completely the home market, the smokeless field could not produce that tonnage. This means strength both at home and abroad for smokeless coal."

With reference especially to the Chicago market, it is said that "selling smokeless coal is uphill work. The retailers are not interested in putting coal in storage, as a general rule. There are some exceptions, of course. Also some retailers are disposed to dispute the circular price named by the operators. The two things are making for a backward market. The weather is almost unseasonably warm and has been relieved in the last four weeks by only a few days of coal-burning weather. This has shut off current buying. The operators are maintaining prices only by keeping unsold coal off the market and in this respect the situation is entirely satisfactory. Only a little free coal has made its appearance." The price of smokeless remains unchanged.

The Market.

Mothers' day was well up to expectations, trade showing an increase of from ten to twenty-five per cent over last year. All stock was cleaned up. Carnations were not nearly equal to the demand, but roses made an excellent substitute. The quality of both roses and carnations is poor. Sweet peas were scarce. There were quantities of fine snapdragons, which found a ready sale. Valley, lilies, daisies and outdoor tulips also found a good demand.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder had a fine cut of snapdragons for Mothers' day.

Bertermann Bros. Co. and A. Wiegand's Sons Co. have the decorations for the Scottish Rite golden jubilee, which is to be held next week. This is to be one of the most elaborate occasions of the kind ever held in the state. The banquet is to be held in the Coliseum at the fair grounds. Plates are to be set for 3,600, to cost $2.50 per plate. The floral decorations are to cost about $2,000. In all, the Scottish Rite has spent about $30,000 for this gathering.

Baur & Steinkamp have been busy planting carnations. This firm has been cutting some fine snapdragons of late, but their carnation cut is decidedly off.

E. A. Nelson has a fine lot of bedding stock and is all ready for the rush.

Clarence Thomas says he has been overloaded with business, which kept him busy day and night. H. L. W.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Mothers' day served to clean the local market of all salable carnations and the wholesalers and retailers alike are well pleased with the business done. The price varied from $5 to $8 per hundred. Colored carnations brought less, although the call was heavier this year than last. Cornflowers were brought into great prominence during the week through a sale by young society women on the streets. It has become quite a fad in Washington to hold flower sales in vacant stores and to send out attractive young ladies as venders. In view of the good causes involved, the florists have been generous in their contributions of stock and the returns for charity have been large. The horse show held during the week created a large demand for corsage bouquets and boutonnieres, and in the latter cornflowers were again the favorites. This is distinctly a society event and the quality of the corsages demanded is good. Gladioli are more plentiful and good. Indoor sweet peas are getting poor, as this is about the end of their season. Narcissus poeticus, the last of the narcissus family for this season, is quite fair but in little demand.

Various Notes.

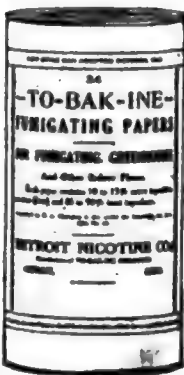

The fakers, according to the wholesalers, are becoming a nuisance and if they continue with their present tactics it will not be long before they will find their sources of supply closed to them. This has been welcome news to the storemen, who have long been complaining against the competition offered by these itinerant salesmen.

William F. Gude left for Boston May 9 with a large contingent of bowlers, who are to participate in the tournament being held in Mechanics building, in that city. Mr. Gude is the president of the Atlantic Coast Bowling League, under the auspices of which the tournament is being held. While in the east Mr. Gude will make a visit to a number of growers in and around Boston.

Among the week's visitors were Robert Shoch, W. B. Lake and I. Rosnosky, all of Philadelphia.

The Market.

Trade has been good. Mothers' day was a record-breaker. All the florists cleaned up well. Carnations were the favorites, bringing $1 per dozen at retail. Other flowers sold well.

100 Jiffy Glass Boards Cost but $4.50

IT means that for 4½ cents you can in a jiffy mend a broken out light. Over and over again you can use them.

For six weeks at a time, last winter, we had them in our houses, exposed to all kinds of weather. We first had them made just for our own use. So many asked us to sell them some that we finally concluded to put them on the market and give every owner a chance to have them.

They are made of two sheets of water-proofed composition board, with heavy corrugated paper between.

They lap over the lower light and tack fast to the inside of the roof bars.

PRICE

For 16x24 glass, $5.00 per 100 or $45.00 per 1000
For 16x18 glass, 4.50 per 100 or 40.00 per 1000

Our Scatter Mist Greenhouse Nozzle

FOR successful greenhouse watering with an overhead Irrigation System, two things are highly desirable. One, that the water shall be broken up into as fine a mist as possible; the other, that this mist shall be scattered over as much space as possible.

After many years in the business and repeated experiments with nozzles of different kinds, we believe that this Scatter Mist Nozzle of ours is the best thing yet designed.

It distributes water in the finest of sprays, that settles down on the plants and on the soil, in the form of a mist. Every foot of ground is watered uniformly. No injury results to the plant, and the soil, after a season's use with the Skinner System, is as open and porous as the day growing was started.

This nozzle could be changed in many ways, either to throw more water, or to throw water farther, or to accomplish a number of things, but this Company has always adhered to maintaining the Skinner System spray, which makes this method of watering successful where every other method has failed.

It has always refrained from making changes in the Nozzle which necessitate a change in the spray, because a coarser or heavier spray will not yield the results which have made the Skinner System famous.

In some exceptional localities and under peculiar conditions, we have built and sold nozzles which cover a strip 25 and 30 feet in width. This can be done by throwing more water, or by changing the angle of the stream. In one case the spray is heavier, and in the other the spray is coarser.

It is impossible for us or any one to throw water farther than is thrown by the Skinner System Greenhouse Nozzle without modifying the spray. The controlling factor is not the character of the Nozzle, but the fineness of the spray, and no spray in which the water is broken into so minute particles will carry through the air a greater distance than the throw of our Scatter Mist Greenhouse Nozzle.

Now, another point—you know that with outdoor irrigation, the nozzle is at the top of the pipe, but in greenhouse it is at the bottom, just where any sediment will be in the pipe. To overcome this sediment's clogging up the nozzles when on the bottom, we make an extension beyond the thread end, which takes the clear water from the middle of the pipe, at a point free from sediment.

The Nozzle, however, is only part of the Skinner System, but it is a most important part.

MOTHERS' DAY.

Brampton, Ont.—The Dale Estate reports Mothers' day business was the most astonishing feature of the season. Last year was remarkably good, but the turnover enjoyed by all in the trade last week allows the occasion to rank uncommonly high. Every particle of stock was sold.

Oconto, Wis.—Joseph Sylvester says his Mothers' day sales were twenty per cent ahead of last year, although everybody wanted carnations and mostly white.

Canal Dover, O.—According to C. Betscher, Mothers' day was decidedly better than in previous years; almost equal to Easter. Nearly everyone entered into the spirit of the day. Many plants were called for and stock was not equal to the demand.

Lincoln, Neb.—Chapin Bros., who have been credited with being the first to call attention to the event, say Mothers' day, 1915, proved to be the best ever; the sales of May 8 beat the sales of May 29, 1914, by a little over ten per cent. This was done with little extra effort and they are sure it is the easiest big day of the year, as there is little delivery and so large a percentage of cash trade.

Van Horn, Ia.—George Hammer makes it a rule to send a free bouquet to the church or Sunday school that has placed the largest advance order for Mothers' day. The custom has become known and is a help in getting business.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MEMORIAL DAY AND THE FLORISTS

Large as are the quantities of flowers sold for Christmas and Easter. Memorial day calls for more blooms than any other one special flower day in the year. The increase has been something notable since the use of printers' ink became general. And yet the retailers who have scored the greatest gains have done so with the aid of artificial material.

DO YOU favor featuring artificial material in flower stores? Whether you do or not, you will have to admit that the use of supply-house stock has increased of late years even faster than the use of flowers has increased. Perhaps a part of this is due to the merchandising ability of the bright men in the supply business, but the real reason lies in the fact that the successful selling methods of the general stores may more easily be applied to imperishable articles than to cut flowers—more easily applied even by a retail florist.

If you look back a few years you will recall the time when Easter was the one big day, when there was no second. Now it is different, decidedly different.

How It Came About.

It is not that Easter has become less important—it still is THE big day with a lot of florists; but Christmas has come to the front as possibly the most important day on the florists' calendar, not only because of the quantities of stock sold, but because the prices obtained are the highest of the year. And while Christmas has been making its strides along the lines of quality and good prices, Memorial day has been making an even better record along the lines of quantity consumed at moderate prices. There are parts of the country to which Memorial day has not yet penetrated, but in many a good sized flower center more flowers are sold for May 30 than for any other one day in the year.

Memorial day was first observed in 1868, when it was established by the G. A. R. as an annual national holiday for the decoration of the graves of those who died in the Civil war, but it was not until a few years ago that the event came to have any importance for florists.

So long as it was an old soldiers' day it did not really count in flower selling.

When the Public Came In.

Perhaps it was only coincidence, but the general public began to observe Memorial day at the time retail florists discovered newspaper advertising to be a powerful factor in influencing the use of flowers. When it began to be the fashion for the general public to take flowers to the cemeteries May 30, the trade naturally got a big boost. For a time it was a question of supplying the demand. It early became apparent that Memorial day never will stand high prices, as people will not buy expensive flowers to leave in the cemeteries, but that immense quantities of the showier kinds of flowers could be sold at moderate prices. This was the peony growers' opportunity and it resulted in the planting of an immense acreage in the sections of the country that are reasonably sure of a mid-May blooming season. Although all other flowers are in demand, the peony has come to be the special flower of Memorial day, just as the chrysanthemum is of Thanksgiving, the Beauty of Christmas, the violet of St. Valentine's day and the lily of Easter. And of late years the abundance of peonies has precluded any shortage of stock for May 30—it has given the retailers the chance to push for business with the assurance that they would not be running prices up on themselves, destroying their profit.

Then Came the Magnolia.

The greater part of the cut flowers sold for Memorial day still go to the cemeteries in the form of cheap bouquets, especially in the country towns, but in the cities wreaths always have enjoyed a good sale. It was the advent of the prepared magnolia leaf, however, that gave the wreath business its real boost. In the beginning wreaths were not only too expensive for general use, but they took so much time in the making that a store could turn out only a limited number. The magnolia leaf solved both difficulties—it is cheap and the wreaths can be made up weeks ahead, to be trimmed by the addition of a few flowers just before delivery. "But why add natural flowers?" It was the question, of course, of a merchant, not a florist. Perhaps the suggestion first came with an order for a wreath to be sent out of town, where natural flowers were sure to perish.

In the wreath of prepared magnolia leaves trimmed with quite natural looking artificial roses certain flower stores found just what was needed to give scope to the merchandising abilities of the proprietors.

When the artificial wreath began to be a factor in the Memorial day business of certain stores, a good many florists refused to countenance it—refused utterly, with righteous indignation. Not by any means all, but a good many have since come to it. They could not stand the pressure of seeing "the other fellow" get the business. Many a man does what his competitor does, regardless of his own dislike for the method or doubt of the ultimate benefit.

The Prices.

Of course, with the ability to prepare stock in advance came decreased cost and with decreased cost came increased sales. It is nothing uncommon now for a florist with a good funeral work trade to dispose of 1,000 or more wreaths each Memorial day.

When the retailers began advertising cemetery wreaths for May 30 the price usually was $2.50 or more—it was not thought possible to do a money-making business at a lower price than $2.50. Now $2 is about the popular figure, and a great many stores feature Memorial day wreaths at $1.50. The policy to be adopted in any particular case of course depends upon the class of trade that is catered to. An extra 50 cents permits giving a great deal better quality, or a great deal better service. And it should be remembered that the average flower buyer still expects good service, no matter how low the price paid.

Boston the Center.

There are plenty of places where the artificial wreath as yet has obtained no foothold. On the other hand, there are localities where wax or even metal wreaths are preferred. But, curiously enough, it was in æsthetic Boston the artificial wreath seems to have had its start and it certainly is in blue-blooded Boston the business done with it has attained its greatest development. Boston retail florists ship artificial wreaths all over New England. They advertise them on the department store style and sell them by thousands—yes, literally by thousands. The illustration on the preceding page shows a 2-horse-truck load of wreath boxes at the door of a Boston florist's shipping room. It was only one of two such loads of corrugated paper wreath boxes received the other day by Penn. Each load contained 105 bundles, and each bundle contained twenty boxes, or a total of 4,200 boxes. Penn expects to need this at Memorial day for artificial wreaths alone.

With one store selling so many, you can imagine what the sales for all Boston must be.

Competition.

Competition has begun to affect the business. There always are those who are in a great hurry to get business and who can see no way to get quick results except to cut prices. One Boston retailer last season advertised his Memorial day wreaths at 98 cents. And the size of the business has become such as to arouse the acquisitive spirit in the department stores. Last year a few of them took a hand in the game and did quite well—the person who chooses dyed magnolia leaves and cloth roses to express his sentiment no doubt loses no part of that sentiment through frequenting the bargain basement.

But Memorial day for a long time to come will afford one of the best opportunities of the year for the florist who is in touch and tune with modern merchandising methods:

The sentimental appeal of the idea is strong.

The custom already is well established.

The volume of business already being done provides a fine foundation on which to build.

Specialties for the day have been developed that provide the basis for advertising.

There is the possibility of taking orders in advance and working up stock ahead of the time designated for delivery.

It is an annual event of unlimited possibilities for the resourceful retailer who remembers that we take out of a business just about in proportion to what we put into it—in intelligent effort.

ORIGIN OF MEMORIAL DAY.

Florists, especially those who deal with the public, are coming to recognize that the more they know about the origin and purposes of the special uses of flowers, the better it is for them in their business. Therefore many will be interested in the story of Memorial day. It is as follows:

"Before the close of the Civil war, May 30 was thus celebrated in several of the southern states; in the north there was no fixed day commonly celebrated until 1868, when (May 5) Commander-in-Chief John A. Logan, of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued a general order designating May 30, 1868, 'for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion;' Logan did this 'with the hope that it will be kept up from year to year.' In 1882 the Grand Army urged that 'the proper designation of May 30 is Memorial day'—not Decoration day. Rhode Island made it a legal holiday in 1874, Vermont in 1876, and New Hampshire in 1877; and by 1910 it was a legal holiday in all the states and ter-

June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, is observed as Confederate Memorial day in Louisiana and Tennessee; April 26 in Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi; and May 10 in North Carolina and South Carolina."

Another account states that "May 30 was chosen, possibly, as being the date of discharge of the last Union volunteer of the war. The states which observe the law have adopted it singly, there being no national law on the subject."

This year May 30 falls on a Sunday, so that May 31 will be observed as Memorial day, a condition usually of assistance to florists, who find a double holiday conducive to increased sales.

CROP TO FOLLOW TOMATOES.

I have been growing tomatoes and lettuce in my houses in solid beds and wish to find something besides lettuce to follow the tomatoes for an early fall crop. How would asters do? How soon should the aster seed be sown to get plants for putting out by September 1?

W. W. M.—Colo.

Asters would not prove at all a profitable crop. If planted in September, even if they grew and flowered well, which is doubtful, they would be almost unsalable with chrysanthemums on the market. If you want to grow a fall crop, why not try chrysanthemums, planting the early varieties, which would be all cut by November 1? You could grow single violets from October to April 1 and follow these with tomatoes or cucumbers for a summer crop, if you want a change.

EARLY SPANISH IRIS.

I would like to know if there are any Spanish irises that will bloom about the middle of May when planted outside in the fall.

J. E. S.—Pa.

None of the Spanish irises would bloom as early as May 15 with you. They would, in an average season, bloom about Memorial day in your latitude, probably during the first week in June some seasons.

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

MAKING A CASKET COVER.

Will you kindly describe the proper way to make a casket cover or blanket, stating just what to use for the foundation and how the flowers are fastened to it? J. R. P.—N. H.

There are at least three distinct kinds of casket covers. One of them, which I shall designate as No. 1, has a foundation of green velvet, to which the flowers are fastened with fine hairpins. No. 2 has a groundwork of green fish netting, with flowers attached to it by means of fine wires. No. 3 is a casket mound, which consists of a board or piece of cardboard, cut the desired length and width, then mossed and covered with green. Ferns, asparagus or smilax will do. The flowers are wired and put on sticks and then stuck into the mossed mound. Long strands of asparagus and flowers are made to fall over the sides of the casket and are anchored into the mound with long green sticks. That finishes No. 3.

To construct No. 1, after the velvet has been sewed together the desired length and width, put it upon quilting frames and stretch it. Then cover the velvet with smilax. The roses, which have been previously wired with fine wires, are cut at a length of about three inches and fastened through the smilax and velvet with fine hairpins. Care must be taken to twist the wire hairpins together on the wrong side of the blanket, to hold the roses firmly. Run the flowers from the edges in toward the center. After the flowers are all fastened, reverse the blanket and line it with green satin or green silk, which has been cut the same size as the blanket proper, pinning in the edges and also pinning here and there on through to the center. Before beginning the work of construction, the casket should be measured, to determine the proper size of the blanket.

In making No. 2, stretch the green fish netting on the quilting frames the same as with No. 1. Cover the netting with smilax and fasten the roses or other material with fine wires, twisting the wires on the reverse side and lining with satin, as in No. 1.

FLOWERS BY PARCEL POST.

Many florists who have never made much use of the parcel post, and who are skeptical as to the advantages of that system of delivery, may thus be losing a good opportunity for a profitable development of their business. At least, that is the opinion of Jacob Schulz, of Louisville, Ky., whose experience has been extensive enough to make his views worthy of careful consideration.

When the shrewd and benevolent Uncle Sam instituted the parcel post department, Mr. Schulz was among the first business men to test the new system, and was so well satisfied with the results that he began a persistent campaign for the securing of parcel post orders. In newspaper advertising and in other ways, he is making a considerable outlay of time and money for the sake of enlarging this branch of his business, and he shows no disposition to relax his efforts. The two specimens of his newspaper advertising here reproduced will partly illustrate his methods, which are described briefly by G. E. Schulz, as follows:

"While a few florists are condemning the shipping of flowers by parcel post, we have no fault to find with it. We are advertising for this business in the local newspapers and make mention of it on all cards and circulars we send out. As soon as the parcel post system was inaugurated we sent for the representative of one of the corrugated paper box factories and had the concern make us up boxes of the same sizes as our regular cut flower boxes. These boxes we had made up to the regulation size; that is, we have boxes up to the limit that the parcel post department will accept.

"Since the inauguration of the parcel post system, the government has had two or three local exhibitions showing just how various articles could be sent by parcel post. We furnished the display, showing just how we packed the flowers; that is, we kept a fresh supply of flowers properly packed and tied in the box. Then we showed another box all done up ready for mailing. This brought us good results. The Courier-Journal, which is our best morning paper and which is mailed throughout the entire country, has a special parcel post page, in which we carry an advertisement. We unquestionably get the best results through this method, although, as already stated, we make mention of the parcel post in all the cards, etc., that we send out.

"I might state in this connection that at Easter we had three people packing parcel post orders for two days. We are glad to get this business and are glad to recommend it, although, as previously mentioned, some of our brother florists are condemning it. However, I think sooner or later they also will make a strenuous effort for the parcel post business."

If other florists, whether they agree or disagree with Mr. Schulz, will send to The Review a description of their methods and experiences with reference to the parcel post, or an expression of their views on the subject, the members of the trade in general will be greatly interested in the discussion. If valuable opportunities for trade advancement are being lost, there is urgent need that the facts be known.

CLEARING THE SURPLUS.

In view of the discussion which has followed the recent glut of flowers, the method of clearing the surplus employed by the Rosemont Gardens, Montgomery, Ala., will be of interest. Taking advantage of the large supply of stock resulting from the arrival of warm spring days, the Patersons used a full page in the leading daily paper to advertise a flower show at their downtown store. In addition to using the stock for display, they gave double value. There is a point there that is worth noting: 'They cut no prices; instead they gave double measure, the purchaser of a dollar's worth of flowers being presented with another dollar's worth, the same thing or something else. The show and sale were a great success.

It will be recalled that W. B. Paterson, founder of the Rosemont Gardens, died March 16. The business is being continued as heretofore under the name of Rosemont Gardens by Mr. Paterson's family, W. B. Paterson, Jr., J. P. Paterson, J. H. Paterson, Wallace B. Paterson, Rupert D. Wilson, his four sons and son-in-law, who have long been associated with him in the business, having grown up with it. It is their purpose to expand the present establishment from year to year so that they will be able to take care of the constantly increasing demand for flowers in the south.

FIGHT FOR SCHOOL FLOWERS.

Florists throughout the country undoubtedly have lost thousands of dollars annually during the last few years because of the rules of some boards of education forbidding the presentation of flowers at school graduations. The chief argument of members of such boards is that the presentation of flowers in large quantities to certain pupils whose relatives and friends are wealthy, and of some bouquets to most of the girl members of the classes, while a few from the poorer families may not have any flowers, tends to rob the less fortunate girls of the pleasure of graduation because of the floral gifts showered upon others, and their own lack of them. Simplicity in graduation exercises is what many school board members urge in view of this condition.

But that the evil is not so great as it is pictured, or if it is, that school board members have gone at the solution of the problem wrongly, is the contention of many florists in towns where such a rule has been applied. It is felt by some that the florists' business has been attacked, while the jeweler, the dry goods merchant and others continue to get their share of business that grows out of graduation.

Many of the florists who grumble at restrictions put upon them do not do anything to defend their business, but not all sit quietly by and watch what they consider legitimate business slipping away from them.

In one of our eastern townships one of the florists heard that the board of education was considering establishing a rule that no flowers should be presented to girls at the high school graduation exercises. When the time for the meeting of the board came he went to the meeting. The members were surprised to see him appear before the time set for the opening of the meeting, and expressed their surprise. He replied by stating that he had heard that they intended to forbid floral gifts at the high school graduation exercises, and that he did not think they had a right to do such a thing.

The members, whom he knew personally, said that they had considered taking such a move, and that they thought they had a right to do so. They then repeated the arguments presented by school board members everywhere to uphold such action.

In reply, this florist said that he was a taxpayer in the township and carried on a legitimate business, for which it was not even necessary to secure a license to transact, as it was in the case of some kinds of business. He argued that in case he had a strike at his greenhouses and appealed to the police authorities, they were bound to give him the needed protection. By the action proposed by the members of the school board, the members, who were officials of the town, were striking at his business. At the same time the jeweler would continue to sell his jewelry for gifts, and the dry goods merchant his fine dresses for the more fortunate girls. Only the florist would be hit by the effort of the school commissioners to secure simplicity at graduation exercises.

This florist went on to say that if there were any system devised whereby simplicity could be secured that would affect all trades alike, he would not say another word. What he objected to was the adoption of a rule whereby his trade alone was hurt.

As the result of this conference, the board did not pass the proposed rule. They agreed to allow floral gifts for the pupils, but required that these be presented immediately following the exercises instead of in the course of the exercises. Arrangements were made so that, if it was found that any girl in the graduation class was to be omitted in the distribution of flowers, a bouquet would be secured at private expense and presented anonymously. But it was found that there was no need of this, for every girl in the graduating class had a bouquet.

The following year the florist who had interested himself in the welfare of his trade heard that there would be another effort to pass the rule proposed the year before, and again he appeared before the board, and won out as on the first occasion. No girl was embarrassed by the lack of a floral gift, all of them enjoyed their bouquets, and the florists of the place got the business that was rightfully theirs—because one of their number had initiative enough to fight for what he believed to be the rights of those engaged in the florists' business.

Doubtless florists in other places could secure as good results under like circumstances if they are willing to fight for them. R. B. M.

BEGONIA PRIMA DONNA.

When shall I sow seeds of Begonia Prima Donna to make nice plants in 5-inch and 6-inch pots for Christmas? How should the plants be cared for while growing up? Should they be stopped when four to six inches in height, or should they be allowed to grow naturally? E. A. C.—Ala.

Sow the seeds at once. It would have been better to sow a month ago. This variety is naturally a stocky grower and should need little pinching. Merely head back any shoots that show a run-away tendency. C. W.

The Best Box Plants.

Undoubtedly the best of all window box plants is the zonale pelargonium. This is a persistent bloomer, and, if care is taken to remove the dead trusses, it never presents a poor appearance. It is an advantage to have some green or variegated vinca in the front of the boxes. Some other good bloomers for boxes are fibrous-rooted begonias, petunias, heliotropes, dwarf nasturtiums, lantanas, lobelias, ageratum and verbenas. Geraniums are far and away the most popular flowering plants, however. With a moderate amount of shade, Marguerite Mrs. Sander, fuchsias, tuberous begonias and even show pelargoniums can be used, especially if these are on the piazza and the customer likes and is willing to pay for an occasional change.

Good boxes can be had without using any flowering plants at all. Boston ferns for piazza use are splendid. They will even stand the sun and wind, lasting in a window quite well. Dracæna indivisa and many other green-foliaged plants, in addition to a host of variegated plants, are available also. The green foliage is more pleasing and more suggestive of coolness than that which is variegated. There are many hanging plants available in addition to English ivy. Some of these are Asparagus Sprengeri, green and variegated tradescantias, Abutilon vexil-

Profit in Window Boxes.

Practically every country florist does more or less bedding out. Not all of them have yet, however, done much with window and piazza boxes, hanging baskets and vases. As this is a branch of the business which is of great and growing importance and one in which there is a good margin of profit for the growers, it is worthy of increased attention. Many of us of late years have seen the numerous windows of some great department store or office building on the business streets of our large cities with window boxes. They instantly attract the notice of those passing by and every store that has carried out this window box plan seems to be prosperous; in fact, growing plants appear to combine prosperity with good taste.

To encourage and develop the window box business, there can be no better advertisement than one's own home. Fill some boxes and vases tastefully, care for them well and you are bound to have inquiries from your customers as to their cost, etc. If you cannot fill your own windows, you can, at least, make a couple of boxes, three feet long, eight inches deep and eight inches high, paint them dark bronze green and stand them outside your greenhouse or salesroom. Fill one with mixed plants, the other with one variety, preferably geraniums, with some green hanging plant along the edge.

Soil and Water.

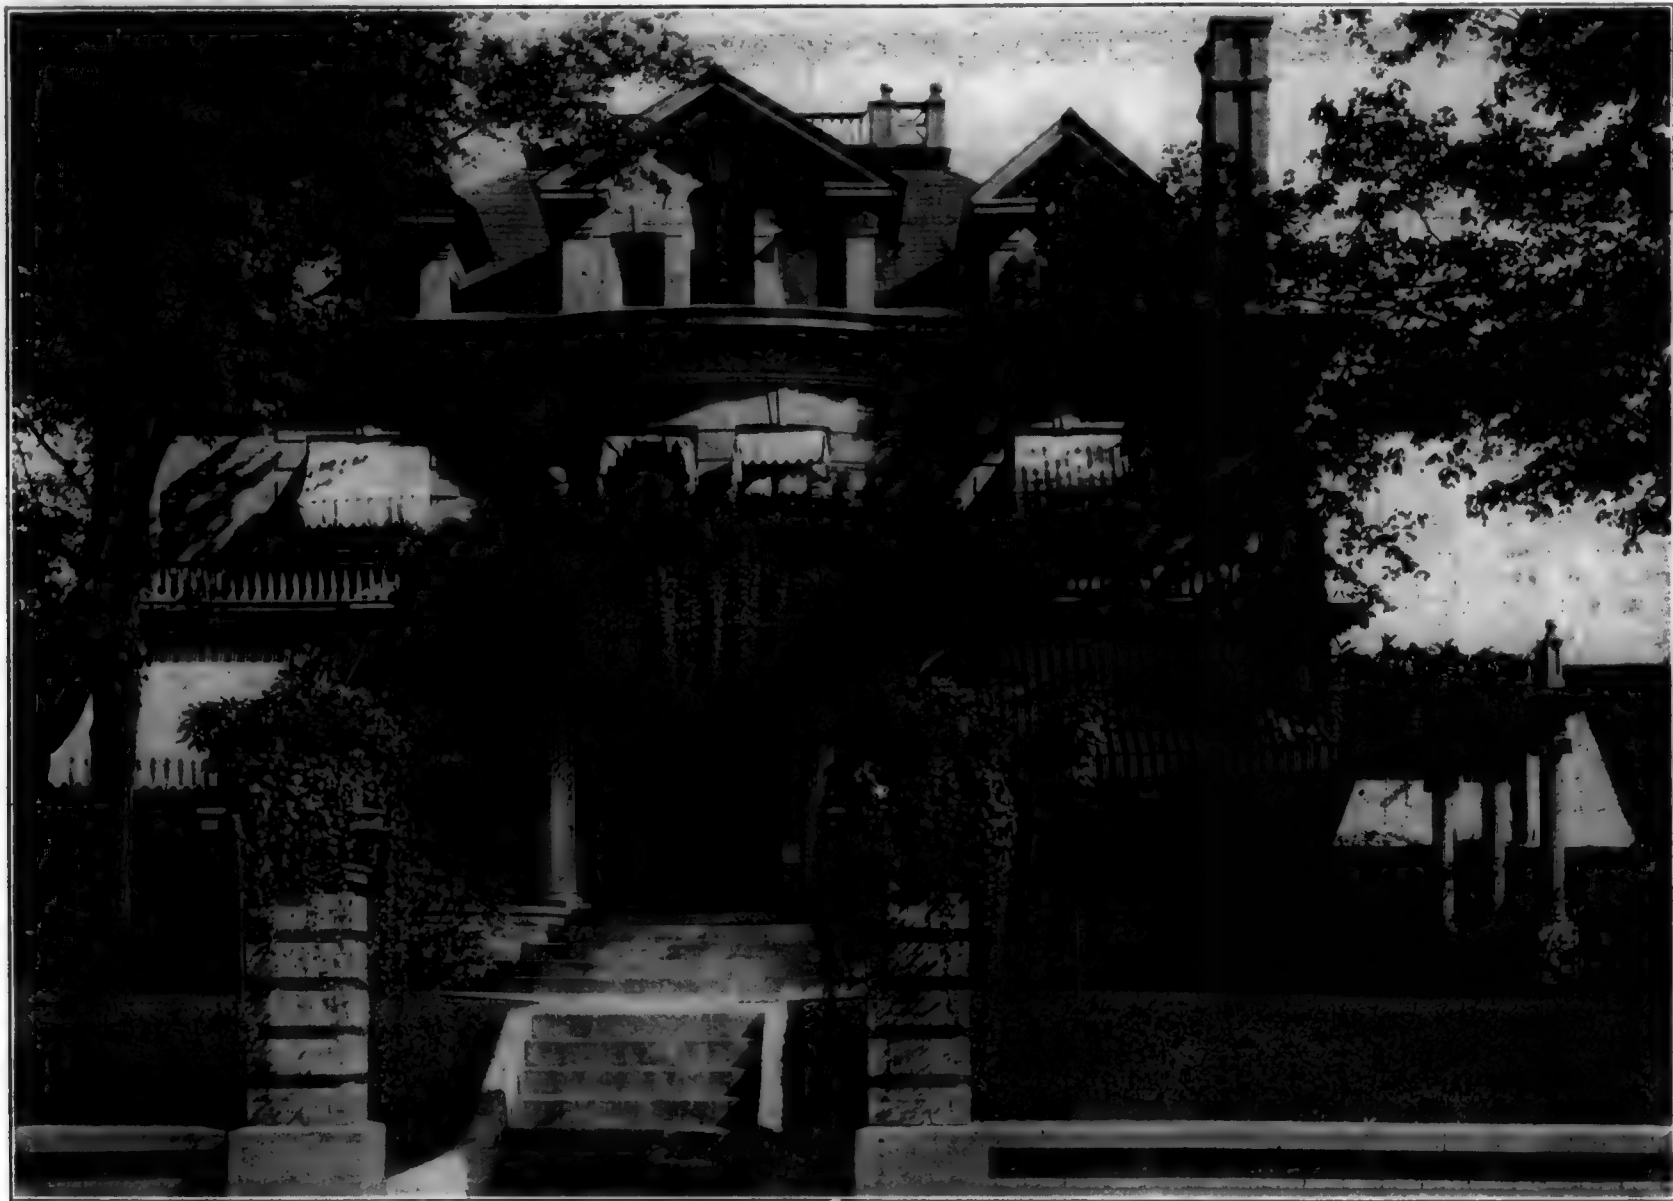

The length, depth and height of the boxes will depend on the sizes of the windows to be filled. Use cypress. Bore a few holes in the bottom to let the water out. As a rule window boxes do not often suffer from a surfeit of water, but it is not advisable to have a tight bottom. It also is advisable to place a little drainage in the bottom. To produce a rustic effect, pieces of bark can be nailed on the front of the boxes if desired.

As there is only a limited root run in window boxes, it is necessary that good soil be used. If you have a sod heap which was stacked last fall and layered with cow manure, chop a good pile of it down, give it a generous sprinkling of bone meal and you will have suitable compost whenever needed. It is no use taking poor soil for window boxes; the plants will eke out a miserable existence and have a more or less starved look all summer. I have in mind a grower who used well prepared soil for thirty of sixty boxes he fitted for a dry goods store. Rather than prepare soil properly for the balance, he told his men to use old carnation soil. It did not need an expert to pick out the boxes containing this soil six weeks after planting, and the boxes had so irregular an appearance that another florist got the contract the following season.

Lawn Vases, Window Boxes and Bedding Are Now to the Front.

Window and Porch Boxes on an Indiana Residence, Planted by W. A. & J. S. Bittler, of Kokomo.

larium, Cobaea scandens, ivy-leaved geraniums, German ivy, or senecio, Kenilworth ivy and glechoma.

It is a fact that in most of the window boxes the plants languish from an insufficient water supply. Impress upon customers the need of an abundance of moisture and that some liquid manure or even a light top-dressing of some plant food from time to time will prove of great benefit to them.

Cemetery Vases.

The filling of cemetery vases constitutes another important branch of florists' work in many places. Not only are vases filled and placed in position, usually on or about Memorial day, but a contract is made to keep them watered at so much per vase for the season. The price of watering will depend much on the number of vases to be cared for, convenience of water supply, convenience to one's own establishment and size of vases. Not less than $2 per vase for watering for a season should be charged, and $2.50 to $3 is more likely to afford a profit.

The vases of mixed plants are good if green plants only are used and the vases are of large size, but the tendency is more and more toward restricting to one variety. Thus solid vases of scarlet, white or pink geraniums are, perhaps, the most effective of all flowering plants. Use no hanging plants with them. Do not use mixtures of other geraniums or any other flowering plants and your customers will be all the better pleased. In some cemeteries miscellaneous mixtures are frowned upon and not tolerated. This is as it should be. We have had too many freaky plantings in God's acre. If there is one place more than another where there should be harmony in using bedding or vase plants, it is in a cemetery.

Handling the Rush.

As there is always a tremendous rush of work near Memorial day, all possible filling of vases, hanging baskets and window boxes should be done in advance of the time they are wanted. It may not be possible to give these greenhouse space, but you can probably arrange for some temporary protection in case of a cool wave. Use plants of good size; the older geraniums will bloom far more freely than late winter propagated ones. Plant quite closely, in order to give immediate effect. Some reductions in balls may, in certain cases, be necessary, but it is best to disturb the roots as little as possible.

Where vases are of large size, sometimes of iron, at other times earthenware, they cannot be profitably moved. In such cases the only plan is to use a team, sending along the necessary new compost and plants, so that the job can be done in good shape on the lot.

THE VASE PICTURES.

The illustrations of concrete lawn vases in this issue reproduce photographs showing the work of F. A. Parkmire, of the Lake Shore Greenhouse, 1429 Morse avenue, Chicago. In each case Dracæna indivisa was used in the center. In one of the vases S. A. Nutt geranium was used, with vincas and English ivy. In the other, in addition to the red geraniums, white petunias and marguerites were used with the vines. These vases stood on Mr. Parkmire's own grounds and were an excellent advertisement for him last season.

BRITISH BAR BELGIAN PLANTS?

Shipments Are Irregular.

Spring shipments of Belgian plants via Rotterdam have been extremely irregular and many importers have received none at all. At first it was supposed that the trouble was due only to the disjointed transportation facilities, that part of the journey between Ghent and Rotterdam being by canal, and to the congestion of freight on the docks at Rotterdam, where large quantities of bulky nursery stock, principally bay trees and palms, have accumulated. But within the last few days it has developed that the British government is undecided as to its course regarding such shipments. May 1 the British authorities placed an embargo on further shipments of plants originating in that part of Belgium held by the Germans. At once the Holland-America line refused to load the shipments that were on the docks and others that almost daily were coming up from the Ghent and Bruges district. The result has been a congestion that promised serious loss to owners of perishable stock.

Then, May 19, came a cable to McHutchison & Co., New York, from their representatives at Rotterdam, stating that further consignments of Belgian plants were leaving there that day, from which it appears that the embargo has been lifted, at least in part or temporarily. The Holland-America line office at Chicago has no information in the matter.

Action Is Important.

As soon as word arrived that the British authorities were classifying Belgian products as of enemy origin, protests were made by importers, through the State Department at Washington. Not only would such an embargo stop spring shipments in mid-season, but it would make fall shipments of azaleas, palms, araucarias, tuberous-rooted begonias, spiræas and many other plants uncertain.

The British embargo was all the more a surprise because of the cry that has gone up at the devastation of Belgium. It is known that the German authorities have encouraged the Belgians to resume their daily occupations and have assisted and offered inducements to that end where possible.

WHEN TO SOW CINERARIA SEED.

I should like to know when to plant Cineraria seed here, in northeastern Texas, to have the plants in bloom about March to April. Also, please tell me the best dwarf varieties having large flowers, with blue center surrounded with white and having a blue edge. Please give me the name of the enclosed fern leaf, as I am a beginner and do not know the names.

F. C.—Tex.

Sow the cineraria seed early in August for your latitude. Keep them as cool as possible all the time. They will naturally bloom at the time named if you give the necessary shade and give them a low growing temperature.

The dwarf, large-flowered cinerarias are called C. hybrida. You can either buy mixed seed, or you can procure crimson, pure white, white with dark blue edge, light pink, azure blue, deep blue and white with crimson edge, in separate colors. The fern frond you enclosed is from Nephrolepis Whitmani.

LOCATION OF CONVENTION HALL.

Daniel MacRorie calls attention that the building in which the San Francisco convention of the S. A. F. is to be held is not on the exposition grounds, as has been stated, but at what is known as the Civic Center.

As the name of the building is Exposition Memorial Auditorium, it is, perhaps, not unnatural, in the absence of specific information, that the supposition should be that the location is in connection with the exposition. It probably makes no difference, as anyone who would attend in one case would do so in the other, but it should be clearly understood that the convention is to be held downtown, not at the exposition grounds. What Mr. MacRorie, who is vice-president of the S. A. F. and chairman of the San Francisco convention committee, says of the location is as follows:

"Both the exhibition hall and the meeting rooms of the S. A. F. are in the same building, the Exposition Memorial Auditorium, situated in the Civic Center. The St. Francis hotel, which is the official headquarters for the S. A. F., is less than ten minutes' walk and less than five minutes' car ride from the exhibition hall. Other leading hotels are equally close.

"The convention garden is situated in the Golden Gate park, which is within easy access from all parts of the city and to which all street cars radiate."

The arrangements for the convention are thought to be unusually good and are progressing splendidly in the hands of the following competent and energetic committee chairmen:

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Haarlem, Holland.—The General Bulb Growers' Federation, through a committee, distributed large quantities of cut narcissi and tulips to the hospitals of the belligerent powers. The Dutch government arranged for free transportation.

Hamburg, Germany.—In common with all other German farmers, the growers in the valley pip districts are devoting most of their attention this season to edible crops, for which their market is assured. There is little fear of shortage of valley pips, but considerable concern regarding means of exporting those in cold storage as well as the crop next to be harvested.

Brussels, Belgium.—The German civil administration is working effectively to restore normal conditions in business. By means of special taxes against the property of Belgian refugees it has been possible to secure the return of many who sought asylum in England and Holland. This has included a number of nurserymen in the Ghent and Bruges district, who are being encouraged to employ the usual number of hands.

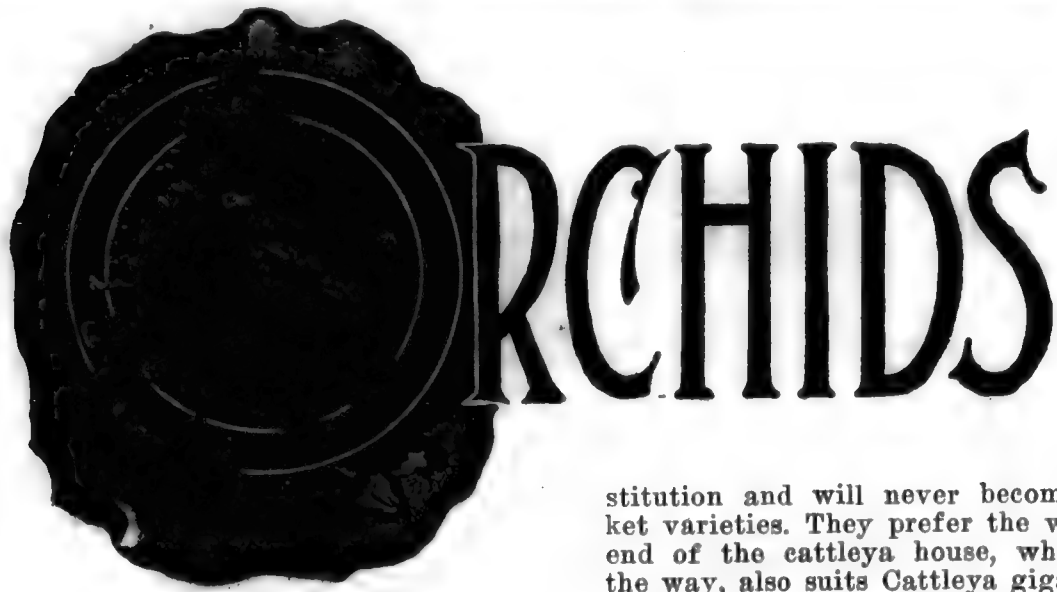

Ghent, Belgium.—A Belgian florist writes: The nurseries around the battlefields of Louvain and Malines and other towns are destroyed, but those in the vicinity of Ghent, Liege, Antwerp and Brussels have not suffered, except for a few collections of azaleas and rhododendrons in the district around Ghent, which were cut down with spades by the English soldiers in order to make trenches. I have seen in the uniforms of German officers several members of the international jury of the last Ghent Quinquennial.

London, England.—Notwithstanding conditions, the National Rose Society held its annual spring show April 16 in the R. H. S. hall, but it was a long way behind those of other years. Competition was light.

The Hague, Holland.—De Graaff Bros., Ltd., Leiden, sent last year, gratis, part of their surplus, a surplus unusually large on account of the war, to this city to be planted in the public parks. Altogether they have sent about 450,000 bulbs, principally tulips, daffodils and iris. The show made this spring has attracted wide comment.

Ghent, Belgium.—The spring shipments have been got out under difficulties; that is, such as have gone. The Germans have offered no objection to such work as could be done without interference with military transportation and even have given some assistance here and there, but the volume of shipments, especially of bays, has been only a fraction of that of other years. They have gone by canal to Rotterdam, an uncertain route.

Ghent, Belgium.—In these parlous days no one can foretell events by a week, let alone months, but it seems in early spring that the usual autumn shipments will go out. Conditions here are by no means so bad as most of the reports that come filtering back from the outside. There has been comparatively little business for months and the loss of stock during the unusually cold winter has been large; also the spring was extremely wet and unfavorable for outdoor work, but there are likely to be all the azaleas that can be sold, especially of the larger sizes.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

The Cattleya House.

Cattleyas are, in many cases, now in active growth and as the root action increases and pseudo-bulbs develop, more water will be found necessary. Plants which have not been overhauled for a year or two will require more copious waterings than such as have been recently repotted or rebasketed, and these latter will be benefited by weak doses of liquid cow manure or some of the commercial fertilizers. Be careful not to make the doses heavy, or more harm than good will result. Where dipping is impracticable, it is easy to mix up a tank or barrel of the liquid and apply through a Kinney pump. I know some growers say orchids do not need any food, but the best answer to that is the appearance and flowering qualities of fed versus unfed plants. Rather more shading will now be needed, but do not make it heavy. The dark green-leaved plants are never the freest bloomers. Leave air on night and day; a close atmosphere tends to make the plants soft and causes roots to ramble over the sides of receptacles instead of going into the compost. A spraying overhead once a day will now be beneficial to all cattleyas and lœlias.

Some May-Flowering Orchids.

Probably the most popular of all cattleyas blooming at this season is Cattleya Mossiæ. This is one of the most inexpensive cattleyas. It is also easily grown, free flowering and carries large, attractive flowers of excellent lasting qualities. Three to five flowers are usually carried on a sheath, occasionally six or seven. Every commercial grower handling orchids at all should try some Cattleya Mossiæ. Some may be had in flower for Easter; others will last until the middle of June.

C. Mendelii is another beautiful cattleya, possessing much substance, now in flower. It is getting scarce and is now high in price compared with C. Mossiæ. Some of C. gigas are also now in flower. This is one of the most noble of cattleyas and brings a higher market price than any other. As the flowers possess less substance than Mossiæ or Mendelii, it must be kept well shaded while in flower, as the blooms are easily scorched.

Lœlia purpurata is now at its best and lœlio-cattleyas and brasso-cattleyas are fairly abundant. These latter are striking and beautiful, but lack constitution and will never become market varieties. They prefer the warmest end of the cattleya house, which, by the way, also suits Cattleya gigas well.

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Miltonia vexillaria, the charming and useful summer orchid, is flowering now. At this season it succeeds best in a cool, shaded house, one, if possible, of a lean-to nature with a northern exposure. The flower spikes frequently get caught in the sheathing at the base of the growths, or between some of the leaves, and should be released before they become twisted or broken. These miltonias delight in a sunny house in winter, where the foliage takes on a bluish tint and becomes tough, and such plants always bloom earlier and more abundantly than those grown in shade.

CATTLEYA EDWARDI.

One of the hybrid orchids which attracted much attention at the recent spring show in the Grand Central Palace, New York, was Cattleya Edwardi, a hybrid between C. Schilleriana and C. gigas. The flowers are of medium size, with somewhat narrow sepals and petals of a deep rose color. The rather flat lip is lightly fringed with purple stripes, strongly resembling one of the parents, C. Schilleriana. C. Edwardi is a vigorous grower and produces its flowers from the new pseudo-bulb in the same way as C. gigas. It thrives particularly well in a temperature 5 degrees higher than that usually given cattleyas. One of its parents, C. gigas, does best in a similar temperature.

W. N. C.

A NEW CATTLEYA HYBRID.

John Tiplady, formerly gardener for A. B. Dick, at Lake Forest, Ill., but now connected with the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., says that orchid lovers ought to journey to Lincoln park, Chicago, sometime during the present moon, and ask Head Gardener Rudolph Schiele to show them his new Cattleya Mossiæ seedling, now in flower for the first time.

"This new and improved type of the much admired C. Mossiæ," says Mr. Tiplady, "demonstrates clearly what progress may be accomplished by hybridization. In color and size of flower and apparent constitution of plant, this hybrid is a decided improvement and an acquisition. It is beyond my ability to describe properly the color of this newcomer."

GREEN PETALS ON VON SION.

Enclosed you will find a specimen bloom of Narcissus Von Sion. Will you kindly tell me what is the matter with it? You will notice that the bloom is crowded with thick green petals between the regular yellow petals, so much so that the flower appears almost like a ball, with the green just the color of the stems. The blooms in the whole bed are like it.

M. T. A. J.—Kan.

The flower was much withered after its long journey. Outdoor flowers of Double Von Sion narcissi often come as described. This peculiarity seems to indicate a running out of the stock. In that case the bulbs should be lifted after the foliage has matured, and should be replanted in fresh soil, when the trouble will largely disappear.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

WEDDING FLOWERS AT FUNERAL.

Referring to the article in last week's issue of The Review, "Bride's Bouquet on Casket," we wish to say that about two years ago we furnished a bride's bouquet of white roses and valley, with shower, two bridesmaids' bouquets of pink roses and also a large plateau basket of pink roses such as would have been used for the table center for a wedding breakfast. This was for the funeral of a girl who was soon to have been married. The prospective husband insisted on using the same flowers as would have been used at the wedding, only four or five days distant. The bride's bouquet was placed at the head of the casket and the maids' bouquets at the foot, while the basket was placed in the center.

H. E. Wilson.

PUSH THE ROSE.

We have just read the article in The Review for May 13, "Quality Counts Before Price," written by George Rye, of Fort Smith, and we might add almost the same story to his in the past. We, however, placed our orders in such a way that we escaped to a great extent this year the same experience he has evidently had. We realize that there are not enough carnations to fill the Mothers' day demand and so push other flowers, roses especially, and find that the results are more than satisfactory. We get better roses than carnations and the people will "eat them up" here at $1.50 per dozen. If more florists would do the same thing there would be less complaint about the quality of the carnation stock being poor, and there is just cause for the complaint. We had one shipment of 400 flowers bought at top price that upon arrival were not worth the box they were packed in. Fortunately, we divided our orders up in 400 lots and scattered them over a number of sources of supply, figuring that in that way the shipments would not all be bad. The result was that while last year we had lots of Mr. Rye's trouble, this year out of 3,200 flowers only the one shipment we speak of was poor. All the rest came in good, salable shape.

And, speaking of Mothers' day, let us tell you of our trade. We advertised heavily, using large display in our leading local paper, and in only one issue did we mention any particular flower, and then we went strong on the rose. Results: We cleaned up every rose, daisy and sweet pea we had, besides the carnations. The people will take other flowers if Mr. Rye and others will educate them to it; it takes a little pushing at first, but what does not?

As for next Mothers' day, we make this statement now and know that results will back us up: We will use as many roses as carnations and our trade will take them as quickly as the carnations. Get away from the carnation, Mr. Rye, and you will not force the wholesaler (and I use the word force because we really do force him) to send out stock that will not stand a long journey. We would howl if he did not send us anything, and we howl if he sends us the best he probably can get, which we believe he does.

TREATMENT OF ASPARAGUS.

Should Asparagus plumosus or Sprengeri be pulled out or cut? How many years are the roots good enough to pay?

L. F. C.—Mich.

Asparagus plumosus or Sprengeri should always be cut, not pulled; pulling out the growths is likely to injure the crowns. If planted in good soil and well manured, asparagus should produce satisfactorily for three years.

JOURNEY OF THE JASMINE.

It is a far cry from southern Texas, whence soon will be coming the cape jasmynes for Memorial day, to southern China, from which this flower came originally, but the journey taken by the flower from its land of origin to its present place of productiveness was a much farther one. From the land of China, where its origin is a matter of legend, it was taken to the Cape of Good Hope, probably by early Dutch traders, to whom the cape route was the only way to the orient.

The first facts in its history that are known occurred in the middle of the eighteenth century. The sailing vessel Godolphin Indiaman, commanded by Captain Hutchinson, bore a plant of the cape jasmine, which had taken the captain's fancy, home to England. Here, according to an old botanist's book, "Mr. Gordon, the nurseryman, having obtained layers from the tree, propagated it so successfully that he is said to have gained more than 500 pounds sterling." Some of these plants found their way to South Carolina. It may be more than a coincidence that the city of Charleston, S. C., that was in the early days noted as the home in this country of the cape jasmine, was the native place of Dr. Alexander Garden, for whom the species to which the flower belongs—it is botanically known as Gardenia florida—was named by Linnaeus. From South Carolina, the cape jasmine spread throughout the south and found its way into many greenhouses in the north. When its popularity as a Memorial day flower grew so great that the greenhouse crops of it, which are naturally small at the time, could not meet the demand, the cape jasmine was grown outdoors for this purpose in the south. Alvin, Tex., is the center of this industry, and in the vicinity are acres devoted to the culture of the flower for this one holiday.

Boston, Mass.—Fine the Florist has incorporated for $5,000. The incorporators are Max Fine, Sylvia E. Fine and Jack Katz.

Westerly, R. I.—Louis Rankin, formerly of this town but lately of Philadelphia, has purchased the greenhouse of William B. Foster, on the Watch Hill-Westerly road. He will take up his residence here again.

Woburn, Mass.—A forest fire between Woburn and Lexington April 27, which burned over 100 acres of woodland, threatened the greenhouses and buildings of J. W. Howard, on Russell street. They were nearly surrounded by flames, but were saved by the Woburn firemen.

New Castle, N. H.—C. W. Eaton, now at Cambridge, Mass., has leased his greenhouses here to William Lefebber, of Schilder & Lefebber, Swarthmore, Pa. Mr. Lefebber will occupy the property June 1, and leases with the privilege of purchase at the expiration of the lease.

Smith's Ferry, Mass.—At the May meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club, at the greenhouses of Gallivan Bros., the club presented to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Gallivan a large cut glass dish. The June meeting will be held with O. D. Allyn, of Holyoke.

Newburyport, Mass.—Joseph J. Comley, who has gained much repute as a horseman, is the possessor of twin foals, both apparently in good health.

New Bedford, Mass.—Mrs. Mary Nisek is suing Benjamin Sutcliffe in the Superior court for $1,000 damages caused by a large tree on his property falling on her greenhouse, 22x23 feet, with which she was preparing to enter the florists' business. The accident occurred during the cold weather and nearly all the plants were killed.

Waltham, Mass.—The question whether greenhouse crops are real estate or personal property is the point at issue in the suit brought by the city of Waltham against Peirce Bros. to recover personal taxes of $153.97 for 1913 and $160.20 for 1914. The items in question are for "stock in trade," the plants growing in the Waverley Oaks road greenhouses of the firm. It is declared that Waltham is the only city in the state which assesses crops in greenhouses as personal property, and E. Allan Peirce and H. W. Peirce contend that this means a double assessment. The case may be carried to the Supreme court, and if Peirce Bros. win their case they may ask for a refund of the taxes of this kind which were paid in previous years under protest.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

CALLAS IN THE SOUTH.

Their Period of Rest.

Calla lilies are widely popular in the south for social purposes, as well as for cemetery bouquets and funeral designs. They are mostly grown in ground beds, and when so grown they make much finer flowers than when grown in pots. The only trouble is in carrying over the bulbs during the ripening or drying process, in summer. So many of the crowns rot that most southern growers have given up trying to carry them over, and simply throw them out when the flowering season is over and plant new bulbs in the fall.

The last two seasons I have departed from the usual methods of ripening them, and with good success. I have left the bulbs in the beds and kept them only in a semi-dormant condition, giving them enough water to keep the foliage green. In September I cut off most of the foliage and start them off slowly on their new journey. In this manner I have not lost a crown by rotting. One or two bulbs, under a gutter between two beds, had not been disturbed for years, and they grew so vigorously and flowered so profusely every season that I was led to adopt the method described. L.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

The Young Field Plants.

This season in the south has been a somewhat hard one on the young plants just set out. In the early spring it rained so constantly that it was impossible to prepare the ground for planting. Then from April 2 to May 2 it did not rain a drop and plants set out during that time suffered. Many died and some growers were compelled to resort to watering with the hose to save the plants. This is a makeshift remedy at best, and must be continued regularly until a rain comes, unless sufficient water can be given to soak the ground thoroughly at least four inches deep. Anyone who has tried this remedy once will understand the difficulties to be overcome and will only try it again as a last resource.

Copious rains have now fallen pretty generally. With constant cultivation, therefore, the plants should now make good growth. Run the cultivator after every rain, as soon as the ground is dry enough to work, and at least once every week during dry weather. The hoe also must be used, to cut down the weeds that the cultivator misses, but do not get so close to the plants as to injure the stems. Use the hands to pull the weeds around the base of each plant.

In pinching back the plants, make it a rule to go over them once a week and pinch each shoot as it is ready. It is better to do it in this way than to wait three weeks and then have to do a wholesale pinching. It will also insure a more regular flowering season.

It is fortunate to have a big crop on at the holidays, but a regular supply the whole season is preferable and more profitable.

Preparing Houses for Planting.

When solid beds are used, as is generally the case in the south, and the soil is a good, heavy clay, it is not always necessary to renew the soil every year. Remove only one to two inches of the top, add a good inch of cow manure and spade the whole bed over. This should be allowed to lie in a rough state until planting time comes, when it will have sweetened up and be in fine shape for preparation to receive the plants. Keeping the beds bone-dry for as long a period as possible will aid materially in killing the fungi that cause stem-rot. I strongly advise getting as many beds as possible ready now and letting the sun have full play on them until planting time.

Where benches are used it is always advisable to clean them out entirely. They always need more or less repairing and a good, hot whitewashing, but if it is possible to have them filled two weeks before planting time, by all means do so and let the soil get a thorough drying out. It is easy enough to wet them down the day before planting.

Stem-Rot in the South.

Stem-rot seems to be rather on the increase each year and is a serious menace in most places in the south. Last season, owing to the excessive drought, was not favorable to the growth of the fungi; hence considerably less loss resulted than usual. We experimented last year with formalin, in the strength advised by the experiment stations, viz., 200 to 1, but found no difference between the beds so treated and those untreated. I believe, however, this can be accounted for to a certain extent. Here, in the south, though the beds are soaked thoroughly with the mixture, in two days they are as dry as ever, so that it is possible the fungi are not entirely killed before the mixture has evaporated. It would be well, on the third day after first applying the mixture, to rake up the surface of the beds and give them another good application. Were it possible to retain the fumes in the soil at the first application, by covering the beds with some close material for a week, no other application might be needed, but it seems this would involve a greater outlay than giving a second dose.

A barrel force pump is, I think, the best medium for applying the formalin. It is scarcely necessary to say that the beds should be thoroughly soaked. I would advise every grower to try the remedy on at least some of his beds, and note the results. There is no danger of its injuring other plants in the house. Indeed, I soaked a few rows of growing carnations with it last season and no harmful results followed. L.

NEW FLOWER STORES

St. Maries, Idaho.—A. J. Russell, proprietor of the St. Maries Greenhouses, is planning to open a store in the west end of town.

Erie, Pa.—The Baur Floral Co. has established a branch store in the Commerce building. The main store, in the Marine Bank building, will be continued.

Lima, O.—A new store has been opened at 136 North Main street under the name of Feniger's Flower Shop. The management is the same as that of the store of the same name in Toledo.

Portland, Me.—The E. J. Harmon Co. opened its downtown store, at 493 Congress street, just in time for Mothers' day, the opening taking place May 8. The uptown store of the company is at 657 Congress street.

Virginia, Minn.—The Virginia Floral Co., which has had a salesroom in the Mesaba Street railway waiting station on Wyoming avenue, has rented the store building at 108 Mesaba avenue, and will make that its headquarters.

New Brighton, Pa.—The refrigerator for the flower store being opened by H. L. Thompson, the Rochester florist, at 813 Third avenue, was built by the Bernard Gloekler Co., of Pittsburgh. It weighs 2,200 pounds and is estimated to hold 1,800 blooms.

Farmer City, Ill.—The Peterson Floral Co., of Gibson City, has opened a branch establishment at the Hammer & Webb store. Claude Bergstrom is in charge.

Davenport, Ia.—Forber & Bird have moved into new quarters at 313 Brady street. Their new store, which is equipped with Buchbinder's fixtures, is attracting a great deal of attention.

Cumberland, Md.—The Flower Shop, formerly located at 53 North Liberty street, has moved a few doors nearer Baltimore street. Dussel Paupe is proprietor and Miss Paupe is manager.

Sterling, Ill.—Harry Bent, formerly in the newspaper business, has returned from Adrian, Mich., and will open a flower store in the Randolph Hotel building. Associated with him will be Mrs. Bent and a Mr. Henderson, an experienced florist, from Adrian, Mich.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—The opening of the store of the Westbrook Floral & Drug Co., April 23, drew a large number of visitors. A large refrigerator extends across the rear of the store, which is finished in pure white. In the rear and on the second floor is ample room for making up pieces of all kinds. J. H. Shine is the head decorator. The members of the firm are Fred N., Robert H., George A. and Samuel W. Westbrook.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Dallas, Tex.—Pursuant to a call recently issued by the Brown-Dawson Co., a meeting of its creditors was held, at which one-third in number and amount were represented. The Brown-Dawson Co. made a proposition to the creditors of an extension of one and two years, the indebtedness of each creditor to be evidenced by four notes of even date, payable on or before January 15, 1916; May 15, 1916; January 15, 1917; May 15, 1917, with interest at six per cent per annum, each note to be for twenty-five per cent of the full amount of the claim proved. A counter proposition was offered by a creditor, to the effect that one creditor or a committee be appointed to confer with Mr. Dawson, or any person designated by him and who at the time is in charge of the business of the firm, at least once every thirty days and see that overhead expenses are not increased, and that the assets are not being dissipated, such committee or individual representative to have free access to the books at all times and be able to make a report to the creditors of the exact financial condition of the concern. It was further proposed that in case the property or any part of it was sold, the proceeds should be immediately available to all creditors. The above proposition was accepted by vote and the following were elected to constitute a creditors' committee: H. R. Perkins, C. W. Robinson, Robert Nicholson, H. E. Johnson. The Brown-Dawson Co. started in business in August, 1913. Soon afterward E. P. Brown, the president of the concern, contracted tuberculosis and has been unable to remain actively in the business. In addition to this, the business conditions of the last year have been unfavorable. The statement submitted to the creditors showed liabilities of $12,000 with assets of nearly three times that amount, $33,000, but of not readily available character.

Springfield, Mass.—The fraudulent conveyance of some Pine street real estate by Nelson F. Higgins to his wife, Harriet E. Higgins, is alleged in an equity suit brought in the Superior court May 8 by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, against Mr. and Mrs. Higgins and Sidney A. Saunders, all of this city. The plaintiff sues to recover $517.28 on an account for goods sold to Mr. Higgins. The bill of complaint filed by the plaintiff states that Mr. Higgins is the payee named in a promissory note for $3,000, given him by Mr. Saunders. This note, which is dated April 30, 1914, is payable in yearly installments of $1,000 and is secured by a mortgage on personal property, consisting of stock and fixtures in the store at 150 State street, which Mr. Higgins sold to Mr. Saunders about a year ago. It is claimed that Mr. Higgins has commenced proceedings to foreclose the mortgage for default in payment of the first $1,000 installment. It is also claimed that Mr. Higgins conveyed the Pine street property to his wife by a deed dated April 23. This property was liable to be attached in an action at law against Mr. Higgins and it is alleged that this conveyance was made with intent to defraud creditors. A temporary restraining order was granted in the Superior court by Judge Hamilton to prevent Mr. Higgins from collecting on or disposing of the note, and enjoining Mr. Saunders from making any payment on it, and preventing Mr. and Mrs. Higgins from conveying or encumbering the Pine street property. William P. Hayes is the plaintiff's attorney.

Springfield, Mass.—Sidney A. Saunders filed a petition in bankruptcy May 11. His liabilities are scheduled as $6,236.23; his assets as $4,711.64.

Ransomville, N. Y.—Hearings in the bankruptcy case of John C., William L. and Harry J. Rogers, whose filing of voluntary petitions was reported in The Review of April 1, led to the reduction of the assets, May 7, from the original figure of $4,971. The testimony was heard in the court at Lockport. The case was adjourned for further hearing.

COVERED WITH RUST.

Our young carnation plants, which we purchased for next winter's blooming stock, are literally covered with what we suppose is rust. If these are planted in the field, will the rust disappear? If it does disappear, is there any danger of its reappearing next fall or winter, after the plants are placed in the greenhouse? Give us what information you can as to what is the best way to fight the disease while the plants are in the field.

S. E. C.—Kan.

Rust on carnations is caused by cultural conditions. It will appear or disappear, according to whether the conditions are favorable or unfavorable. When young stock is affected, the rust usually disappears soon after the plants are planted in the field. It will not reappear the next season, unless the cultural conditions are favorable to its development. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture is considered excellent for its prevention.

PROBABLY CARNATION MITE.

Under separate cover we are mailing you two carnation buds which are not as they should be. Can you give us any information as to the cause? A year ago, in May, about twenty-five per cent of them came this way, but in most cases the stems were hollow. We attributed the trouble at that time to overfeeding and having too much shade on the glass. This is the first appearance of it this season and they have not been overfed. We have 3,000 plants and these are the first to be affected, but we do not wish it to get any worse if it can be helped.

J. B. H.—Ohio.

The specimens submitted showed every evidence of having been injured by the carnation mite, except that the usual cluster of eggs was not present. The absence of these may not have any special significance, however. I would suggest that you spray frequently with the tobacco extracts during the rest of this blooming season. Then, before replanting the benches for next season, fumigate the houses with sulphur or a strong dose of hydrocyanic acid gas. These mites have been quite destructive in certain sections in recent years. Growers who failed to exercise proper caution in dealing with the pest when it made its appearance would suddenly find their carnations so badly infested that a large percentage of the crop would be destroyed before it could be got under control. All such blooms should be cut off and burned right away. To throw them into the walk or under the benches is as bad as to leave them on the plants, as the eggs will hatch about as well in one place as another. A. F. J. B.

MAY BE LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS.

I am sending to you for identification a specimen of some variety of carnation. We got the variety several years ago, in a batch of rooted cuttings of Rose-pink Enchantress. We have found it to be a good grower and an easy rooter. It produces an abundance of cuttings along the flowering shoots and produces a large percentage of split flowers during the winter, but the color is attractive and it sells well in our retail store. I should like to know its name, as we have several thousands in the field. When we wrote to the people from whom we originally got the stock, they suggested that it might be Lawson-Enchantress, but they were not sure. Will you kindly let us know the name of the variety?

D. H. M.—Pa.

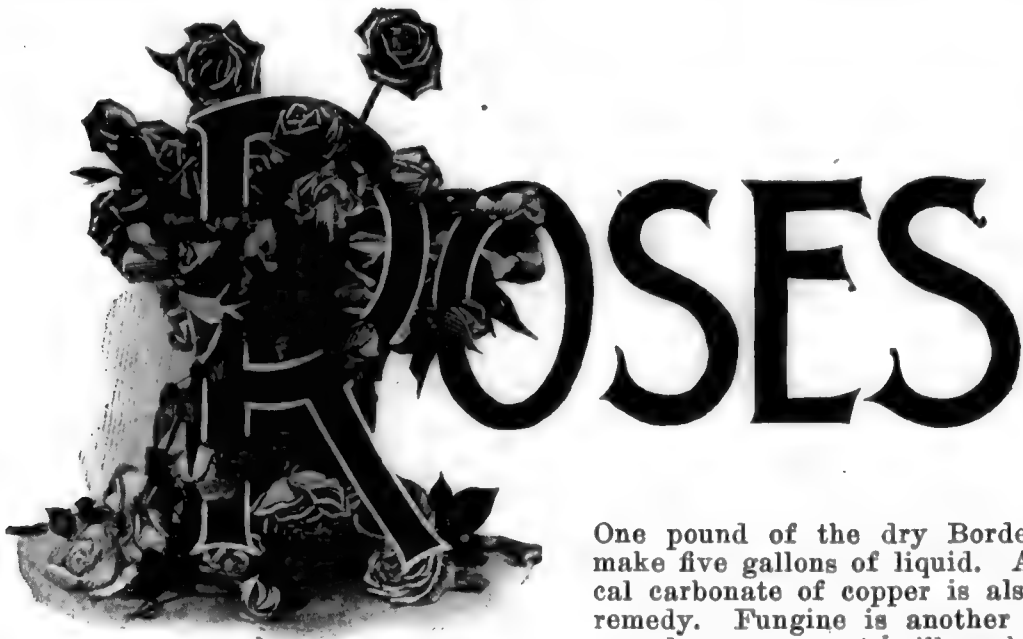

We have not seen the variety Lawson-Enchantress for several years, but believe the plant you sent is that variety. There is at least a striking similarity. This variety did not take well with the trade, on account of its splitting propensities and the softness of the petals, but that is no reason why you should not grow it if you find your trade likes it. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION WASHINGTON.

Kindly give a description through The Review of Carnation Washington, in regard to color, popularity and productiveness.

L. N. B.—Ohio.

Washington is the dark pink sport of Enchantress. It originated at Joliet, Ill., being disseminated by the Chicago Carnation Co. In spite of its relation to the Enchantress family, it has not caught on, many growers comparing it to Rose-pink Enchantress rather than to Enchantress or White Enchantress. A few of those who have tried it have later planted it largely, but in the majority of cases some other dark pink has been used, at least by the carnation specialists. No fault is found with its productiveness.

RESULTS WITH MRS. RUSSELL.

The Mrs. Russell rose seems to have made not nearly so great a success in the east as it has in the middle west, where it has sold during its second year, practically at all times, at better prices than American Beauty of the same length of stem—most of the time at prices, for the best grade, fully as good as the price of the best Beauties. The results have been such that, if anything approximately as good can be obtained in the next year, it will fully justify the large increase in plantings that has taken place this spring.

Thus far comparisons have been with Beauty, but for the future no doubt comparisons will be with Killarney. During April and the early part of May, when practically all markets were glutted with roses and all other seasonable flowers, there was a big cut of Russell. It is interesting to note that during the worst of the glut, when prices were as low as ever were known, Russell made everywhere a far better average price than any other rose except Beauty. One large grower reports three times as much for Russell as for any other rose; a commission man reports averaging for Russell nearly four times what an inexperienced Killarney grower got and more than twice what he made for his best Killarney grower.

In order to make Russell pay it must return better prices than Killarney, but it can be grown considerably cheaper than Beauty.

From a seller's point of view one of the best things about Russell is its keeping quality. It can be held longer than other roses and it invariably ships well, always giving satisfaction to the buyer. The public is already beginning to appreciate its lasting properties.

MILDEW ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

I am being asked every day what to do for mildew on roses growing in the open. Some complain of the mildew on ramblers and others on tea roses. It cannot be due to cloudy, damp weather, as we are having an unusually dry season for this part of Texas at this time of the year. I have thousands of roses in the open, but I keep the ground well cultivated and have never been bothered in this way.

M. S. B.—Tex.

There are various remedies which you can apply. Bordeaux mixture is good.

One pound of the dry Bordeaux will make five gallons of liquid. Ammoniacal carbonate of copper is also a good remedy. Fungine is another excellent remedy; one quart will make twelve and one-half gallons of spraying liquid. Sulphocide is another useful remedy. Flowers of sulphur and Slug Shot can be applied dry through a powder bellows, preferably when the foliage is moist with dew in the early morning.

ROSES FROM SEED.

We should like to get some information on how to handle rose seeds. What is the proper soil in which to plant the seeds? What temperature do they require? Is it necessary to frost the seeds before starting them? How long do the seeds have to be dried before being ready for use? How long does it take the seeds to come up after planting?

L. & D.—Ind.

Loam, with a good proportion of sand added, will be a suitable soil. A cool greenhouse is better for the purpose than a warm one. Pick the seeds as soon as they are ripe. Stratify in moist sand in order to eat away the fleshy part; then rub the seeds out between the hands. Keep them moderately warm and the flesh will decay more quickly. Sow as soon as possible after taking from the sand. This insures earlier and more even germination.

It is impossible to tell what length of time will be required for germination. Some varieties will appear in a few weeks, others not for eighteen months to two years. No matter whether you sow in flats, which is the best plan, or in a bed outdoors, it is best to wait two seasons for the seedlings. Some may appear one season and others a year later, from the same batch of seeds.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Executive Committee Meeting.

At the executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society held in New York city May 10, the registration of the new rose, Champ Weiland, was ordered published. The description of it by Weiland & Risch, Chicago, Ill., is as follows:

A sport of Killarney, originating in our establishment at Evanston, Ill., and under deepest scrutiny for the last three seasons. Buds large and full. Color a bright, clear, glistening pink, inner and reverse side of petals identical and fadeless. More free than the parent and more sweetly scented. Foliage remarkable, of a glowing reddish character prevalent from planting time to end of season. It may be said that this rose represents a distinct advance in growth and grandeur over any of its predecessors.

According to the rules adopted by the American Rose Society for registration of new roses, at the end of three weeks, if there is no objection received, it will stand as a registered variety.

The June rose show to be held in Bronx park, New York, was a matter of discussion, and it was resolved to offer a silver medal and two bronze medals as special prizes, in addition to the regular prizes offered in the schedule of the New York Horticultural Society; that is, to offer these three medals as sweepstake prizes for the following:

A silver medal for the best collection of outdoor-grown roses.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid teas outdoor grown.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid perpetuals outdoor grown.

The matter of affiliated societies was considered, and the societies that have already joined under the present arrangement are the Syracuse Rose Society, Rev. E. M. Mills, president, with 244 members; the Garden Association, of Newport, R. I., Dr. Roderick Terry, president, with 100 members; the Newport Garden Club, of Newport, R. I., Mrs. C. F. Hoffman, president, with fifty members; the Brooklands Rose Society, of Brooklands, D. C., Mrs. Carrie Harrison, secretary, with thirty-nine members; the Country Club, of Joplin, Mo., Burt W. Lyon, president, with seventy-two members.

SEEKING BASKET MATERIAL.

One disadvantage which American industry suffered through the European war has been the cutting off of supplies of reed used in the manufacture of florists' baskets and also for furniture, baby carriages, etc. This formerly came in large part from Hamburg, Germany, but the German government at the beginning of the war placed an embargo on its export and American basketmakers and other manufacturers have been in many cases unable to continue operations because of a lack of raw material.

After the war broke out greater attention was attracted toward a supply said to exist in the Philippines. An investigation was instituted by the United States Department of Commerce and it was discovered that extensive supplies of a good grade of rattan were growing in the Philippine forests, but that no organization for export existed and there were many difficulties in the way of gathering and preparing the rattan and sending it to this country. While there are several grades of rattan which are of no value for manufacturing purposes, there are considerable supplies of the better grades in most of the provinces of the islands. The matter of getting it to Manila and exporting it regularly is the principal problem in the situation to be solved, and this problem is viewed from several angles in the report. It is suggested that possible plans of establishing an export industry are (1) an arrangement for gathering rattan by the existing firms handling lumber or other forest products; (2) purchase of supplies from the present concessionaires who are now engaged in buying comparatively small quantities from the natives for local uses, and (3) the establishment of an organization devoted exclusively to the handling of rattan.

FIRES

La Grange, Ill.—Fire which originated in the barn of John Gale, 626 North Kensington avenue, spread to four sections of his greenhouses, causing a damage of about $600 recently. There is no insurance.

Newcastle, Ind.—In the interval between the departure of the night fireman and the arrival of the day fireman, about 6 a. m., May 8, a fire broke out in the boiler room at the north end of the range of the South Park Floral Co. The shed was in flames when the day fireman appeared, and hard work by Superintendent Lennon and others was necessary to keep the blaze from reaching the houses. The damage consisted of the destruction of the boiler room and an end of one of the plant houses, in which were several hundred young plants of Hoosier Beauty rose. Myer Heller estimates the loss at about $1,500, covered by insurance.

PELARGONIUM LEAVES RUSTY.

Will you tell me how to grow Pelargonium Easter Greeting so that the leaves will not look rusty? What is the cause of this rusty appearance?
C. F.—Ohio.

The trouble in question may be due to several causes. Injudicious watering, both as to quantity and time, may be a factor. Pelargoniums, like geraniums, should be grown on the dry side. The many queries in The Review regarding diseased geraniums could be answered quite largely by this: "Injudicious watering." Never water at a time when the conditions will prevent foliage from drying before night. In growing pelargoniums and geraniums, be careful of night temperatures. Keep close to 50 degrees, rather below than above. The atmosphere should be as dry, as possible. A leaky pipe may spell damage.

Give your plants a balanced ration. This may sound like a dairyman's advice. I believe it suits plants as well as cows. I am sure that by injudicious feeding we may grow a plant abnormal in fiber and tissue, and thus invite disease. A normal plant has strong resistant powers, and when we weaken the tissue we weaken this resistance. I believe you feed your plants too strong food. In growing pelargoniums and geraniums, I use a clay-loam-sod compost, free of manure, and pot firmly. This firm potting conserves the moisture and seems to suit their requirements. Give your plants light and air. They will not thrive in a shaded, out-of-the-way place. I believe there is no plant so easily grown as Easter Greeting pelargonium. The constitution is strong and the habit is perfect. They never need trimming to secure shapely plants.

I would like to remark here, in connection with the balanced ration idea, that greater care should be used in feeding potted plants than bedded plants. In the former case we confine the roots, and compel them to "eat what we give them." In the latter, they take their choice. What would founder a potted plant might boost a bedded one.

EARLY OUTDOOR TOMATOES.

We have a number of tomato plants, about twelve inches high, in bloom and some with small tomatoes on them. If these are placed in the garden now, will they produce any earlier fruit than the small transplanted plants about four inches high? We are told these blooms will blight when the plants are placed in the garden. What is the proper method to follow to get earlier tomatoes than we get from the ordinary small plants? These plants are in 3-inch and 4-inch pots. S. E. C.—Kan.

Give the tomato plants a shift into pots a size larger, so that they will not become too much potbound before being planted out. They will give fruit quite a little in advance of the later transplanted stock, but you must not allow them to become potbound before planting out. Plant out just as soon as danger from frost has passed. Do not worry about the blooms blighting. I have used plants treated in this way for a quarter of a century and never failed to have a crop much earlier than from the later transplanted ones.
C. W.

STUNTED TOMATOES.

Will you tell us why our tomatoes on benches and in beds formed only small fruits, about the size of flat marbles, for over six weeks? Some of them have ripened at that size. The plants were stunted before we planted them from small pots over ten weeks ago, but have since made a growth of from four to six feet. I trained two stems to each plant. The varieties are Comet, Superior and Burpee's Best.
A. W.—Okla.

If your tomato plants were allowed to become potbound and stunted before being benching, there is little wonder that the fruits are small. You cannot get satisfactory results from any plants, no matter whether they produce flowers, fruits or vegetables, if the roots have become matted before planting out. There is nothing you can do now to improve conditions, but another season it will pay to pot the plants along if your benches are not ready for them, rather than run any risk of the balls becoming matted with roots. C. W.

QUANTITY OF LIME PER ACRE.

How much lime per acre can be used successfully, and what is the best way to apply it?
W. W. M.—Colo.

Everything depends on the condition of the soil. Use blue litmus paper and ascertain whether your soil is really acid. From 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre can be used, sometimes 3,000 pounds. If a lime spreader operated by a horse can be had, this is the best means of distribution, but hand spreading is often resorted to on small areas. Fall is the best time to apply lime.

BUSY ON BOILER BILL.

Florists through the state of Illinois are responding energetically to the appeal in last week's Review to fight the bill for the examination and licensing of firemen of steam boilers carrying a pressure of more than ten pounds or working more than 5,000 feet of radiation. Final action has not been taken in the lower house up to this writing, though, as stated last week, the bill was scheduled for its third reading this week. It is thought that the more time passes before the bill comes up for the final test the greater opportunity the florists will have to defeat the measure, for practically all that is necessary is for them to show to the legislators how undesirable the law would be. Even if the bill passes the lower house before the florists have time to stop it, they will still have opportunity to defeat it in the senate.

George B. Franks, of Thomas Franks & Son, Champaign, Ill., who has been in politics long enough to be a past master at the art of wire-pulling, has enlisted the aid of the three members of the lower house from his district, the Twenty-fourth. They are Wm. F. Burres and Francis E. Williamson, of Urbana, and Chas. A. Gregory, of Lovington. Similar activity on the part of many other members of the trade throughout the state is hoped to accomplish the overthrow of the bill in short order.

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Market.

The growers would much rather have had Mothers' day come two or three weeks' earlier this year. The cut of carnations was not nearly so large as it had been; the weather was fair, but the carnations were not on the plants to cut. The florists did not have enough to supply the demand. Telegrams were sent all over to near shipping points; but they could not be bought at any price. All white carnations were sold for $5 per hundred and pink and red at $4 per hundred. The cut of roses was splendid, and when carnations were not available the retailers resorted to roses. Snapdragons sold well for Mothers' day, and are now just about all gone. Potted plants sold well, also.

After Mothers' day was over, there was a big call for carnations, and orders had to be turned away. The price of carnations dropped to normal, which was $3 per hundred for the best grade in all colors. Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Beatrice and Hillingdon roses dropped to $4, $6 and $8 per hundred, while before they had been sold at $1 per hundred more. Shawyer, Taft, etc., are in big demand and still sell from $5 to $10 per hundred.

On account of the early and exceedingly dry season and light snowfall throughout the winter, it is predicted that Utah will have a great scarcity of water for irrigation purposes, and this condition will affect all florists throughout this entire intermountain country. The last few days there has been a warm wind blowing from the south and the sun is scorching hot, which is bringing the outdoor flowers in early. Lilacs are about all gone, but they are followed by peonies and snowballs. Due to the extremely hot weather that has

We hand you herewith check for $26.60 in payment of the enclosed statement.

We wish to express our complete satisfaction with the results obtained from our ad in The Review and will state that we received several hundred replies to same.

The result in sales from the sample we sent out according to the offer in the ad have been very satisfactory from every standpoint. It has put us in touch with many of the most prominent florists in the United States.

Send your representative to us on receipt of this letter and we will give him copy for an ad for this week.

Very truly yours,

prevailed, it is predicted that the flowering season for early outdoor garden stock will be over by Memorial day and that there will be a large demand for greenhouse stock. Gladioli are coming along fast, and there will be a large cut of them soon. All that can be obtained at present are disposed of at $1 per dozen.

Carnation plants are now planted out in the field, and are looking fine.

Various Notes.

The Huddart Floral Co. reports that Mothers' day business was exceptionally good. They had a shortage of carnations, but roses and plants took well.

The B. C. Morris Floral Co. says that they thought Mothers' day was going to be somewhat slow, but the last two days before Sunday they found themselves head over heels in work.

E. A. Lambourne says that he had a remarkably good business, and that the sales on roses greatly surpassed his anticipation. He did not have nearly enough carnations.

The Evans Floral Co. has been busy with funeral and design work. They report an increase over last year for Mothers' day business.

Charles Soter reports that he handled a large stock of roses, carnations and potted plants, and that Mothers' day business greatly surpassed that of a year ago.

Wm. Sorensen, of the Intermountain Floral Co., reports business quite good.

The Miller Floral Co., at Farmington, reports that the shipping business for Mothers' day greatly surpassed expectations. The demand for pot plants is increasing all the time, and the company is planning to add another house to the plant department at once. Shawyer has proved a valuable addition to the standard roses and is in demand at all the leading retail stores. Ophelia has also proved a valuable variety, and will be grown more extensively another season.

The Sander Floral Co. reports large sales for Mothers' day and an increase in business.

Elizabeth Huth, of the Flower Shop, Ogden, reports that she had a good Mothers' day business, much better than last year's. O. F.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—A petition protesting that the park commission of the city, the park superintendent and his assistants are performing work other than for the city of Wilkes-Barre and by so doing are entering into unfair competition with florists, seedsmen and nurserymen, has been presented by Ira G. Marvin, A. W. B. Evans, Mooney & Weir, A. W. Moore, Gottlieb Baumann, John Mattern, Davies & Fine, Carr Bros., George Schlingmann, W. J. Stroh, the Wyoming Valley Nursery Co., Edward T. Moyer and William G. Neilson. A conference with Superintendent Edward B. Morgan and Park Supervisor Charles L. Seybold was held in an effort to put a stop to the work complained of.

HAIL STORMS

Kankakee, Ill.—The hail storm that cut gashes through the state May 15 hit four of the local greenhouse establishments. Charles Schafer, Faber Bros., A. H. Burt and Frank C. Splear each suffered about alike, some 500 lights of glass being broken at each place. Gustave Raasch escaped with only an insignificant loss.

HAIL AT EL PASO, ILL.

Hail drove in every pane of glass in the eleven greenhouses of the El Paso Carnation Co., El Paso, Ill., on the afternoon of May 15. The hail was of such size that no glass could withstand it, and the falling glass and ice destroyed, in addition, about half the pot plants that occupied a part of the houses, damaging more or less those that were not destroyed. The carnation plants recently moved to the field also were destroyed. The establishment contained about 30,000 feet of glass and was insured by the Florists' Hail Association. The officers of the company are: President, Dr. R. E. Gordon; treasurer, L. K. Evans; secretary and manager, C. L. W. Snyder. New glass was ordered at once and a large force of workers set at the task of clearing the eleven houses of wreckage, which was expected to be accomplished by May 19, so that a thorough painting can be begun May 20, to be followed by reglazing.

Business with the company has been running ahead of all previous records steadily for the whole of the last year, and for the present is being handled with stock obtained from Chicago. There has been almost a normal business since the storm and the setback that has been given the company is taken as all in the day's work; it will not do more than necessitate a little extra effort to overcome it.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

M. Fenton, West Newton, Pa., has sold his greenhouses to W. Wissing, formerly at Elkins, W. Va., who will take charge June 1. Mr. Fenton will conduct a variety store in West Newton.

Jas. Schell, South Connellsville, Pa., is growing some of the finest geraniums seen in this section of the country.

P. R. DeMuth & Son, Connellsville, Pa., are cutting some nice carnations and roses.

Fred M. Ruppert, Cumberland, Md., is busy with plants and seeds.

Russell C. Paupe, of the Flower Shop, Cumberland, has opened a new store, in which he is better able to handle his business. He intends to use some new ideas in furnishings in decorating the new store.

John Paul, of Cumberland, is having a great deal of funeral work and a good counter trade.

John A. Bopp, Cumberland, is in the midst of a heavy plant rush.

Ralph E. Weber, of the H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., has left with his family for Oregon, where he intends to engage in fruit growing and stock raising. The company's store at Clarksburg, W. Va., is busy with plants, and reports a good business in funeral work and counter trade. They are showing some fine iris.

A heavy wind storm broke the plate glass window in the J. W. Dudley & Sons Co. store at Clarksburg, Sunday, May 16. The damage was small.

S. P. Smith, Mercer, Pa., has been busy lately turning out funeral work.

William Baird, Greenville, Pa., has his houses well filled with plants for the coming season. W. T. U.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

J. Bennett, Blue Point, L. I., grows carnations that are as well known as the famous Blue Point oyster, but this year the bivalve has brought the best returns.

W. W. Kennedy & Sons, Ped Bank, N. J., have a fine strain of pansies from their own selection of seed, and find these to be a strong leader at the planting season.

Frank McMahon, Rumson, N. J., says the combination of low prices and mildew are not encouraging. He is one of the few rose growers near the ocean and has been most successful.

Wm. Struve & Sons, Perth Amboy, N. J., expect to transfer their activities to Manchester, Ala., where they have a farm of 300 acres being developed by one of the firm.

W. G. Eisele, West End, and William Bryan, Elberon, N. J., anticipate a good season. They cater to the best trade of Long Branch. Early arrivals at this select resort give evidence of the coming of a good summer business.

Martin C. Ribsam, Trenton, N. J., reports a banner season, with a possibility of its being the best ever, both in seeds and plants.

Philadelphia bids fair to secure the title of Spotless Town. May 3 to 8 was designated as clean-up time, presumably in preparation for the celebration of Mothers' day. An instructive exhibition in City Hall Square shows the possibilities of beautifying waste spots. It bears the earmarks of a leading seed house, although no name is allowed to appear. The porch boxes and grass and exhibits are distinctive. Practically everything necessary to the successful making of a garden is seen and the size of the crowds interested augurs well. Billy Sunday made an early sowing that brought him big returns and the seedsmen are promised an equally profitable harvest, judging by the present outlook. W. M.

TEXAS MEETING DATE CHANGED.

One Week Earlier.

Confusion in regard to the date of the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association has arisen from the fact that the change from the original, widely-advertised time of meeting was made without special emphasis being placed upon this fact. President R. C. Kerr is now doing his best to dispel this confusion and, so effective are his efforts, there should no longer be any question that Tuesday and Wednesday, July 6 and 7, are the dates on which the members of the trade in Texas and from other southern states will meet at Fort Worth. The original date conflicted with other state meetings, and a number of Texas florists thought that a week earlier would be more advantageous to florists in general. Mr. Kerr expresses the expectation that the earlier date will give a better attendance and therefore a more successful convention.

Fairmont, Ia.—John McCullough & Son, of Reinbeck, Ia., have purchased land here and will erect a greenhouse.

Grand Ledge, Mich.—Doty & Huggett are adding another 25x114 house, to meet the increasing demand for their plants.

Dexter, Me.—Fred Young is erecting a greenhouse on School street. The establishment will be conducted by his daughter, Miss Mollie Young.

Macomb, Ill.—Frank Bonham is adding a greenhouse 14x100 feet to his range in the east part of the town. When this is completed, he will have 18,000 square feet of glass.

Greenfield, Mich.—Thomas F. Brown has contracted with the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, for what is probably the largest single-span greenhouse in the state of Michigan. It is to be 84x600, built with truss and only two lines of purlin posts.

Fairmont, Minn.—John McCullough & Son, who have greenhouses at Reinbeck, Ia., have purchased a 2-acre tract of land on Albion avenue, where they will erect a range at once. Improvements on the property will be begun immediately, and the building will be started in June.

Anoka, Minn.—The Anoka Greenhouse Co. will remodel its boiler house this spring and rebuild one greenhouse. Business has been quiet since Easter.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—S. Jacobs & Sons have the contract for the alterations at the establishment of Klugman & Schneirow, at 386 Kings Highway. They are to cost about $1,000.

Walla Walla, Wash.—The Walla Walla Hot House Vegetable Co. is putting up another range of houses. The ventilating apparatus is to be furnished by the John A. Evans Co., of Richmond, Ind.

Springfield, N. J.—Dr. Watson B. Morris and J. Neil Jakobsen, both of this town, have purchased a 5-acre tract at Westfield and Mountain avenues. They expect to build greenhouses on the land.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The Ann Arbor Greenhouse Co., of which Clarence Lennon is the moving spirit, will increase its glass area fifty per cent this season; three houses are to be built, each 32x300, the present range consisting of six houses of this size. A contract has just been placed with the Moninger Co., Chicago, for material, including heating system for all nine houses.

OBITUARY

J. F. Zimmerman.

J. F. Zimmerman, of Alliance, O., 53 years of age, was struck by the Toledo flyer at 6:40 Saturday evening, May 8, while delivering flowers in his automobile, and died seven hours later in the city hospital. The force of the crash threw the victim fifty feet from the place of collision. For some unknown reason Mr. Zimmerman failed to respond to the crossing watchman's signal, and was upon the track when he noticed how close the train was. He attempted to reverse his engine and back off the tracks, but was too late. The train was going at about forty miles an hour, and completely demolished the car. Death was due to internal injuries, for a broken rib, a broken collar-bone and some bruises and cuts were the extent of his external hurts.

Mr. Zimmerman was born in North Georgetown, O., and moved to Alliance when a young man, being employed for a time as bookkeeper by the Pennsylvania Co. He married Miss Katherine Nye, of Canton, in 1882. He had been engaged in the flower business for over twenty years, and served two terms in the city council about fourteen years ago. Surviving him are his widow, one sister, Mrs. Emma Haas, and three brothers, Aleck, L. L. and Parke Zimmerman. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias, who held their service at the residence Tuesday evening, May 11. The funeral services were held at the home Wednesday afternoon, May 12. Interment was in the Alliance cemetery.

John Krumholz.

John Krumholz, of Detroit, Mich., died May 6 in Grace hospital after a long illness. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Krumholz was born in Detroit and had been engaged in the florists' business since he was a boy of 15 years. For many years he conducted a store at 823½ Superior street, and his greenhouses were at Conners Creek. For some time his son, Robert, has been connected with the business.

Surviving him are his widow, Augusta Krumholz, and five children, Mrs. Frank Neuhauser and Robert, Katherine, Cecilia and Ida Krumholz. Two brothers and three sisters also are living, Henry Krumholz, of Grosse Pointe; Joseph Krumholz, of Highland Park, and Mrs. Joseph Siegel, Mrs. Frank Bay and Mrs. Mary Walsh, of Detroit.

Funeral services were held at his home, 823 Superior street, May 10. Burial was at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

A. S. Myers.

A. S. Myers, senior member of the firm of Myers Bros., Mt. Joy, Pa., died Sunday, May 9, from a complication of diseases, at the age of 56. His wife, several children and grandchildren, and two brothers survive. He was connected with the Methodist church.

Fred Weir.

Fred Weir, one of the oldest figures in the Brooklyn trade, died Saturday evening, May 15, at the Norwegian hospital, at the age of 60. He was a son of James Weir, and with his brother John composed the firm of James Weir's Sons, which at one time operated greenhouses at Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street and a retail store at 324 Fulton street, Brooklyn. He was born in Bay Ridge and lived his entire life in Brooklyn, being connected with the florists' trade from boyhood. He leaves a wife and daughter. J. A. S.

John Hart.

John Hart, a former New York wholesale florist and well known along Twenty-eighth street in that city, died at Bellevue hospital Friday, May 14. J. A. S.

Edwin Larkin.

Edwin Larkin, 71 years old, of 347 South Eighteenth street, Newark, N. J., who, Wednesday, May 5, was run over by a truck at Broad and Market streets, died from the result of his injuries, at the City hospital, on Thursday, May 13. The funeral was held at his late residence, Monday, May 17, at 8:30 a. m., thence to St. Antoninus's church, where a solemn high mass of requiem was offered. Interment was in the Cemetery of the Hody Sepulcher. R. B. M.

August Exstrand.

August Exstrand, 62 years old, an employee of the Snelling Floral Co., Snelling avenue and West Seventh street, St. Paul, was found dead in his bed at the greenhouses Saturday night, May 8, shortly after 8 o'clock, by W. Swanson, one of the proprietors. An empty glass found on a table beside the bed was believed by the police to have contained poison, pointing to suicide. The body was removed to the morgue for an autopsy. Three sons and two daughters survive Mr. Exstrand.

ROOTING PELARGONIUMS.

Please tell me whether the cuttings of show pelargoniums should be shaded, and state how to care for them so as to obtain the best result in root-making time. I have some grand plants from 6-inch up to 14-inch pots, but last year I lost a great many cuttings.

C. L.—S. D.

Perhaps you are not propagating at the correct season. Spring cuttings are soft and liable to damp off. The best propagating time is after the plants have done blooming and have been standing outdoors a short time. August is a good month for this work. The cuttings are then tolerably hard and there will be practically no damping off. Give a light shade and you will find a coldframe better than a greenhouse for the cuttings. C. W.

Newsy Items from All Over

Tarentum, Pa.—An illustrated write-up in the Tarentum News for May 7 may have helped the Mothers' day business of the Tarentum Floral Co. At any rate, it was all the firm could handle. George Williams has charge of the four 300-foot houses of the concern, and Gus Lehman of the downtown store, on Fourth avenue.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Damages of $4,600 against the Wabash Railroad Co. were awarded W. J. & M. S. Vesey in the Federal court at Indianapolis May 8. During the flood of March, 1913, the St. Mary's river inundated the Vesey greenhouses; piling placed in the river bed by the railroad when repairing a trestle was alleged the cause of the overflow.

Cleveland, O.—At a conference at the Hollenden hotel April 26 of representatives of the Garden Club, the Ohio Horticultural Society and the Cleveland Florists' Club, plans were laid for the November show of the Florists' Club. Frank A. Friedley and H. P. Knoble represented the florists. The show will be held in the Wigmore coliseum, on East Thirteenth street, near Euclid avenue.

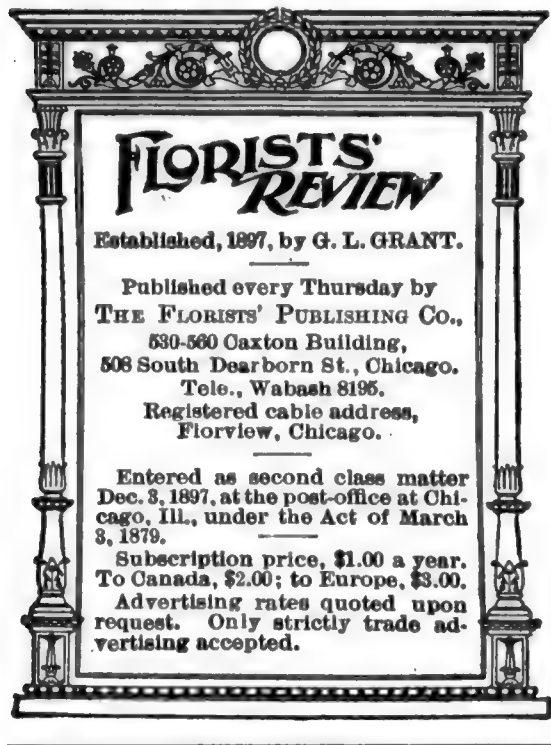

Fairmont, Minn.—John Leng, formerly at Truman, Minn., and lately in the employ of the Fairmont Nurseries, here, has, with Startvig Sjevik, who sold his greenhouse business at Silverton, Ore., about a year and a half ago, purchased one city block on Albin avenue. On this they will erect three greenhouses and an office, having commenced work already, and conduct the business under the name of the Fairmont Greenhouse Co. Both men are experienced growers, and Mr. Sjevik is also a landscape gardener of experience.

Corry, Pa.—D. F. Southworth, formerly at 58 South Pearl street, North East, Pa., has taken over the North Corry Greenhouses, at 16 West Columbus avenue. The establishment consists of two 100-foot greenhouses and a store. As the location is near two cemeteries and a trolley line, Mr. Southworth expects a flourishing trade.

Cleveland, O.—Following a plan originated by a Chicago paper, the Plain Dealer has been advertising the advertising in its own columns, calling attention to certain classes of advertisements it wants to build up. Just before Mothers' day a fine half-page display told its readers of the advantage of watching the ads of flowers. It gave the trade a good boost.

Manila, P. I.—The Luzon Floral Co. has been incorporated by E. L. Poole, A. M. Darley, Sebastian Flores, Raymundo Monahan and Julian Viroya, of this city. The capital stock is 16,000 pesos, or $8,000, all of which has been subscribed and paid in. The business now known by the same name has been turned over to the corporation as part payment of the stock subscriptions. Mr. Darley is treasurer of the firm.

Loveland, O.—Theodore Harcourt for seven years has been nursing a white rose supposed to be a seedling. It blooms in crops about four or five weeks apart, but never makes a blind shoot. It is a much stronger grower than any other white rose Mr. Harcourt ever has grown, more double, more fragrant and more productive, but it does not root readily, as the wood is quite soft. He calls it the Dr. Palmer rose, after a friend, and invites the examination of rose specialists who may be interested.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Good ferns are good property again this spring. There usually is a glut in the autumn and a scarcity in early summer.

HAIL is playing a machine-gun tune over the greenhouses in the middle west again this spring, but most of the losses have been comparatively small thus far.

GROWERS for wholesale markets are quite generally dropping the Mrs. Aaron Ward rose this season, popular as it has been with the public for corsage purposes.

How do you feel when you see yesterday's customer at the door today; do you advance with a smile or with doubt? There's the key to the correctness of your business policy.

It now appears that the number of plants of the Mrs. Russell rose benched this season would have been considerably larger had some of the propagators had better success with their grafts.

EVEN the angel Gabriel must blow his own horn, and the man who points out the good qualities of his wares shows that he is a good salesman. But the man who knocks a competitor reveals his lack of selling ability and a want of confidence in his own wares.

THERE is the usual excellent early demand for geraniums in bloom. Year after year it happens that stock that is ready is cleaned up by the early buyers without satisfying the demand; then, later, when everybody has his plants in bloom, there is a surplus that cleans up slowly.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Rothe, Max H., Philadelphia, Pa.
Dieterich, C. P., & Bro., Maysville, Ky.
Forest, Jacob, Greenfield, Ind.
Schrodt, Henry, Taylorville, Ill.
Cowan Bros., Terre Haute, Ind.
Wiffin, Grant, Des Plaines, Ill.
Thomas, V. H., Augusta, Ky.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

ENTHUSIASM.

The reports on Mothers' day, in last week's issue of The Review, made interesting reading, especially for those who have been at work to build up, for the good of the trade, the flower business for this particular event. There is frequent prediction that Mothers' day is destined to become the big day of the year, and in several places it is noted the day this year was "better than Easter." Such enthusiasm is inspiring—it will lead to still greater efforts next year—but it seems doubtful if the day has as yet become all that one might think from a perusal of the reports. While an individual's sales here and there may have exceeded the record of other recent special flower days, it is open to question if any of the important flower centers found Mothers' day "better than Easter" except in the general tone of the market—the quantities of stock handled were much less and it seems inconceivable that the money value of sales the one Sunday anywhere approached those of the other, although it is quite clear the average price of carnations may have exceeded that of Christmas as well as Easter.

Have you noticed that for general satisfaction the tone of the market frequently counts for more than the number of dollars put in the till? The average man, it seems, would rather sell a small quantity of flowers at stiff prices than to sell a large quantity at smaller prices.

GLADIOLUS SOCIETY OF OHIO.

Will Hold Show in Cleveland.

The next annual exhibition of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio will be held in the Hollenden hotel assembly rooms, as last year, at Cleveland, O., August 13 and 14. Previous exhibitions of the society have been most gratifying and successful, and a premium list is being prepared for the coming show which, it is expected, will be equal to any yet sent forth.

Wilbur A. Christy, Sec'y-Treas.

SWEET PEA SHOW POSTPONED.

On account of the recent long wet spell in California, the date of the San Francisco show of the American Sweet Pea Society has been changed from June 4 to June 23 and 24. Frank G. Cuthbertson reports that sweet peas in California are now in vigorous growth and all buds dropped.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, May 19, 1915.

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Rains for two days, except extreme northern districts, followed by generally fair weather during remainder of week. Continued low temperatures first half of week, warmer later.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plain States—Generally fair over northern districts, followed by rain toward the end of the week in the extreme northwest, rising temperatures after Thursday. Rain Wednesday over central and southern districts, continuing Thursday over eastern sections; otherwise, generally fair weather during the week. Cool for two or three days, followed by rising temperatures.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Showers and continued cool weather during the first half of the week, followed by generally fair and warmer weather during the second half.

For the West Gulf States—Showers the first half of the week, followed by generally fair weather the second half; somewhat cooler about Thursday, followed by rising temperature Friday or Saturday and by moderate temperatures thereafter.

MONEY FOR EASTERN PATRONS.

The special feature in connection with the Classified Ad section of The Review this season has been the increase in the number of far eastern florists who use these "Little Wonder Ads," as one patron called them, to move their surplus stock. It works like this:

Stop the ad; I am sold out and it is costing me real money to return the checks.—Charles E. Brown, Bridgeville, Del., May 14, 1915.

The ad brought very good results.—M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., May 15, 1915.

We are well pleased with the pulling powers of the little ad we have been running in The Review.—I. Shelby Crall Co., Monongahela, Pa., May 11, 1915.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last week ended with everything clearing well. All kinds of stock were of somewhat better quality because of the continued cold weather, and prices were stiff enough to leave no room for complaint. This week started out a bit slowly, but not enough so to give rise to any uneasiness. For, considering the prevailing conditions—rain, gloom, and the fact that we are midway between two holidays—business has been better than could reasonably have been expected. And, inasmuch as many in the trade looked forward to an unusually dull week, it is much to be able to say that all things moved, though nothing moved with any special degree of speed.

Roses seem somewhat inclined to come into crop ahead of time—too far ahead to look well for Memorial day prospects. In supply they are fully equal to the demand, which may be ranked as good, though by no means unusually so. If there is preference shown for any particular class of roses, it is possible to perceive a slight tendency toward the yellows. This tendency, however, has not shown itself

BE SURE YOU ORDER ENOUGH FOR MEMORIAL DAY YOU CAN COUNT ON US TO FURNISH THE STOCK

WE have a big supply of fine stock to offer for Memorial Day. Those who gave us advance orders for Carnations for Mothers' day will remember that they got the stock—will appreciate that we treated them right—and will give us their full order for Memorial Day. We urge early ordering—the comparatively light crop of Carnations will make a big demand on us for our other lines of dependable stock. Send us now the full list of what you can use.

FANCY BEAUTIES

For Memorial Day we offer a big cut of splendid quality—long or short; we can send you all you need.

FANCY—PEONIES—SELECT

The Peony is the big seller for Memorial Day. We have large supplies from the best growers. No disappointment here either on quantity or quality.

FANCY ROSES

It is well to remember that Amling's specialty always is a grade of Roses just a little better than can be had elsewhere in quantity. A large crop is on. We have a full line and can supply you for Memorial Day.

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

We continue to handle great quantities of extra fine Butterfly (Spencer) Sweet Peas in all colors. Let us show you what good stock is.

LILIES

You can get here fine Easter Lilies in any quantity.

CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Orchids and our supply is large.

FANCY VALLEY ALWAYS ON HAND

We handle the Chicago Market Brand Valley exclusively. There is none better. A never-failing supply.

to any marked degree on the market. Beauties, though excellent and in fair supply, are not clearing quite so rapidly as they should. Peonies, as everyone knows, are in short crop, but in spite of that fact the supply has equaled the demand during the last week, with moderate quantities to go to storage against Memorial day. Valley, the supply of which is being augmented by the outdoor stock, is clearing well. Easter lilies are quite plentiful enough, but meet with only a fair demand. Callas are faring better. Fair may describe the demand for daisies, snapdragons, mignonette and Spanish iris. As for the supply, there was sufficient on the market to fill all orders. Smilax has the honor of being the one thing on the market that is really short and for this the demand is strong. Sweet peas, also, are still clearing well. Ferns have a right to be classed on the short side, with every indication of a market shortage for Memorial day. This to a great extent is due to spoilage in storage; when the cases are opened it develops that a large part of them have spoiled.

Carnations are moving, but that is all. This cannot be attributed to the demand so much as to the supply. It is scarcely to be expected that the quality of the stock will be of the best immediately following a holiday that taxed to the utmost the resources of the growers. The cut is light. Cattleyas are much more plentiful than a few days ago.

Spanish iris had a bad season. The hot weather in April seemed to be more than it could stand and took hundreds of dollars out of the pockets of each of several growers who have made something of a specialty of this flower.

Memorial Day Prospects.

Thus far there are few orders for Memorial day; some forehanded folk have arranged for carnations, but no special inquiry has been noted—it is expected to develop in the next few days.

One of the reasons why a specially good Memorial day business is expected this year is because there will be only moderate supplies of stock, conditions in this market being general through the central part of the country. It seems to assure a big shipping trade, with a flood of orders as soon as quotations get into the hands of the buyers, with this issue.

There will not be enough carnations

A Big Day at Your Store—

Decoration Day and all other days will insure you prosperity-bringing patronage if you display and sell Randall flowers.—

Gorgeous Full Cupped Peonies

No flower so generous in its bloom—so fresh in color—so long lived as these aristocratic Peonies.

During the busy part of yesterday I saw a prosperous business man turn aside to look in a florist's window. That stern old face relaxed and his eyes softened when they beheld a basket of fresh opening Peonies. What thoughts of long-gone yesterdays came to him I don't know, but he went into that store.

Peonies made that sale. There is something of romance and tender memories in their Springtime freshness and perfume that makes them the season's most popular flower.

Be sure your stock of Peonies and other flowers is fresh and complete.

Baskets Increase Your Sales

Flowers put up in baskets bring a better price and you make profit on the basket.

No. 814-1 is just right for Peonies. 23 inches high with a body 8 inches deep. Fitted with glass container and finished in two-tone combinations: White and Nile Green, White and Moss Green, Antique Gold, Blue and Gold, White and Pink, White and Baby Blue.

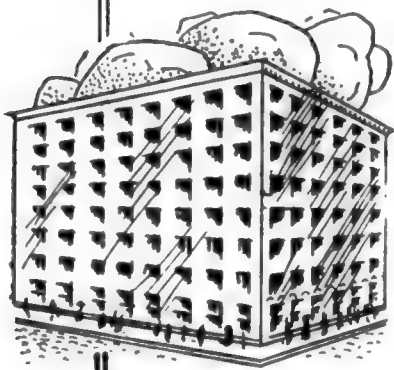

This beautiful basket will cost you only 60c. Filled with peonies or other flowers it will bring you not less than three dollars—and is usually sold from four to five dollars.

south and the quantities in storage are not nearly so large as last year, but there is a feeling that if any other flower runs short there will be peonies to take its place. Cape jasmine will be less plentiful than in recent years, in several of which they had little value.

With normal weather, conditions favor a banner business, with indications that the man who does not order until day of shipment will be rather likely to meet the same experience as at Mothers' day.

Moving Day.

For three weeks a force of men have been extremely busy remodeling, furnishing and decorating the street floor at 160 North Wabash avenue recently vacated by Harry C. Rowe. The space, which heretofore has been divided for more than one tenant, has been thrown into one large room, new iceboxes have been installed, with a Kroeschell ice machine in the storage room in the basement, and May 23 Kyle & Foerster will move in, opening for business at the new address Monday morning, thereby doubling their facilities.

At the same time the John Kruchten Co. will come into active operation, C. L. Sherer having joined the Kruchten brothers this week. The company will remove to the quarters vacated by Kyle & Foerster and open for business

Why Glencoe Violets Were Poor.

A shortage of $4,500 in the value of a violet crop, the waste of $500 in extra fertilizer and watering of the crop and a loss of reputation estimated at $5,000, resulted May 15 in the filing of a damage suit of $10,000 by Hattibel C. Howard, of the Glencoe Violet Farm, against Fred Ebert, a land owner of Glencoe.

Mrs. Howard says in her complaint that in the autumn of 1913 she contracted with Ebert for 103 wagon loads of soil from a specified tract of land. He was to plow the ground that fall, replot and harrow it the next spring, and deliver it at the plaintiff's greenhouses. She was to pay him $1.25 per cubic yard for the soil. The defendant did, in fact, deliver 103 loads of soil, but the plaintiff avers that he "deceitfully and fraudulently" substituted soil from an entirely different tract from that agreed on, and much below it in richness and productivity. The soil thus delivered was made into violet beds in the three greenhouses of the complainant, and she says the violets were poor, the plants lacked productivity and were short-lived.

Floral fashions for the Sheridan road will be set this season by Peter Reinberg, who is preparing to put out a fine show of bedding around his new home there. An adjoining vacant lot recently was acquired at a cost of several thousands of dollars and has been added to the grounds. exaggerated, according to Charles Erne, who says Erne & Klingel have advices that the stock for Memorial day will be of exceptional quality. The season is late, undoubtedly, but a moderate supply of first quality should return the growers more money than they have had in recent seasons.

The planting plans of Wietor Bros., for the season of 1915-16, include, besides Beauties, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Russell, Sunburst and Richmond. The effort to discover a successor for Enchantress, which it is expected will be needed in a year or two, is causing some addition to the number of varieties of carnations grown. The list next season will include four whites, White Enchantress, White Perfection, White Wonder and Matchless; six pinks, Enchantress, Rosette, Mrs. Ward, Pink Delight, Alice and Washington, with three reds, Champion, Bonfire and Victory.

John Poehlmann, Jr., son of the president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., graduates from Culver Military Academy June 4. No definite plans for his future have been decided upon as yet, but it is expected that after a vacation, he will take his place in the florists' company of which his father is president, where he will doubtless find ample scope for the tactics he has been studying for three years.

J. A. Schmidt, 2408 Wentworth avenue, has bought a touring car.

F. J. Benthley spent the latter part of last week at the greenhouses in Newcastle, Ind. Half of the houses have already been replanted. There is quite a large quantity of young Ophelia and Shawyer rose plants that will be giving a cut in July.

In the future an automobile will

A. E. Hunt, who formerly maintained a salesroom on the second floor of the Fairbanks building, has removed his quarters to the second floor of the Atlas building, where he occupies space with Dominick Freres.

Quite unique in the way of window display is that of O. J. Friedman, 522 South Michigan avenue. Here is an almost dazzling profusion of ornamental garden sticks and sun porch and conservatory accessories in the shape of highly colored and brilliantly executed reproductions of various representatives of the feathered and animal kingdom done in wood. The combined effect of grotesque form and strong coloring is somewhat startling, but it catches the eye and holds it for a few moments, and that is the aim of the decorator.

Visitors.

Cattleya Mossiæ, just beginning to come in, is several weeks later than usual all over the country, according to G. L. Freeman, of Fall River, Mass., who has just made the rounds of the local orchid growers. Without advancing a reason for the delay, he predicts an early opportunity for special sales.

Among the week's visitors were Charles Loveridge, of Peoria, ex-president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, and his sons. While here, they took advantage of the opportunity to run out to Greggs and Hinsdale to inspect the greenhouses of Bassett & Washburn.

A. Schutz, of Hammond, Ind., was on the market last week. Mr. Schutz has just bought a roadster and believes in using it.

Milo Crozer, of J. G. Crozer & Son, Cedar Rapids, Ia., was in the market May 17.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was a visitor May 16 to 18.

Among the week's visitors is Robert Spero, representative of Charles Zinn & Co., New York. Mr. Spero will be in the city until May 22.

The Market.

If it had not been for the demand for bedding plants, business in the ordinary way would have been considered quite flat. The cut flower trade has been slackening up and there has been a slight glut of roses, especially of short-stemmed stock. American Beauties, which are not quite so good in color, are plentiful and sell fairly well. Killarney, Ophelia, Mrs. Russell, Ward and Sunburst are all plentiful. The yellows are still proving the most popular. Carnations are still arriving in large consignments, but are getting smaller in size. The lighter shades sell best. Sweet peas are better. Stems are longer and colors brighter. The purples and blues do not sell at all well. Easter lilies are scarce. Callas are not overplentiful, but there is no special demand. Valley is plentiful and a good supply of outdoor stock is reaching us. Baby gladioli sell fairly well. Irises are just coming. Beautiful shades of Darwin and picotee tulips sell quite well. There has been a demand for bachelor's buttons. Cut lilac is plentiful, but prices are low. Daisies are

H. E. Wilson has been doing a good trade in bedding plants. This year they have grown a large quantity of calceolarias, which have sold well. Baskets of forget-me-nots and pink roses were the special for Mothers' day and retailed at $1 each.

Over thirty members of the Rochester Florists' Association were present at their monthly meeting, held at Musicians' hall, Monday, May 10. After the usual business was transacted, E. F. Rowe, for many years connected with James Vick's Sons and now with the J. H. McFarland Co., Harrisburg, Pa., gave an interesting and profitable talk on "Advertising." He urged florists to do more advertising, using pictures whenever possible. The house committee, with Nathan B. Graves in charge, provided lunch. George T. Boucher and Horace J. ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was in splendid condition. Everything seasonable was plentiful, with the prices reasonable in all grades. The hot weather brought out a lot of outdoor stock, which is selling well, especially valley, peonies and daisies. Carnations and roses are showing the effects of the weather, and unless the roses are cut while still tight buds, they come in wide open. Carnations are of poor quality and most of the blooms are small. Peonies have had a good sale and from now on will affect the sale of other stock. The promised shipments of cape jasmine buds from Texas will also help to crowd out some of the more staple stock.

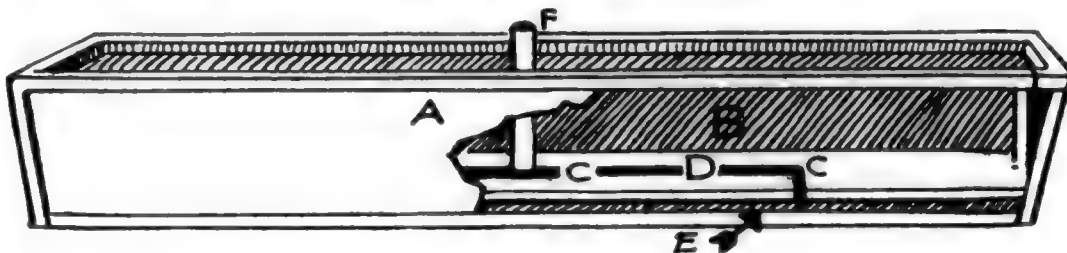

A large lot of extra fine gladioli were consigned from local growers last week. America, Francis King and Chicago White are all of fine quality, with an excellent demand. The prices of these range from $4 to $6 per hundred. A lot of sweet peas are still coming into the market, but only the Spencer varieties are selling at quoted prices. Small-flowered gladioli were a glut all the week, selling as low as $1 per hundred spikes, and cheaper in large lots. In snapdragons the demand was slow. Valley and Easter lilies sell well. The retailers reported trade good, with plenty of funeral work. Orders for wedding and dinner decorations are numerous.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting, May 13, in Odd Fellows' hall. The meeting was poorly attended, as is usual in May. The majority of the members have their hands full with planting-out orders. The attendance numbered twenty, with all the officers absent except the secretary. Ex-President W. J. Pilcher took the chair. Chairman Ammann reported for his committee. He stated that the Planters' hotel had been selected for the meeting place of the American Carnation Society, the meeting and exhibition to be held January 26 and 27, 1916. named at the October meeting of the club.

The trustees made a final report of the recent dance given by the club. Letters from President Welch, of the S. A. F., and the Cleveland Florists' Club were read and filed for future reference.

An invitation from the County Growers' Club, asking the American Carnation Society committee to be present at the next meeting, June 2, was received and accepted by Chairman J. F. Ammann. The trustees were instructed to select a place and date for the club's annual picnic during the month of July. All delinquent members were given until next meeting to pay their dues or be dropped from the roll of membership.

Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was present and addressed the meeting. The treasurer's record showed a good gain over the last report. The question box brought this interesting meeting to a close. The next meeting will be held June 10.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. C. Windler, on Virginia avenue, May 12. Every member of the circle was present. June 9, the circle will be entertained by Mrs. A. Meyer, Jr., 3214 South Jefferson avenue.

The County Growers' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at Hugo Gross' place, in Kirkwood, June 2. At this meeting they will entertain the St. Louis Florists' Club committee that has charge of the arrangements for entertaining the American Carnation Society.

The Shackelford Nursery Co., in St. Louis county, is cutting an abundance of fine blooms of the new daisy known as the Shackelford daisy. Mr. Lloyd, head of the nursery, says this daisy is a most wonderful keeper. They have a demand for all they can cut daily.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. made large shipments of wooden easels last week. These orders went into Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri. This department has been working overtime in order to fill orders.

Philip Giebel has the Chain of Rocks park, in the north end, looking its best. The opening of the city's new filtering plant, May 15, attracted a large crowd. Red carnations were presented by the water department to the city officials and their ladies. Mr. Giebel is head of all parks under the jurisdiction of this department.

den, says the Sunday visitors are becoming more numerous. The new bedding and exhibitions seem to please the visiting public greatly. Sunday, May 16, the attendance was the largest of the year.

Several in the trade have been doing jury duty so far this month. Your scribe is doing his this week. Sheriff Joseph Dickman, a former seedsman and member of the Florists' Club, seems to have a liking for florists as jurymen.

The trustees of the Florists' Club say the June meeting will be the twenty-ninth anniversary meeting. They are planning for something out of the ordinary for the occasion. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

Cool weather has checked production and improved quality to a degree that has put the market into better shape. There have been bad days and good ones; days so good that it was possible to dispose of all the nice, clean stock at moderate prices. Business is fair for the middle of May; the lower prices enable the buyers outside the fashionable quarters to use more flowers than in winter.

The changes from a week ago are quickly told. Iris, which has been a satisfactory crop, is now a thing of the past; outdoor iris by no means takes the place of the greenhouse-grown stock. Peonies are coming in more freely, both from the south and locally. Tone has been given to much of the greenhouse-grown stock by the cool nights. Outdoor flowers enrich decorations and show windows. Greens increase.

The experts consider the outlook for Memorial day as promising, more promising than usual. They base their calculations on the belief that heavy crops of peonies will not be harvested here before May 25. If this calculation proves correct, that is, if a hot wave comes now, the market will take all the peonies of quality at fair prices. It seems more than likely that indoor crops will not be overabundant; that is, that there will be no surplus, thus affording a free field for the peonies.

Spring Plants.

An encouraging feature of the plant market is the unusual demand for soft-wooded stock for beds, boxes and baskets, a demand that has not been nearly equaled in the past. Ferns in 6-inch pots especially are extremely scarce. This applies to nearly all sizes of the Boston type. Geraniums in bloom are hard to obtain, while nearly all varieties of flowering plants and vines are under size. This healthy condition is due to the general drift toward the suburbs. People feel that the city is not the place in which to live if they can help it. They go out of town and when they get there they want a few plants to brighten the home. This means a reaction. A few years ago geraniums, coleus and the other bedding plants were dropped by many of the large places, in favor of perennials and shrubbery. Now people who have heretofore had no plants are taking up the neglected bedding stock.

Godfrey Aschmann's.

A visit to this well known place on Ontario street showed a complete change from six weeks ago. Then the Easter plants held sway; now the houses are full of bloomers and vines for planting outdoors. It was a busy place. Boxes were packed, ready for shipping; orders were being picked out; everybody was on the move. John Aschmann stopped long enough to extend a kindly greeting and to speak of the difficulty of getting the plants ready fast enough to meet the demand. The stock was in healthy condition and there was lots of it, a well assorted selection of the leading varieties. Every business man asks nowadays for "a snap." If you want a snap try the araucarias.

Various Notes.

H. P. Hawley, of the White Co., is expected to address the Florists' Club at its regular meeting, June 1, on the subject of "Florists' Automobile Delivery."

Duncan Macaw, for eleven years with the Robert Craig Co., has resigned his position to devote his energies to his own place, Macaw Bros., Norwood, Pa. The resignation will take effect June 1. Mr. Macaw, who has been right-hand man to Robert A. Craig, leaves with the good will and respect of all his associates.

Charles Uttley, of Harrisburg, was in town this week.

Robert Q. Shoch, of the M. Rice Co., has returned from the south. Mr. Shoch speaks well of a promising new store opened in Winston-Salem, N. C., by the Westbrooke Drug & Floral Co. Mr. Shine, of the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., of Greensboro, N. C., is manager.

Charles F. Krueger, of the Reading Terminal flower stand, I regret to say, is confined to his home near Wayne Junction by illness.

Mrs. A. M. Lawson's carnations were planted out at St. Martins just before the recent heavy rains. They are growing well.

Paul Huebner, of the Reading railroad, gets 150,000 pot plants out of those little greenhouses at Wayne Junction each spring, not counting the plants in flats. It takes management, it does; management and coldframes.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had the decorations for the booths for the second annual flower market held in Rittenhouse Square May 19. A society event; the proceeds are for charity.

Hosea Waterer, seedsman, is satisfied with the results of the spring business.

Miss Dorothy's column in a local Sunday paper gives excellent cuts of a willow birdcage on pedestal, seen in one of our most artistic flower shops. The notes say that birds must thrive in such charming cages, comment that pleased the members of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

THE SIGN OF A
NATIONAL FLORIST

NATIONAL FLORAL CORPORATION

The only organization in the United States for the sole purpose of educating the general public—the people who buy—to buy more flowers, especially as gifts to friends out of town in place of other presents.

No commission to be paid for the orders received. The business will come direct from the customer. All the National Florist will have to do is deliver the flowers in good taste and in good order, and keep the cash. It will be a cash-with-order business.

The National Floral Corporation wants one exclusive representative florist in each city in America to take care of the orders which will be created by the advertising service this corporation will render. The best florist is wanted.

There will be one NATIONAL FLORIST in your town—will it be YOU?

Send for booklet giving full details of what the National Floral Corporation will do for the florist. You will be delighted with the plan. Write TODAY and learn how to be that one.

The Market.

A dull week was the last; prices were barely steady, with a downward tendency. There was the usual clean-up on Saturday by the large buyers at about their own prices. "Why give quotations?" one wholesaler asks me. "There is no solid ground to build values on."

The shipments during the last week have been light, and demand the same. There are now plenty of American Beauties, and a top of $15 per hundred for the best of these is a fair indication of the trend of all roses, the short-stemmed falling as low as 50 cents per hundred. The rose novelties now are few, and prices for them are unchangeable.

Carnations are not overabundant. One order of over 50,000 created considerable stir in the market. Wards seem to be still the favorite variety. Prices range from 50 cents per hundred up to $2 for the novelties.

Lilies are down again to $3 and $4 per hundred, and are abundant. There will doubtless be the usual improvement for Memorial day. There is an overabundance of valley; prices range from $2 per hundred down. The outdoor stock is increasing daily. The street merchants offer it and gardenias and sweet peas everywhere. Orchids are in heavy supply at about the same quotations as a week ago. There are plenty of gladioli, tulips, callas, lilac and spring flowers of every popular variety.

Various Notes.

Jos. Trepel, of Brooklyn, had an order Saturday, May 15, that involved 1,400 deliveries Sunday before 8 a. m., to the Zionist Society of Brooklyn, the order calling for 56,000 carnations and 14,000 roses.

The death of Fred Weir, a member of the old firm of James Weir's Sons, is recorded in the obituary column. There, also, will be found notice of the death of John Hart, a former wholesaler, well known along Twenty-eighth street.

Malandre Bros., at their big store at Broadway and Seventy-second street, had for a week a most attractive wedding window, with bride and attendants, the bride's bouquets being changed daily. It was the handiwork of Mr. Schenck.

Reed & Keller have four floors of novelties and standards in baskets and supplies. An average of one new design or basket or stand a week is maintained, Mr. Reed tells me. An exhibit at San Francisco is planned, and Mr. and Mrs. Reed will attend the meeting of the S. A. F. there.

Young & Nugent sent a number of orchid and lily wreaths to the McCord funeral at Greenwich, Conn., Sunday morning, May 16.

Auction sales by the MacNiff Horticultural Co. will continue until July. The sales are far ahead of all other seasons at this date.

"Bunny says" the Uptown Seed Store is doing a big business; the retail department is especially encouraging.

The New York bowlers have a trip to Patchogue, L. I., and one to Barnegat Bay, N. J., following the outing of the New York Florists' Club, all arranged for. John Donaldson has a bowling team at Patchogue that "can't be beat," and at the bay the fish will have to suffer.

M. A. Bowe had the decorations May 16, on the battleship Wyoming, including the banquet tables. Some idea of the contract may be gained when it is stated that of American Beauties alone, 2,500 were used.

Messrs. Bunyard, Armstrong and Wadley & Smythe will open their branch stores at Newport early in June. An especially good season is anticipated.

J. Austin Slaw.

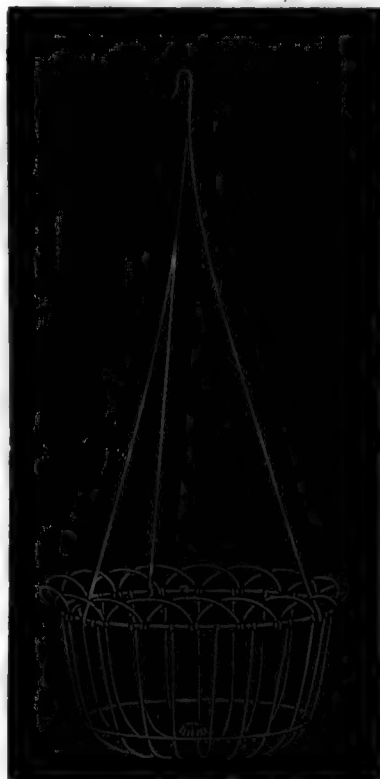

The Review is able to state that the purchaser referred to in the following item leading the real estate column of the Herald May 15 is Ralph M. Ward, bulb importer: "Recording the first sale of real estate for many years in the block bounded by Broadway, Park place and Murray street, announcement is made that the property at 243 Broadway, opposite City Hall park, has been sold by the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church to an undisclosed purchaser. The parcel consists of a 5-story office building, 25.1x126.6, with stores, with an L fronting 12.7 feet in Murray street. The sellers acquired the parcel in 1910 under the will of the late Mary Rhineland King, it having been in the possession of her family for more than half a century. The transaction involved about $300,000."

NEW ORLEANS.

Spring Flower Show.

The formal opening of the flower show under the auspices of the New Orleans Horticultural Society took place May 6. The florists of the city did so well to make the exhibition at the Athenæum a success that at its close Sunday night, May 9, a semi-annual affair was contemplated by the members of the society, the next in order being a chrysanthemum show next autumn. At the opening, Charles Panter, secretary of the society, was master of ceremonies and introduced the speakers, Mayor Behrman, Mrs. Myers, president of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, which had given the florists strong support; Peter Chopin, president of the Horticultural Society, and James Steckler, chairman of the committee of arrangements. Those who served with Mr. Steckler on the committee were Herman Doescher, C. W. Eichling, Paul Abele and Henry Kraak.

Peter Chopin had a display of hydrangeas banking the main entrance and a bungalow with terraced garden laid out complete to quarter scale. Hydrangeas and foliage plants formed the exhibit of Henry Kraak, near by The J. Steckler Seed Co. showed implements, seeds and plants. Max Scheinuk's display consisted of porch boxes, urns, and blooming and foliage plants. C. W. Eichling showed a renaissance garden, across the entrance to which were the words "City Beautiful" in white carnations on a background of crimson ramblers. Newsham & Scheuerman, of the Orchid Store, had a splendid orchid display, including some rare varieties, and a wedding arch of roses, orchids and smilax. A bridal bower formed the exhibit of Frank J. Reyes & Co.; it was of val-

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business has continued good since last report; the supply has decreased and prices have become firmer. While the available supply has been ample for all business, there has not been any surplus. Some peonies are arriving and are bought up on sight. The light colored varieties are mostly from farther south, only red coming in from local growers, but by the end of this week the local supply will be in full crop. We have had quite a few showers during the last two weeks, which have helped their growth, so that the crop will be in from ten days to two weeks earlier than last year.

The wholesale stores have been busy and the retailers also. Although funeral work forms the bulk of the business, trade along all lines is good. The bedding plant season is now at its height and the growers who cater to this class of trade are kept busy, as their season of selling is not of great duration. Up to the present they are almost unanimous in saying business is much better than last year.

Various Notes.

Mothers' day continues an interesting topic among the local trade, reports from all sides recording an increase over last year's business. A. Fiedler says his Mothers' day business was better than his Easter sales.

Richard Vincent, Jr., returned from New York last week, well pleased with the outcome of his efforts, which resulted in the formation of the American Dahlia Society.

The Flower Mart, held by the Woman's Civic League each year, was postponed from May 12 to May 13, on account of rain. The number of local florists having booths was considerably smaller than last year, only George Cook, John Cook, James Hamilton and E. A. Seidewitz having stands. The latter was awarded the prize for the most artistic booth.

Mrs. Margaret Eberhart died at her home, 2875 West Baltimore street, May 12, from the effects of blood poisoning, aged 39 years. Mrs. Eberhart had been ill for only a few weeks. Besides her husband, August E. Eberhart, she is survived by one daughter, 15 years old, and two sons, one 12 and the other 14 years of age. The funeral services were held May 16, interment being at Western cemetery. W. F. E.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.65
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.60

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florist's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

A decided change, and not for the better, has taken place in the flower market the last few days. Apart from occasional little spurts, excessive dullness has prevailed and prices have steadily retrograded. May 8 some good carnations made $10 per hundred. One week later similar flowers could be had for $10 and $15 per thousand and this in spite of the fact that the weather has not been at all warm. The higher prices ruling on some commodities for Mothers' day seemed to unsettle the market for a week following. Holidays and special flower days are not unmixed blessings to the growers. High prices hurt business and there is always a slump in values right after each flower day. Moderate prices induce more buying and are the best in the long run.

Roses were decidedly soft last week. Thanks to cool weather, the quality holds up remarkably well. The same holds true of carnations, which are now quite cheap. Bulbous flowers are not selling well. People seem to be tired of them; even Spanish iris and Gladiolus Peach Blossom fail to attract. There are quantities of grand Spencer peas on the market, which sell tolerably well, but short-stemmed flowers prove unprofitable. Snapdragons go slowly, as do stocks, feverfew, cut spiraea, calendulas and lilies. Most of these will sell better for Memorial day.

There were never so many yellow marguerites and the quality is grand. The demand is good for these, also for cornflowers. An annual which sells well is Gypsophila elegans. A good deal of this has come in during the last two months, much with 24-inch stems. There are quantities of gardenias, but the demand is weak, as it also is for cattleyas. Much of the valley seen is of inferior quality. There has been a fair call for asparagus. Plant trade is picking up. Bedding plants are in large demand.

May Flower Exhibition.

There was an interesting flower show at Horticultural hall May 15 and 16, the main exhibition hall being well filled. Calceolarias were numerous and it was noted that the herbaceous section with large spotted flowers compared unfavorably with C. Stewarti and other hybrids, and with the old C. rugosa Golden Gem. Pelargoniums were fewer than usual; the date was somewhat early for them. Darwin and cottage tulips and late narcissi were abundant and good.

F. J. Dolansky had some wonderfully fine forms of Cattleya Mossiae. The flowers quite eclipsed those of C. gigas, standing side by side. Mr. Dolansky had gigas carrying as many as eight flowers per stalk. Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, had three good brasso-cattleyas, B. Digbyana x C. Warneri being the most striking. Alexander McKay had some fine plants of the tall growing Astilbe Philadelphia, also some good standard and bush Hydrangea Otaksa.

Messrs. Dolansky and McKenzie each received a silver medal, the latter for Brasso-cattleya Warneri. Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, showed some grandly grown Clarkia elegans Orange King and was awarded a cultural certificate. S. R. Corvey received honorable mention for a display of geraniums and carnations. Farquhar & Co. showed a beautifully flowered plant of the white, sweet-scented genista, praecox, which should prove a splendid plant for florists. Wm. Thatcher.

of the evening was Prof. A. H. Nehrling, of the department of floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, and his paper was listened to with the closest attention. Mr. Nehrling discussed the history of agricultural education, the division of agriculture into horticulture, agronomy and other subjects; also, how horticulture has again been subdivided into branches such as floriculture, landscape gardening, pomology and forestry; the development that has occurred in floriculture and the methods of instruction used today by the Amherst Agricultural College and other institutions of like character, their relative value and the great need of floricultural education. He also dwelt upon the relation of the college to the commercial florists and how they may cooperate and be of material benefit to each other. Many questions were asked the lecturer and a good general discussion followed the reading of the paper, following which a rising vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Nehrling.

The field day, to be held May 21 at the Arnold Arboretum, was touched upon and everything pointed to a big attendance.

Alexander McKay received a cultural certificate for herbaceous calceolarias and also showed hydrangeas. W. N. Craig received a report of merit for Odontoglossum crispum.

The suggestion that the spring show in 1916 be omitted did not meet with approval.

Various Notes.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, continues to bring in splendid Gypsophila elegans. These are grown in flats on the shelves in his houses and average twenty-four inches in length. He has an immense crop of yellow marguerites of grand quality, also double feverfew in quantity for Memorial day. Of carnations he has a fine crop. All his young stock has been planted out now for some time.

Peter Ball, of Wakefield, is a specialist in green goods and his supply of Asparagus plumosus and Sprenger and adiantum is now large and of fine quality. William R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, has a heavy crop of roses in sight for Memorial day. He grows chiefly Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, of which he markets some thousands daily, but will add some other sorts for next season.

The annual spraying campaign against the gypsy and brown-tail moths is again under way. The state of Massachusetts itself has spent $9,000,000 in fighting the gypsy moth since its introduction, in addition to the many millions spent by cities, towns and individuals. In the future, it seems to the writer, these pests must be controlled without spraying so much, by protecting birds more, by introducing more parasites to prey on them and by the distribution in the woodlands of disease cultures.

George O. Buckman, of Stoneham, is sending in a splendid lot of Spencer sweet peas on long stems in several colors.

Kidder Brs. are just finishing cutting their houses of sweet peas, which have been cropping since early February. Comet tomatoes are grown through the summer months, until it is again time to house single violets. The bulk of the violet and sweet pea specialists grow tomatoes and cucumbers in summer.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, is all through with bulbous flowers for the season. They have a big batch of Spiraea Japonica for Memorial day and a large stock of bedding plants.

Recent callers have included Prof. D. S. Lumsden, Ithaca, N. Y., who has been spending his vacation at his old college, Durham, N. H.; Prof. A. H. Nehrling, Amherst, Mass.; A. and Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., and Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, have all their carnation stock in the field. Miss Theo, their new seedling, continues to give a good account of itself. They have a large crop of Gladiolus Peach Blossom and pink snapdragons.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., are sending in a fine lot of Crimson Queen, Richmond, Taft, Ophelia, Kilarney Queen and Sunburst roses.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, is getting a heavy cut of yellow marguerites and pink snapdragons.

J. R. Shield, of North Woburn, has a grand lot of Spencer sweet peas; many have 18-inch to 20-inch stems. Also, he has Gladiolus Peach Blossom, in addition to his usual fine lot of carnations.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro, are just finishing a fine crop of the useful Gysophila elegans. They have a large house of Spencer peas just right for Memorial day; also, heavy crops of yellow marguerites and carnations.

Penn started advertising in the Boston dailies for Memorial day May 13, and will use more space than ever this season. Penn has had some large wedding orders the last few days, which have called members of the force to several points in the New England states.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, has a grand crop of high-grade Matchless, Pink Delight, Beacon, Gorgeous, White Enchantress and Rosette carnations.

Patrick Welch continues to find business good. I noted extra fine Beauty roses, valley, cattleyas and gypsophila here.

A large attendance seems certain at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day at the Arnold Arboretum, May 21. The malus, lilacs, cornus, crataegus and a wealth of other subjects are now in splendid bloom here. Many thousands of people visited these beautiful grounds May 16.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The weather last week was fine. Cut flower trade is somewhat quiet. Even funeral work has decidedly fallen off.
The business for Mothers' day was excellent and cleared the market of its entire surplus, so that at present everything is scarce. Roses have gone up a little in price and the market is kept well cleaned up. Killarney, Taft, Sunburst and Milady are the best varieties and are among the best sellers. There are few Russells or Shawyers. Beauties have advanced slightly in price, though the quality is only fair. Carnations are showing the effects of the warm weather. They are getting smaller and the stems are quite brittle. The supply is comparatively small, so that the price is advancing.

Harrisii lilies are scarce. Sweet peas have taken the place of violets, which are at an end for another season. The sweet peas, however, are poor. Good cattleyas continue to come in. There is an abundance of valley. Vegetation has made wonderful progress in the last week. All kinds of outdoor work are being pushed. Good flowering plants are scarce. There are a few late ramblers, calceolarias, schizanthus, geraniums and primroses. There is a good demand for Boston ferns.

Various Notes.

Trade at J. G. Pickleman's store is steadily increasing. He is doing considerable funeral work and has a fine line of cut flowers.

The Colonial Flower Shop has added an urn filled with geraniums to the attractive front, which is flanked on one side by a low brick wall. The firm is handling bedding plants and boxwood trees of all sizes.

W. C. Stroh, of Attica, will add 10,000 feet of glass to his range this summer. He recently purchased a new Dodge car.

Jerry Brookins' orchid peas have suffered since the spell of warm weather.
They are not as good as they have been and the blooms are beginning to diminish in number.

R. Karpinski is having considerable wedding work just now. He recently purchased the building at 1112 Broadway and is now remodeling the entire store. He is putting in a new refrigerator, which is quite costly.

Nathan Wolff, president of the Buffalo park board, died of heart trouble,
May 12, at his home, 293 Franklin street.

Frank J. Mahoney is in Rochester.
Ed. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennocklast week, stopping over on his way to

well, until a successor at the latter position can be appointed. Director Elbers has made a life study of gardening, horticulture and botany, and coupled with his knowledge is a love of the work which augurs well for his success in this new field of service. His efficiency at Humboldt park has gained him recognition from experts in other cities in the United States, for he transformed an old parade ground into a park which is pronounced one of the best kept parks in the country.

H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., Cleveland, O.; F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, and M. A. Vinson, manager of the Cleveland flower show of 1915, were visitors here May 16 on their way home from the advertisers' club banquet, which was held in Rochester, May 15. They are working up interest in the Cleveland flower show, to be held November 10 to 14. They also have other plans, which will be published later. E. C. A.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

A number of large wedding decorations last week considerably helped retail business. These, with a fair amount of funeral work, cleared up the market of much of the surplus stock. The weather has been warm and, while greatly increasing the supply of flowers of all varieties, it has decreased the size of the blooms of roses and carnations. Local peonies have made their appearance in such quantities as to be already looked upon as a drug on the market. Some excellent orchids were offered last week, of Cattleya Gaskelliana, Mossiae, Mendelii, gigas and Schröderae, which met with but a fair sale, as there were more than the market could readily consume. Sweet peas are holding up remarkably well and while they do not clean up, their movement is satisfactory. Some nice northern lilac, double white and purple, is to be had and for this there is a fair demand. Gardenias are getting smaller Beauty roses are in some demand.

Various Notes.

Fred Miller, formerly with Gude Bros. Co. and for some time employed by W. W. Scholtz, at Charlotte, N. C., is in the employ of George C. Shaffer, with whom he expects to remain until fall. At that time Mr. Miller expects to look over some southern prospects with a view to engaging in business for himself.

Among the visitors of the week were J. H. Breckman, of Philadelphia, and M. Adler, Jr., of New York.

Felipe Guasp, 30 years of age, a Porto Rican, was recently arrested while an inmate of the Providence hospital, on a charge of forgery against the Leo Niessen Co., by whom he had been employed. It is said that the man sent a telegraph order to the Philadelphia headquarters for a large quantity of flowers. The fraud was ascertained when a long distance call was put in for Washington, several discrepancies having been found in the order which could not be fathomed by the Philadelphia force.

Arrangements have been completed for the fourth annual Brookland rose show, to be held in the Masonic Temple, at Twelfth and Monroe streets, May 20 and 21. The committees in charge state that as the rose season varies as much as two weeks in different years, the committee reserves the right to make changes in the dates of the exhibition upon one week's notice, should that be found necessary.

Announcement has been made by the Civil Service Commission that an examination will be held in this city June 19 for the purpose of securing eligibles for the position of foreman. Applicants must be between the ages of 25 and 45 and must show that they are practical gardeners, that they have a thorough knowledge of the care of trees, shrubs, flowers and lawns, and for not less than a period of five years have been in charge of men engaged in gardening work, park maintenance

Seed Trade NewsAMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco,
Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

RALPH M. WARD, of Ralph M. Ward & Co., has purchased the 5-story building at 243 Broadway, New York City. It is reported the deal involved about $300,000.

DAVID BURPEE, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, has been on a trip to the south. He was well entertained by the Birmingham, Ala., seedsmen during his stay there.

THE trade is taking every opportunity to add to its seed resources. Last week's boat from Rotterdam brought 570 bags of flower and vegetable seeds consigned to forwarding agents.

AL. J. NEVRAUMONT, of the California Seed Co., San Francisco, says this is an unusually late season, on account of the frequent heavy rains, and business is still keeping up well in lines that ordinarily subside a month earlier.

THERE will undoubtedly be plenty of turnip seed for this year's crop, but as the entire seed crop for next year probably will have to be grown in this country, there will inevitably be a shortage in the absence of an increased acreage.

REPORTS from Holland indicate that small seed crops are to be expected so far as biennials are concerned. Weather conditions of autumn, winter and spring have been steadily unfavorable, so that the loss of plants has been large.

FRENCH radish seed is such an uncertain quantity this year that Michigan and California growers are encouraged. In Michigan the crop has not appealed to farmers, who have made better money in other ways, but in California the production has increased steadily.

THE annual mean rainfall at Chicago is 33.18 inches. Up to last week 1915 showed a deficiency of 4.52 inches, but May 15 there was 2.75 inches of precipitation within two hours. The onion set acreage, the most important in the United States, is no longer suffering for moisture but because of it; many of the fields were badly cut up by the torrents.

No word has been received regarding William Mitchelhill, of the seed firm of Mitchelhill Bros., St. Joseph, Mo., who was a passenger on the Lusitania. He was on his way to England on a business trip. Upon the receipt of news of the disaster, Bruce Mitchelhill, his brother, cabled to relatives in Edinburgh for information of him. William Mitchelhill was a British subject, for although he had been in this country ten years, he had not taken out naturalization papers. His wife and 3-year-old son are in St. Joseph.

It is reported that the late spring rain, continuing over a week, has caused extensive damage to the onion seed crop in the San Joaquin valley.

THE Adams Seed Co., of Decorah, Ia., has just purchased a large, 2-story double brick building, which it will begin at once to alter to fit to its needs.

REPORTS from Holland indicate that the area devoted to gladiolus will be much curtailed this summer, in consequence of the bad selling season.

It appears that a great many flower seeds we have been getting from Germany can be grown just as well and nearly as cheaply in this country, the home production having increased decidedly of late years. It took the war to bring the growers to the front.

LOS ANGELES seedsmen have benefited by articles in the Tribune on what flowers and vegetables to sow and how to care for them. The writers are members of the trade. Among them are M. L. Germain, president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and H. L. Musser, president of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co.

A REFUND of $51.24 has been ordered made to C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, by the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. et al., because of an overcharge of that amount collected on shipments of garden seeds from San Francisco to various destinations in Texas and Oklahoma during the period between August 27 and November 27, 1912. The order was entered by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

WESTERN SEEDSMEN MEET.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association proved one of the most successful and enjoyable in the entire history of the organization. Education

Education is not the result of a course of study; it is the result of a course of experience. There is a short-cut to all knowledge—making use of the experience of others. Now the experience of large and small lily bulb growers has cost a mint of money and disappointment, so if you will make use of this experience, you will be taking the short-cut to success in lily culture. Grow Horseshoe Brand bulbs—that's the secret of success in lily growing—the other or longer way around is to try all other brands first. Better stick close to the good stuff—it's the most economical in the end.

REVERSED

Not many years since, the East was rushing westward on account of a wealth of golden nuggets, Today the West is rushing eastward for the best there is in flowerdom.

Fruitvale, Cal., April 8, 1915.

Mr. G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H.

Dear Sir: Your Silver Pink SEEDLING Snapdragons are wonderful! Magnificent!! Words are not sufficient to describe the 100x24-foot house of them we now have in bloom. * * *

Yours very respectfully,

THE LACY CO.

This wonderful Snapdragon will do the same for you, and right now is the time to sow seed for fall blooms. Price of seed, $1.00 per pkt.; 8 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00.

We still have a few good plants for early flowering, as follows:

Silver Pink Seedlings.....$4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000
Yellow, Nelrose, Garnet..... 5.00 per 100; 45.00 per 1000

G. S. RAMSBURG, Somersworth, N. H.

Johns, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co. Most of the time was devoted to the consideration of business conditions, the prospects for seed supplies for the seasons of 1916 and 1917 and the discussion of probable values and terms of sale. The consensus of opinion was that seeds should be worth more money. The cental system, which has been more or less generally adopted largely as a result of the efforts of this association, was reported as working excellently and as obviating many of the difficulties that were encountered with the use of the old system. A committee was appointed, as was done a year ago, to urge the matter before the American Seed Trade Association.

Resolutions of condolence to Mitchell Bros., of St. Joseph, on account of the death of the junior Mr. Mitchell in the sinking of the Lusitania, were passed; also resolutions expressing the deep appreciation of the association for the great work done in its behalf by Jesse C. Northrup, one of the founders.

The old officers were reelected for another term, as follows: President, H. A. Johns, Sioux City, Ia.; vice-president C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; treasurer, Henry Windheim, Omaha; secretary, Mel. L. Webster, Independence, Iowa.

After a family dinner, automobiles were furnished by the Nebraska Seed Co. and the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., and the members all visited the Robinson plant at Waterloo and had a most delightful reception at the home of J. C. Robinson.

Those present were:

H. A. Johns, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.

Hiram Buckbee, of H. W. Buckbee & Co., Rockford, Ill.

Aug. F. Mangelsdorf, of Mangelsdorf Bros. Co., Atchison, Kan.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

OUTDOOR FREESIAS IN NORTH.

Can freesias be grown satisfactorily in the open ground in this latitude, 47 degrees, in the west-central part of Washington state? At what time of the year should they be planted?

A. R. M.—Wash.

I should say freesias would not be a success in your latitude. Early fall is the usual planting time. C. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

May is never a good month for the florists' business in this city, and this year has proved no exception so far. Trade is undoubtedly dull and this seems more annoying owing to the great quantity of good stock produced. The climbing form of Cecile Brunner rose has been in full beauty during the last few weeks and this throws such a profusion of flowers that it does not pay to pick them. Indoor roses of the better class are suffering because of the splendid flowers coming from outdoors. There is much more variety in the outdoor stock now than formerly, as the growers have tried out the newer varieties and found many of them suitable for this class of work.

The usual glut of carnations for May has materialized and a great many fine flowers are thrown away. The wiser growers do not send them in at all, but are drying their plants off. All the spring flowers are plentiful, but the demand is small. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

The idea has long been prevalent among growers that a central market, where stock could be sent and disposed of as in other large cities, would be of great assistance both to retailers and wholesalers. While it is too early to say that such a thing is coming, it has been mooted and it is to be hoped that retailers will not look at this from a prejudiced or narrow-minded point of view. It is not dignified or good business policy for growers to be peddling their stock around like Chinese truck growers, and were they grouped under one roof the ease with which prices could be compared and stock selected would save much time and temper. To use the words of a well-known advertiser, "Eventually—Why not now?"

Various Notes.

George Watson began the removal of his greenhouses last week. It is thought he will not rebuild all, but rather make a small, compact, modern range out of the best of the large quantity of material at hand.

An up-to-date adding machine is the latest addition to the office equipment at Henry W. Turner's place and he has already found it a great time-saver. The last new house is up and planted, over 150 varieties of novelties and old favorites being tried out here and planted for stock. This will be an exceedingly interesting house to visit shortly.

I have just heard, at the time of writing, that H. N. Gage was married May 11 and has gone to San Diego for a honeymoon trip. This is Mr. Gage's second venture on the matrimonial sea, his first wife having died some two years ago.

Calling the other day at G. M. Bridgeford's place, at Eagle Rock, I did not find him complaining about dull business at all. On the other hand, he says that trade has been away above that for 1914. Mr. Bridgeford's one idea is quality, and unless a plant measures up to his standard it is cut out. His roses are looking fine, especially his new red sport. I noticed a grand lot of Alice Rothschild, and Mr. Bridgeford called attention to the fact that this elegant yellow rose becomes much deeper in color after being cut. The tulips and other Dutch stock were all past, but peonies were in full bloom and a grand lot of lilies were coming on.

Rose planting is going on rapidly at the Gardena greenhouses of Wright's Flower Shop. Manager W. Wern says that, although business has been on the slack side, a good deal of choice funeral work has helped considerably to reduce the large stock of fine flowers coming from the greenhouses.

Staiger & Mundwiler have an exceptionally fine cut of Liliun giganteum on now and Mr. Staiger says the demand is good. Considerable improvements have been carried out at the retail store, on Washington street.

Polder & Groen are again adding to their establishment, this time building a new cloth house for carnations. I noted some splendid Rose-pink Enchantress carnations in full flower and a magnificent lot of Easter lilies coming on under cloth. John Polder is running around in his Buick and retailing Ford stories to K. Groen.

MONTEBELLO, CAL.

The severe storms of the last week almost spoiled the sweet peas. Peonies are coming in nicely in the dark colors, but the light shades have almost finished. Irises, stocks, gaillardias and coreopsis are plentiful. Roses are the best selling commodity; the choice varieties are the first to move. Carnations are scarce. The supply for Mothers' day was short of demand, with a sharp rise in the prices.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, paid his respects to the trade this week. Japan will be included in his trip.

Clarke Bros. are displaying a nice lot of hydrangeas.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. was the only firm of florists here that advertised Mothers' day in the daily papers. The firm also had an appropriate window display. The returns were highly satisfactory.

E. James has a fine lot of Spiraea Alexandra, hydrangeas and Tausendschon roses. He is one of the most successful growers in this vicinity.

Daniel MacRorie was over last week, rounding up members for the S. A. F. He has lots of surprises in store for the convention in August. A royal time is assured to all.

Miller & Meherin report business quite satisfactory. They specialize in seeds and bedding stock. E. R. C.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The weather has continued cooler, with showers. Newly set plants on the lawns and in the nurseries have been greatly benefited by the rain. It is hoped that the blooming of outdoor roses, peonies, rhododendrons, delphiniums and many varieties of perennials will be retarded so that there will be a plentiful supply for Memorial day.

Mothers' day had but little effect on market conditions except to clean up all of the white carnations. Outdoor flowers were used extensively to honor the day. Some of the churches used designs in color, and bright flowers were worn by many.

Social events have not been numerous and have used small quantities of flowers. The demand for designs is good. The supply of all sorts of cut stock is fully equal to the requirements of the market. Orchids are in over-supply. Hydrangeas and pelargoniums are the only varieties of potted blooming plants offered.

Various Notes.

Zimmerman Bros. are bringing in some good violas.

Frank Chervenka has retired from the Holden Floral Co. and has taken a position with the Thomas Floral Co., of Seattle.

S. Lubliner reports a brisk sale of carnations for Mothers' day.

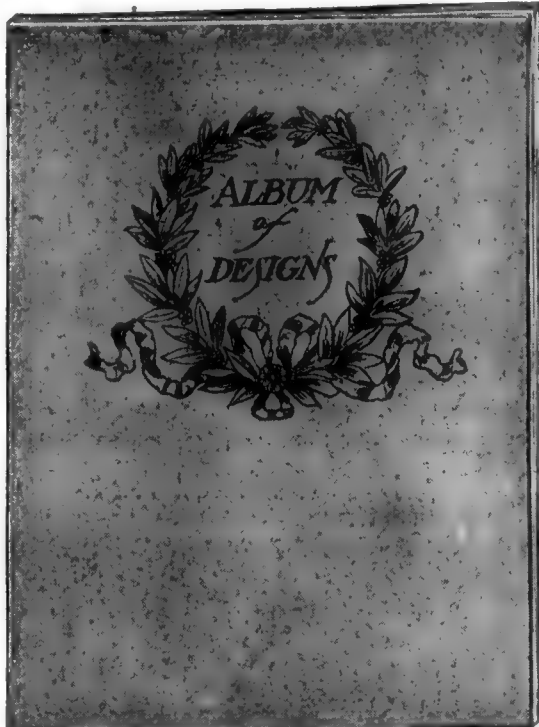

Some of the best snapdragons come from the range of Aug. Zittervitz.

Niklas & Son are showing the first gaillardias.

Clarke Bros. have some fine orchid plants in full bloom as a part of their window decoration; they are Cattleya Mossiae.

Mr. Fletcher, of Hood River, Ore., was in town last week.

riety of colors, also double stocks in white and purple.

S. A. Nutt geraniums have been quite popular this season and the supply of this variety is about exhausted.

Geo. Betz & Son report that their stock of bedding plants is nearly all sold.

The schedules of prizes offered by the committee of the Rose Festival Association in charge of the city beautiful contest are being distributed; 968 cash prizes divided into firsts, seconds and thirds, ranging from $1 to $30, to a total of $3,021, are provided for. Improved ground in large and small plots, vacant land, business places in residential districts, public schools and fire stations may compete. The judging will be based entirely on what is visible from the street or sidewalk. Porch boxes and tubs, lawn beds, shrubs and trees planted and their maintenance in good condition are the features allotted about three-quarters of the points. S. W. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The week, up to the last two days, has been one of darkness and drizzle, with the heaviest rainfall in many years for May. Some kinds of stock have been held back a little, but in general there is no shortage. While counter trade has been a little slow, there is still enough decorative work, etc., to keep things moving in the retail stores. There is little special planning for Memorial day, which is expected at best to clean up a lot of the cheaper stock; more hopes are being built on the prospect for June weddings. Peonies are still scarce, as a good deal of the early crop was spoiled, but some good ones are coming in and there is said to be a fine late crop. Carnations are off crop this week and prices have advanced sharply, but prices in this line jump up and down unaccountably from day to day. Sweet peas have been poor and in moderate supply, but are rapidly improving with better weather. Roses are plentiful enough and are hard to move, as their average quality is poor. Offerings of outdoor roses are still rather light, but a large cut is expected by the end of the month.

Iris is the most conspicuous thing in the market, being easily the finest ever seen here; it is plentiful and cheap enough for everybody and enormous quantities have been sold. Offerings of gladioli are moderate, but are improving in quality. Valley has been rather poor until the last day or so. There is still a nice showing of potted Tausendschon ramblers. Retail nursery and seed stores also report good sales of potted roses for later blooming. A good many rhododendrons and hydrangeas are still being sold. Some nice pink-flowered spiræas, shown this week, have been well received. Orchids are in fair demand, with ample supplies.

May Flower Show.

The May flower show, held under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Horticultural Society, May 7 to 9, is considered one of the most successful affairs yet held in the Palace of Horticulture at the exposition. While the organizations in charge are composed largely of amateurs, a considerable number of florists and professional growers accepted

Dr. John A. Scannavino, for tulips and aquilegias; to Dean Iris Gardens, for iris; to Mrs. Muhler, for sparaxis; to Mrs. R. H. Grey, for blue perennial pea.

Some other rather notable displays were made. C. C. Morse & Co. had a large collection of hybrid sweet peas grown under glass; the California Nursery Co. had a collection of about 400 varieties of roses, and E. E. Curtis, of Berkeley, showed a single specimen of rose Mme. Edouard Herriot. A handsome showing was also made of tree peonies by Carl Purdy.

The next flower show in the Palace of Horticulture, will be held June 23, under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society.

Various Notes.

Probably the most striking window seen in this city since Easter is that of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. this week. The central feature is a wax figure in wedding costume, with a little chaplet of hydrangea petals over the hair and carrying a remarkably large shower of lilies of the valley. The background is a bower of rambler roses, with a solid arch of Tausendschon above and to either side and smaller plants of Dorothy Perkins behind.

Podesta & Baldocchi are taking special care of their window decorations this spring and have managed to have something considerably better than the ordinary there all the time. For the last few weeks orchid decorations have formed the principal feature of one of the windows, while the central piece in the other is usually a basket arrangement of a considerable variety of flowers, with which they have had great success. Irish Elegance roses formed the principal motif in some of the recent displays; just now the feature is a basket of unusually fine red peonies.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee reports large shipments of Asparagus plumosus at present. Planting is well under way now at the Darbee violet farm, in San Mateo county. A new reservoir, just built, will make the crop independent of fall rains.

A little flower stand was started about a month ago in the lobby of the Phelan building, but the project was found unprofitable and has been abandoned.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has been selling a large number of fine phloxenopsis plants of late.

Harry Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is spending the week in San Francisco, calling on the florists and taking in the exposition. He will proceed shortly to Japan, but expects to stop here again on his way home.

S. T. Beatie has about decided to travel this season on his own account, and expects to leave June 1 for his early trip.

Mr. Canepa, the Mission Florist, has a nice marble-front store at 2583 Mission street. He has been in that location for several years, but the building in which he is now located was completed only a few months ago and gives better facilities than he has formerly enjoyed. Mr. Canepa also owns the Twenty-second Street Florist Shop, around the corner at 3230 Twenty-second street.

The executive committee in charge of the local preparations for the S. A. F. convention met May 8. All the sub-committees reported progress, but no action of special importance was taken.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; Vice-president, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb. Fortieth annual meeting, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1915.

W. A. PETERSON, of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, was the only layman in the party of nineteen that went to Trenton, N. J., last week, to tender the invitation to Billy Sunday to come to Chicago, all the others being clergymen. Mr. Peterson has in charge the financial end of the hoped-for revivals.

IN no previous season has so much nursery stock found its outlet through the department stores. Sales to department stores never are anything but an outlet for surplus stock, a bit better than the brush pile, no doubt, but the nurseryman who depended on them for his profit would buy little gasoline.

CHARLES MOMM has retired from the nursery company of Charles Momm & Sons, 613 Stuyvesant avenue, Irvington, N. J., having sold out to his son, Walter Momm, and William Metcraft, who are now in full charge of the business. Mr. Momm continues to work about the nursery, however, assisting the new owners in every possible way.

THE Phoenix Nursery Co., of Bloomington, Ill., was incorporated May 6. The incorporators are: W. E. Rossney, Thomas S. Weldon and A. H. Rossney, with A. E. De Mange as correspondent. The capital stock is $2,500. This company includes the old concern, recently bankrupt, of the same name, at Normal, Ill., and continues the business at the same place.

PLANT ACT RULES AMENDED.

The rules and regulations for the enforcement of the federal plant quarantine act have been amended to allow the importation of tree seeds and orchids in commercial quantities from countries which do not maintain nursery stock inspection. Formerly no stock was admitted from such countries except in limited quantities for experimental purposes. Now the first sentence of regulation 6, which covers this subject, has been struck out and the following inserted in its place:

Nursery stock, except orchids and tree seeds, from countries which do not maintain nursery-stock inspection, will be admitted into the United States only for experimental purposes and in limited quantities, under special permit through ports designated therein. (See regulation 5.) Orchids and tree seeds may be imported from such countries in commercial quantities under special permit.

CULTURE OF HARDY SHRUBS.

Planting.

In his recent address on the culture of hardy shrubs, before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Arthur E. Thatcher, of Bar Harbor, Me., superintendent of the Mount Desert Nurseries, said:

"There has always been and probably always will be a difference of opinion as to whether fall or spring is the better time for planting. If the work has to be done in the fall on account of the rush of work in the spring, it is advisable to plant as early as possible, when the ground is in a moist condition, directly after the leaves commence to fall. For my own part I am strongly in favor of preparing the ground in the fall, letting it lie rough through the winter, and planting in the spring. If the work is well done and the requisite amount of attention is given the shrubs afterwards, there is small chance of failure. The best time for planting is when the ground is in a moderately moist condition, as the soil can then be made firm without becoming pasty, and if possible choose a calm day, as wind has a most detrimental effect upon the roots.

"While the roots should be well covered, it is not advisable to plant too deeply, especially on heavy land, and the nearer the fibrous roots are to the surface the greater warmth do they receive and consequently start into active growth more quickly than if buried some distance from the surface. When the planting is completed it is an excellent plan to give the shrubs a good mulching of any suitable material at hand, such as decayed leaves or long dressing. This is of the greatest assistance if warm weather prevails, for it keeps the roots moist and cool and prevents the surface soil from becoming baked.

Watering.

"Many people are under the impression that newly planted shrubs should be copiously watered at the roots, but I consider this unnecessary and often detrimental. If a good watering is given immediately after they are planted, which will settle the soil about the roots, and a mulching is applied, little water will be needed for some time by the roots, but it is an excellent practice to spray them overhead frequently. This keeps the wood moist and greatly assists the buds to develop.

"Many beautiful American shrubs are notoriously fond of peat and if the conditions are not naturally favorable for their cultivation, liberal additions of this material should be incorporated when preparing the ground, if it can be obtained. Peat, however, is not always available, neither is it absolutely necessary, for many peat-loving subjects will succeed admirably in a mixture of fibrous loam, decayed leaf-mold and sand.

Pruning.

"The pruning of hardy shrubs is one of the most important matters connected with them, but at present it is imperfectly understood and we see far too often the lamentable results accruing from a lack of knowledge of their individual requirements. All that is generally considered necessary is for an incompetent workman to give the shrubs an annual trimming with a pair of shears, with the result that when the work is finished the shrubs all have about the same rounded, stiff appearance, much of the old growth which should have been removed is left and forms a mass of useless growth and the young wood, which should be carefully preserved for future blossom, is cut away. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule, as shrubs differ so much in their individual requirements, but it is better not to prune at all than to prune indiscriminately. The large majority of flowering shrubs produce their blossoms during the spring and summer months and some of these, such as the philadelphus, deutzias and forsythias, which produce their flowers on wood of the previous season's growth, are improved by having some of the flowering stems cut clear out as soon as the blossoms have fallen. This will help to strengthen the new growths sent out from the base and give them a better opportunity of becoming well ripened before winter sets in. The majority of hardy shrubs, however, require little pruning beyond occasionally removing the old growth so as to keep them shapely and open, to enable them to receive the full benefit of the sun and air."

has been cleaned up each day and the demand has been brisk, considering the fact that there is usually a marked slump right after a holiday. Mothers' day has now reached sufficient proportions to warrant the term "holiday," as the increase in business for that time is clearly apparent.

The stock has been of fine quality and shows no sign of deterioration. Roses are in sufficient supply, but there is no surplus. Russells are fast supplanting Beauties in public favor and, being in exceedingly fine shape, are moved with no effort. Carnations are better than usual and are selling well. The sweet pea crop is decreasing; there is still a fair supply of good flowers, but the stems are short. Valley has sold well during the last week and lilies are moving much better than they have been. Peonies are on the market regularly now and look well, but are moving slowly so far.

Various Notes.

A. McDonald, manager of Gimbel's flower department, now has a space that is three times the size of that with which he started at the opening of the department, October 7, 1914. The business has been exceptionally fine, as can be readily seen from the enlarged space. Mr. McDonald expects to keep the department busy right through the summer months. He is having numerous decorations for dinners and other functions, a sort of patronage which one would not imagine would be given to a department store.

Mrs. I. Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., who recently submitted to an operation for appendicitis, is again able to be in the market and store, although she has by no means fully recovered. Her many friends are glad to welcome her back and all are wishing her a speedy recovery.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., visited the trade here last week.

P. N. Obertin, of Kenosha, Wis., was in Milwaukee placing advance orders and looking things over generally.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business last week and the first part of this week was only fair. The demand is about the same as it was. The supply of stock is not as great, but still is sufficient for present needs. From indications, the Memorial day offerings will be large and among other things will comprise a fine assortment of peonies.

Roses are in large supply and good in quality; many of them are, however, rather short-stemmed and these move slowly, while the longer grades have a better market. Peonies are coming in strongly, and generally are of fine quality. Lilies are plentiful. Carnations, too, are abundant, but are not so good as they were. Some fine lily of the valley and orchids may be had. Outdoor sweet peas are in the market. Other offerings include callas, cornflower, iris, snapdragon and baby's breath. Business in greens, particularly ferns, is good.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been putting large quantities of peonies into storage for Memorial day.

Miss Fannie White, of Lexington, was in the city May 17, on a buying expedition.

L. H. Kyrk was the first in the market to offer cornflowers and outdoor sweet peas this spring.

Gus. Adrian is busy with the spring bedding season. Miss Jennie Adrian left last week on a visit to the Pacific coast.

Visitors include Trebor Weltz, Wilmington, O. C. H. H.

IRVINGTON, N. J.

Edward Fenger, of 147 Linden avenue, who grows flowers and plants for the New York market, is offering a fine line of bedding plants.

Edward Jacobi, of 109 West Clinton avenue, has thousands of geraniums, which he has grown principally for Memorial day trade.

Ernest Helms, whose greenhouses are at 1319 Springfield avenue, lost thousands of pansy plants last winter because of heaving by frosts, but has nearly made up his losses in that line by the higher prices he has received for the plants which survived, which are of good quality.

George Deisler, 1311 Springfield avenue, finds such a ready sale at his greenhouses for carnations and chrysanthemums, which are his specialties, that he seldom sends any of his products to the market.

Charles Deisler, 1287 Springfield avenue, sold a large quantity of carnations for Mothers' day. At present there is a big demand for potted geraniums and other bedding plants.

Society Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, May 12. Messrs. Duthie, Holloway and Gray were appointed judges for the evening and gave awards as follows: Best vase of outdoor flowers, first, H. Miller; three heads of cauliflower, first, J. F. Johnstone; three heads of lettuce, first, P. Charboniard. Vase of tulips exhibited by P. Charboniard, honorable mention; bunch of asparagus exhibited by A. Fournier, honorable mention.

James Duthie gave an interesting talk on the new American Dahlia Society, outlining the proposed work and urging all interested to become members.

The Darwin tulip show, held in the Neighborhood Association building May 14, was a great success, competition in the classes for the John Scheepers prizes bringing out some fine exhibits. Among the prize winners were George D. Pratt, J. F. Johnstone, George F. Baker, G. Hutton, J. P. Morgan and A. McGregor. Messrs. Holloway, Duthie and Trepas acted as judges.

HYDRANGEAS

We have a magnificent lot of large plants grown in tubs and half-barrels for

JULY AND AUGUST FLOWERING

We have made a specialty of Hydrangeas for years, and our plants have never been finer than they are this year. They are well budded, and will begin to show color the end of June, and will be in perfection during July and August—when they are most in demand.

Hydrangea Otaksa, the standard pink variety, and the new French Hydrangeas—Avalanche, Fraicheur, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere and Mlle. Renee Gaillard. Strong plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each—according to size.

Otaksa, very large specimens in half barrels, $7.50, $10.00 and $12.50 each—according to size.

DRACAENA INDIVISA

Large plants for centers of vases, 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.50 each—according to size.

CROTONS

Assorted varieties for bedding, in 3 1/2 and 4-inch pots, $15.00 and $25.00 per 100.

VINCA MAJOR VARIEGATA

We have a fine stock of this in strong, heavy plants in 4-inch pots, at $10.00 and $12.00 per 100—according to size.

ENGLISH IVY

Strong plants, 4-inch pots, $10.00 and $12.00 per 100—according to size.

J. D. THOMPSON CARNATION CO.,

JOLIET, ILL.

GREENWICH, CONN.

There was a good attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society, held May 14, at Doran's hall. Considerable business of importance was transacted, with reference to the summer and fall exhibitions, annual outing, etc.

Copies of the schedule of the summer exhibition may be had on application to the secretary. Fifty-two classes are provided for, comprising plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables, with classes for floral decorative work. The exhibition will be held in the town hall, Greenwich, June 18 and 19.

The committee in charge of the fall exhibition reported satisfactory progress. A preliminary schedule was read; it will, when published, be of interest to all intending exhibitors. The annual outing will take place at Edwards' Rye Beach Inn, the date to be announced later. Several new members were elected and a number of new names were presented for approval of the society.

Harry Turner, of the Morris Nursery Co., was present and made a few remarks of a highly commendatory nature. P. W. Popp read a paper on "Dahlia Culture," which was received with interest; a rising vote of thanks was extended.

The exhibits of the evening, while not numerous, were creditable to the exhibitors. The awards were as follows: James Stuart, cultural certificate for calceolaria; James Linane, vote of thanks for calceolaria; William Morrow, honorable mention for Eucharis Amazonica; Robert Williamson, vote of thanks for display of tulips; J. Guermansprey, vote of thanks for Aralia cordata; P. W. Popp, vote of thanks for Halesia tetraptera and Calceolarias T. Thumb and Pygmy. The next meeting will be held June 11. P. W. Popp, Cor. Sec'y.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself. The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots,

- $ 4.00 per dozen.
20.00 per 100.
150.00 per 1000.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has had its ups and downs since Mothers' day. We had a 2-day street car strike, which crippled business the middle of last week. Saturday was a good day all around.

Stock was scarce immediately after Mothers' day, but the market eased up considerably toward the end of the week, although there was a good demand. Roses are in good supply and the quality is good. Many good Beauties in various lengths are available and meet with a ready sale. Peonies have put in their appearance, and the few already on the market are rapidly disposed of. Iris and miniature gladioli have also arrived and are much in demand, although the supply of the latter is more than the call for it.

Various Notes.

Many of the stores are showing fine lines of pottery for garden and porch use. Breitmeyer's, the Bamb Floral Co. and E. A. Fetters are the leaders in this line.

Albert J. Stahelin was confined to his home for a few days last week with a severe cold, which threatened to become serious.

A. Pochelon returned last week from a day's motor and fishing trip.

John Berlin, who for many years was on the staff of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, is now at the Cut Flower Growers' Corporation.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange recently purchased a Buick motor truck, which will be put into regular service between Mount Clemens and Detroit just as soon as the special body is completed.

The clock in the City hall tower was moved ahead one hour Saturday night, May 15, and Detroit is now doing business on eastern standard time. The factories, theaters, churches, street railway company, ferry companies and the stores all pushed their clocks one hour ahead, but will operate on the old schedule, meaning one hour more daylight.

Henry Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, is the latest member of the trade to acquire an automobile, his acquisition being a Hupmobile.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

A FLUE-HEATED GREENHOUSE.

Can I get enough heat from a grate about 18x25 inches to heat a house 20x50 feet, through a flue? I wish to maintain a temperature sufficient to propagate geraniums, coleus, etc. Only in two winters during the last eight years has the temperature here dropped below zero, and then only for a night or two. The lowest temperature was 5 degrees below zero. Can I get a book anywhere that describes the construction of a flue-heated house? Would 6-inch tile be large enough for a flue for such a heater? I have never seen any discussion of flue-heated houses in the trade papers and I realize that such heating is out of date, but I have the ironwork for such a furnace and wish to build a small house if it can be heated in that way. A florist friend here says my plan will work. What do you think? D. C. L.—N. J.

A grate of the size mentioned should answer for a house 20x50 feet, but if wood is to be used for fuel, as is desirable, the furnace should be five or six feet in length and eighteen or twenty inches wide inside. The heating of greenhouses by flues is described in "Greenhouse Construction," by L. R. Taft, which will be sent post-paid by The Review for $1.50. Hard burned or fire brick should be used for the flue, for the first ten feet at least, and after that, if sewer pipe is used, it should be 8-inch.

THE COAL MARKET.

The long heralded expansion of the export trade in coal has now passed the period of prophecy, it is said, and is entering the era of fulfillment. It is slowly assuming an actual existence, just beginning to be. Though this stimulus from abroad has not yet aroused the home market to any great degree, it has caused a little "precautionary buying of smokeless coal," since the foreign purchasers, like the florists, principally favor that grade of fuel. Perhaps it may soon be advisable for some florists to give more than their usual amount of serious consideration to "precautionary buying."

A Chicago reporter for the Black Diamond, after referring to these precautionary purchases, goes on to say: "It is now known that for several months the export trade will take various amounts of coal, estimated at about 2,000,000 tons in excess of what has

QUICKEST WATER HEATER IN THE WORLD

The immense amount of direct self-cleaning heating surface, the thin vertical water ways and the long effective fire travel, cause the Kroeschell type of boiler construction to heat water quicker than any other form of boiler.

Expressions from Men Who Know BoilersTHE LEADING GROWER IN VERMONT.

I have the Kroeschell Boiler six years; it is heating 17,000 sq. ft. glass. No other but a Plate Boiler for me.
(Signed) H. M. TOTMAN,
RANDOLPH, VERMONT.

WELL KNOWN IN THE GOLDEN WEST.

Our No. 2 Kroeschell is doing fine work and I am well pleased with it.
(Signed) G. P. BUTLER, JR.,
SANTA CRUZ, CAL.

ONE OF BOSTON'S WELL KNOWN GROWERS.

The Kroeschell has taken the place of four cast iron boilers at a big saving in coal. We are using it now for the fifth year. The longer we use it the better we like it.

(Signed) A. B. KNOWLTON,
NORTH GRAFTON, MASS.

THE PLANT KING OF THE WEST.

I have used Kroeschell Boilers ever since I built my first greenhouse. They have always given me the very best satisfaction and I believe them as good boilers as money can buy.

(Signed) F. OECHSLIN,
CHICAGO, ILL.

OHIO'S CELEBRATED CYCLAMEN SPECIALIST.

After using your No. 12 Kroeschell Boiler I came to the conclusion that had I to install more boilers it would be the Kroeschell and no other. It really is a pleasure to heat, no trouble to get the desired heat in a very short time.

(Signed) CHRIST. WINTERICH, DEFIANCE, OHIO.

THE QUALITY PLACE OF BOSTON.

Regarding the Kroeschell it is the best we have ever had and satisfactory beyond our expectations. It heats up especially quick and has saved us considerably already in the price of fuel. When we are in need of another boiler we will give the Kroeschell the first consideration.

(Signed) WM. W. EDGAR CO.,
WAVERLEY, MASS.

A BIG MAN IN THE FLORICULTURAL WORLD.

The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction.

The Kroeschell is the best boiler we have ever handled.

(Signed) CHARLES TOTTY, MADISON, NEW JERSEY.

A FAMOUS ILLINOIS ROSE RANGE.

In speaking of the Kroeschell Boiler as an economical greenhouse boiler I cannot say too much. Personally I have had the pleasure or misfortune to fire nearly every make of G. H. Boiler on the market and I can safely say the Kroeschell is the best of them all.

(Signed) CHAS. McCAULEY,
RIVERBANK GREENHOUSES,
GENEVA, ILL.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSHROOM PLANT.

We spent $100,000 in building and equipping the largest modern mushroom plant in the world. We purchased in every instance the best of everything we could get, and the fact that we installed a Kroeschell Boiler to furnish our heat is sufficient evidence of our opinion of same.

Since installing this boiler and operating it we have never had any reason to change our opinion.

(Signed) FALMOUTH MUSHROOM CELLARS, INC.,
FALMOUTH, MASS.

The carnation range of Mr. Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, consists of nearly 70,000 sq. ft. of glass and the water plant is heated by a No. 14 and No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler and Kroeschell Generator. The product of the plant is known throughout the West for its fine quality. Mr. Z. has used different kinds of boilers. As for the Kroeschell, he says: "I think the Kroeschell Boilers are the best boilers a florist can buy."

been taken per month. This will automatically wipe out any possible surplus of smokeless and will probably eat heavily into the tonnage ordinarily allotted to the regular trade. Retailers who have been holding off are beginning to sense danger and some are putting themselves under contract, while others are taking actual coal and putting it in storage while it is to be had. This has improved the situation materially. Some good sized contracts in the upper lakes have been closed within the last ten days. The market is consequently strong at $1.25 for mine-run, with lump and egg already scarce at circular figure of $1.60."

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been having delightful weather, with some rain, but this week opened dark and cold. There are plenty of flowers of all kinds. Lilies, which were a little scarce the first part of the month, are quite plentiful again. Many southern peonies and irises are arriving, as well as the early varieties of home peonies. It looks now, with snowballs and weigelas in full bloom, as if all the early outdoor flowers will be gone before Memorial day.

The retail stores have been complaining that trade is quiet, outside of funeral work.

trade. He will shortly open a store in Carnegie, Pa.

The Neff Floral Co. has moved its place of business to 431 Liberty avenue.

Randolph & McClements say that it is a blessing, in a way, that the cut flower trade has let down, as they have all they can do selling plants. Window and porch boxes are among their specialties and they already have filled several miles of them.

J. M. Johnston, of McKeesport, started in the business without any knowledge of it whatever, but, with his energy and up-to-date methods, he has built up a trade that would be a credit to a much larger city.

We recently have heard from our old friend, John Bader, who is living at Cottage Grove, Ore. The climate there has renewed his youth and he is ten years younger. He is said to have the most beautiful place in Cottage Grove. De Forest Ludwig spent several days with him. Clarke.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade for Mothers' day was heavy, and everything in the way of a flower was sold out. The dealers were not much worried over the quantity of white carnations, for as soon as these were sold out the buying public took roses and all other stock, so it is really not a white carnation day any more, but a regular flower day.

Trade since then has fallen off in the cut flowers, but has been heavy in plants for bedding stock, window boxes, porch boxes and hanging baskets, with the call for geraniums in the lead. It looks now as though there would be a shortage for the Memorial day trade, even with the majority of the growers with a larger stock than ever and several new concerns in the field.

Carnations are not as plentiful as they were a while ago, as a great many have been thrown out to make room for spring stock. Roses are coming in nicely and quality is good. A few of the summer cuts are making their appearance on the market and the quality is fine. Beauties are more plentiful, and the demand about cleans them up right along. Miniature gladioli are selling well and quantities of them are used in funeral work, which has been quite heavy. Valley is a little scarce, as all the outdoor stock is gone. Lilies have been quite scarce and at times it has been hard to get enough to fill orders. The weather has taken a decided drop, which, no doubt, will have a tendency to check the plant trade.

The Market.

The outlook for Memorial day is excellent. However, owing to the advanced season, a great many of the usual outdoor flowers will be gone. Bedding plants of all kinds are moving well, geraniums as usual being the favorites.

Various Notes.

Joseph V. Peirce is contemplating the erection of a large greenhouse this summer, to take the place of two smaller ones that he will tear down.

William P. Peirce had an excellent window the latter part of the week. The subject was "Votes for Women." Mr. Peirce carried out the color scheme in yellow in a pleasing way.

Post & Gray have opened a temporary stand in the Steiger-Dudgen Co. department store. They are carrying a line of wreaths and plants for the Memorial day trade. W. M. P.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The development of the local market is noticeable in the increasing demand for flowers that up to within two or three years were seldom, if ever, seen on sale. This is the case with gladioli, snapdragons and some other varieties. In gladioli, especially, the demand has grown to considerable proportions. The effects of Mothers' day were felt well along into the week, as the demand for that day required such close picking that there was a dearth of some flowers until after the middle of the week. While there were no large weddings or important social functions during the week, the large number of funerals made sufficient demand to keep the supply well down.

Various Notes.

Alfred W. Vose, of Woonsocket, is rejoicing in the advent of a bouncing baby at his home on Cumberland Hill.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Increased sales of bedding plants have been a feature of the market during the last week. As spring advances and garden flowers begin to bloom, cut flower sales decrease somewhat. There is, of course, a considerable demand for flowers for funeral work and for social events.

Beautiful outdoor tulips are coming into the market, some of the finer varieties appearing during the last week. Darwins seem quite popular. There are some parrot tulips seen. Outdoor sweet peas are coming in and are of good quality. Blanche Ferry is one of the most popular varieties. Outdoor valley is arriving in good quantity. Iris is plentiful and of good quality, especially the blue variety. Hydrangeas continue plentiful, are of good quality and cheap.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. have had a large quantity of funeral work recently. They have a fine supply of potted Japanese maples on display.

W. L. Jones, of Nutley, reports that his business during the last winter has been better than during any other winter for fourteen years.

The regular monthly meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held in the Krueger auditorium, in this city, Thursday evening, May 13. The members discussed many problems of the trade. The board of education committee was urged to see the members of the Newark board of education and urge them to permit gifts of flowers to members of the public school graduating classes. Some members thought the responsibility for the curtailment of this privilege belonged to the principals of the various schools, but even though this be the case, it was thought best to take the matter up with the board. The club is planning for a clam-bake, to be held next August, and plans for this were informally discussed. At the previous meeting the club voted $25 to the Yard and Lot Improvement Association for prizes for the best flowering plants grown under the direction of the association. Following the business session the members sat down to a beefsteak luncheon.

The death of Edwin Larkin, whose injury from being run over by an automobile was reported last week, is recorded in the obituary column of this issue. R. B. M.

Milton, Pa.—George J. Bender has broken ground for a residence on his lot fronting the greenhouses on Market street.

RADIUM MAKES THINGS GROW

This border of vegetables, lawn and shrubbery grown with Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.)

For better flowers, a perfect lawn, luxuriant shrubberies, more vegetables and better vegetables—and for increasing the rapidity of all vegetable and plant life—use Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.)

Use it when planting; if planting has already been done, it should be applied frequently. Dig it in around the roots, top dress your lawns, feed your shrubbery and vines. Give your plants food so that they will grow and you will not be disappointed.

RADIUM Fertilizer

A scientific and thoroughly proven combination of Radium Element with fertilizer, containing Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash. One pound will fertilize 50 square feet, or a plot 10 feet by 5 feet.

Dr. H. H. Rusby, of Columbia University, says of tests he made with Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.): "These tests also demonstrated that the quality of Radium-grown vegetables was much better than the quality of vegetables grown in untreated ground."

It also wonderfully improves the bloom of flowers.

Special Discount to Dealers

We desire to place Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.) on sale in your store now. Write us today for particulars and let us show you the many helps we will give you to push sales.

The Market.

Mothers' day is becoming one of the big days of the year. The amount of business was much larger than last year's. More flowers could have been sold were they to have been obtained. The supply of flowers is now large and prices are low.

Various Notes.

E. Drake, of Cedar Hill, has a fine assortment of bedding stock on hand.

At the Whiting greenhouses, at West Hartford, all hands are busy with the spring rush.

Hitchings & Co. will start work upon the new house for John Coombs, to be erected on South street, within a few days. The house will be divided equally between roses and carnations. Henry Munson, who has been with A. N. Pierson, Inc., for the last four years, will have charge of the roses.

Tickets for the June flower show are on sale by the members of the Connecticut Horticultural Society.

At A. N. Pierson's all of the plant departments are rushed with shipping. The grafted rose stock never looked better than it has this season, and although it is yet early for planting, their large stock will soon be sold out. Under the direction of Robert Karlstrom, this firm is laying out an elaborate display garden, which should prove attractive to the automobile traveling public, which passes through Cromwell by the hundreds on any fine day. R. C. S.

WORCESTER, MASS.

H. F. A. Lange last week had the most remarkable window display that has been seen here. In order to boost the telegraph delivery, Mr. Lange had two real telegraph poles with two crosspieces and four wires on each pole set up with a background of moss, with daisies and fir trees to make it realistic. A sure-enough Western Union operator and a sure-enough Western Union messenger at the side of a regular receiver and sender were also in the window. The instruments were connected to the Western Union line, so Mr. Lange had a window that was a reality. In the front, tags and orders from florists in different cities of the United States and Canada were on exhibition. The window had a large crowd in front of it nearly the entire time. H. L.

The Market.

Life is not easy for the florist when the thrifty farmers bring to the market bunches of outdoor valley the size of a bride's bouquet and sell them for 5 cents each, and offer flat bouquets of hardy outdoor flowers at 10 cents. The florists, however, are making good use of the daily newspapers to bring the attention of the public to first-class stock.

Competition is strong in bedding stock, and some 4-inch geraniums are being sold at 75 cents per dozen. White verbenas and geraniums were sold to a considerable extent for Mothers' day after the cut stock had been cleaned up early on the day before.

Various Notes.

H. S. Brandt has opened a store at 238 South George street. He is making use of his windows for effective displays. A wax figure representing mother and gifts for her of flowers and plants made up the Mothers' day window. Now various kinds of bedding stock are being used to form a garden in the window, the display being changed every few days. Everything is ready at the greenhouses for a busy season in this line and sales are already brisk.

W. S. Yingling is cutting some fine Easter lilies.

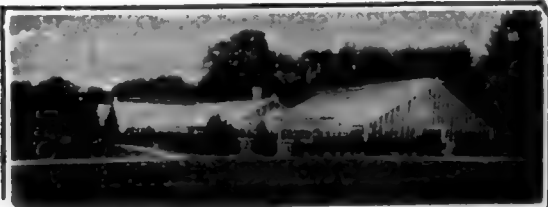

Chas. E. Smith is making preparations to move into a better store, on East Market street.

John Dauber is increasingly busy at his greenhouses in North York as the bedding plant season advances.

Business is keeping August Schaefer on the move, and, vice versa, Mr. Schaefer sees to it that business keeps on the move.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lockard have joined the force of H. S. Brandt, the former at the greenhouses and the latter at the store. J. L. L.

Reading, Pa.—The Reading Florists' Association will hold its outing Friday, July 16; the place has not yet been decided upon. The members of the association will close their stores on Friday afternoon during the summer, and beginning June 7 will close on Sunday during the hot months.

AFTER

LANCASTER, PA.

Last week was extremely busy for those who have houses of bedding plants. Bedding out is well under way in this section. In geraniums, Ricard, Nutt, Poitevine, Viaud and Buchner are the leaders here. A growing demand is noticed for the new Scarlet Bedder. H. A. Schroyer, B. F. Barr & Co., Thomas Fries and Miss Bachler all have large stocks of bedding material and are overrun with orders.

Frank L. Kohr, at his Central Market stand, carries one of the most complete lines of bedding stock to be found hereabouts.

Rudolph Nagel, who specializes on chrysanthemums and geraniums, has been most successful in rooting mums this spring and is handling immense quantities of them now.

A. F. Strickler's collection of Darwin and May-flowering tulips are fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., pleasantly entertained a number of their friends at dinner last week.

Fred W. Ritchy is erecting half a dozen fine residences at East King and Ann streets.

One of the finest concerts ever heard in Lancaster was given at Fulton opera house for the benefit of St. Joseph's hospital last week. Mrs. Albert M. Herr was chairman of the executive committee.

Lemon Landis specializes on smilax and has houses of it in fine shape for the June weddings.

Several weeks ago the outlook on the peony crop was not good, but now we are almost certain there will be a fine cut for Memorial day. The officinalis varieties are already in bloom.

The next meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association will be held May 20. The topic for discussion will be "The Newer Bedding Plants."

The time is not far distant when Mothers' day will be on a parallel with Memorial day, judging by the greatly increasing purchases of flowers by the masses on that day. Not only the grower of white carnations is benefited, but there was a noticeably increased demand for well grown blooming plants.

W. B. Girvin, Leola, Pa., had an exceptionally fine lot of white carnations, principally Matchless, for Mothers' day.

At the store of B. F. Barr & Co., Rodney Eshleman had an appropriate Mothers' day window display, the central part of which was a superb reproduction of Whistler's "Mother." The Rosery and W. A. Hammond, as well as George Goldbach, used special advertising for the day and were rewarded for doing so. H. K. R.

Make Money Growing Inside Lettuce

You know you can grow four crops of lettuce in a greenhouse. Or two crops of lettuce, one of radishes and one of tomatoes or cucumbers.

Grown in our up-to-date houses, there is, of course, more money in

WORKING UP THE WEDDING WINDOW

As Memorial day passes, the florist prepares for the June bride. Laying in a stock of accessories does not complete his task; it only marks the start. Going after business and then more business is his next play, and the wedding window is a good card to lead.

WHEN the head of the concern called him August, the decorator at the Flamingo Flower Shop knew the Old Man had something on his mind. So he stopped his work of putting the finishing touches on a bride's bouquet long enough to straighten up and answer, "Yessir," and then resumed operations. When the Old Man had such a mental burden, it was better, Gus knew, to pursue a policy of watchful waiting until he should unload it. Finally, after taking a few more puffs and meditatively peering through the tobacco smoke with one eye, he did.

"I saw," he started, "a nifty piece of work over at Higgins' store as I passed by." Gus wondered why the Old Man was interested in a dry goods store, but watchfully waited. "Did you see their window?"

"Nosir," answered Gus, with one eye on the bouquet streamers and one on the Old Man.

"Well, in the window they've got a wax lady in a bride's rig-out that looks natural as life." Then came a few puffs.

"Isthatsosir!" remarked Gus, suspecting that something might perhaps be required of him in a conversational way.

With an accompaniment of puffs and meditative blinking, the Old Man finally relieved himself of a considerable piece of his burden, which was, that a wedding window was about due, as June was close at hand.

Gus had charge of the window, and put in a new display once a week or so, that was occasionally timely, often effective, and sometimes striking. He, too, had thought of a June wedding window. In fact, he had, that morning, been studying his book of clippings from The Review, going over several illustrations of wedding windows with particular care. These he presently showed to the Old Man.

The latter perused them thoughtfully. "There's one with a bride in it," remarked he.

"I was thinkin'," said Gus, and then stopped, as if this declaration was sufficiently startling to warrant a few moments' pause for its consideration.

"I was wond'rin'," he resumed later, "if we couldn't get a bride."

The Old Man gazed at him thoughtfully for a few minutes, as if debating whether Gus had been considering something that would make them liable under the Mann act, or was only inefficient in expression.

At length he straightened his shoulders as if convinced of August's innocence, and commenced to talk. The Old Man did a great deal of hard thinking and working, but not much talking, and so, when he was once started, he was soon done.

When he had finished—Gus had meanwhile played the role of heavy listener—Gus put on his hat and coat, and went down to Higgins' dry goods store.

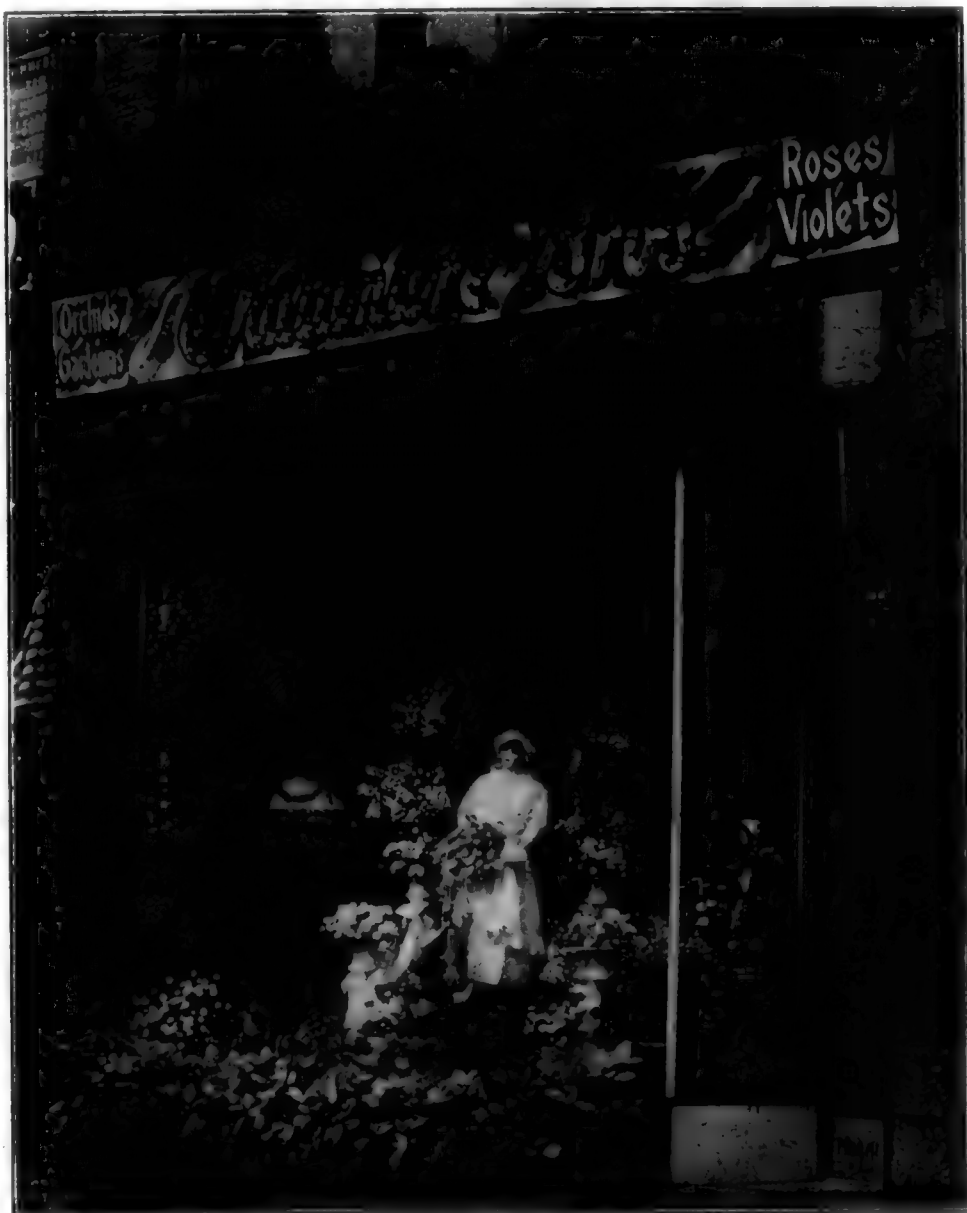

The next morning Higgins' automobile—one of those the ancestors of which are popularly supposed to be tin cans—drove up to the door of the Flamingo Flower Shop. It was the cynosure of all eyes, for in it stood Gus with his arm around the waist of a female figure whose only apparel was quite obviously a wrapping of burlap. Flaxen hair of a peroxide hue and a drug-store cheek above the burlap betrayed the sex. Gus lifted her bodily by the waist and carried her into the rear of the shop.

The window was already cleared of the display that had advertised Memorial day, and in it a short while later appeared the wax lady clad more decorously in a wonderful wedding gown, which, with its train, draped nearly the whole window. A card in a corner announced, "Gown from Higgins' Dry Goods Emporium."

The Old Man came out a little later, as Gus was arranging a background of palms. He surveyed the scene with one eye. Then, shifting the cigar to the other corner of his mouth, he examined it critically with the other eye.

Gus had been busy that morning, and now brought forth the result of his labors. A bride's bouquet of valley was placed in position on the bride's left arm, and here and there in the window were placed the bouquets of the bridesmaids, the boutonnieres of the male members of the non-existent bridal party, the basket of loose blooms for the flower girl, and other appurtenances of a wedding ceremony.

The Old Man removed his cigar. "Tomorrow," he said, "we'll have staff baskets for the maids, and the day after, baskets. Different fixin's all the time, so as to make 'em look. A doll from Higgins' all dressed up, for the flower girl; maybe ribbon-bearers too. We'll get out the altar one day—wonder if we could make the lady kneel."

Gus wondered at the Old Man's enthusiasm and perhaps extravagance. The more he surveyed the window, however, the more enthusiastic and proud of it he, too, became. He cocked his head on one side to get a better view. The Old Man stepped nearer and, carefully knocking the ash from his cigar, said in a low tone:

"It don't cost so awful much either, when you get right down to it. And it draws; look at 'em, we've got 'em all rubberin' their necks off already."

They walked towards the door, to enter the store. "Say," said the Old Man, "do you remember the bride's bouquet on the easel we had in the window last June? This makes it look like—" He stopped to think of a sufficiently contemptible comparison.

"The hole in a doughnut," supplied Gus.

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

MALANDRES' WEDDING WINDOW.

A window display of much more than ordinary merit is that shown in the photograph on page 11, the work of one of the leading New York retailers, Malandre Bros., whose main store is at 2077 Broadway. Though the photograph from which the reproduction was made was a remarkably good one, the illustration does not show all the good points of this display. Sufficient appears, however, to make its high quality easily discernible.

PERMANENT BUSINESS.

A good many of the larger cemeteries do all they can to keep the florists out—they have departments that are supposed to turn in the money the florists would get—but in smaller cities the cemeteries usually encourage the florists. Then it is in line to keep a mailing list of lot-owners, especially those who have moved away from town. It will pay to address them on various occasions. The following is an extract in point, taken from a circular letter sent out by an Indiana lady florist who only operates part of the year, but who gives evidences of a business acumen that would do credit to a large establishment. She says to lot-owners:

"We solicit your order and can serve you best for Memorial day if we know early what flowers you will want. We will also accept orders from persons living out of town who cannot themselves decorate the graves of their loved ones on Memorial day. The flowers will be placed on any grave designated in Southmound cemetery, and the wishes of the person fulfilled the same as if they were here in person. The peonies are $1 per dozen and 25 cents will be charged for placing flowers on a grave. The gardens are on the direct way to the cemetery."

If a florist works up a trade of this character, adding to his mailing list as the cemetery fills up, he will find he has a permanent business.

A UNIQUE AD.

It is well known that Henry Penn, of Boston, is devoting to advertising more time, attention and money than is any other florist, so it is quite in the natural course of events that he gets off some unusually good things. Here is one of them: "An Appreciation."

Just what thought Mr. Penn had in mind when he prepared this advertisement one can not tell; probably he was occupied with the idea that the stimulation of the love of flowers is a boost for the flower business, and it is doubtful if he had in mind obtaining so good an advertisement for his own business as resulted. Probably it was in his mind that the appeal to flower lovers would be strongest if the advertisement contained nothing of commercial character, so he used 200 agate lines of high-priced newspaper space to tell such people of Boston as did the leading advertising men in New England. The vice-president of the William Filene Sons Co., one of the largest mercantile establishments in Boston, considered it worth while to write Mr. Penn a personal letter referring to the ad.

Mr. Penn considers the results obtained from this ad, "Appreciation," equal to a thousand dollars' worth of publicity.

TEXAN FLOAT TAKES PRIZE.

In the San Jacinto day parade at Bay City, Tex., the prize-winning float of R. D. Baker was a striking feature. As will be seen from the illustration on page 14, it represented a small greenhouse surrounded with a well-kept lawn of Bermuda grass, with shrubbery, a lake and a hedge of santolinas and alternantheras. At the entrance was a welcome arch, decorated with American flags and a lone star rising from a garland of blue bonnets, the state flower.

Mr. Baker reports business quiet just now. The people of Bay City, he says, appreciate good flowers, and so temporary slackness does not especially worry him. He has an able assistant in Mrs. Baker, who has skill in making up and decorating.

THE FASHION IN STORES.

The most noteworthy feature of the florists' business in the last year or two has been the increase in the number of retail flower stores. The opening of hundreds of strictly retail stores in good locations to catch trade has made it necessary for hundreds of men who formerly looked to the public to come to the greenhouses, to open stores in the center of town—they had to do it or lose the retailers' profit. And at the same time there has been a wonderful improvement in the equipment of flower stores. With the new men buying first-class fixtures and putting up a front in keeping with modern ideas, the older stores had to spruce up or see the people go to the fresher looking places. The store fixture men have had good business among florists of late.

The illustration on page 14 will serve as an example of modern equipment for an unpretentious store. A. Steffeter had done business for some time on the southwest side of Chicago. When he decided to open a new store

An Appreciation

And Message to Flower Lovers

Yesterday I had occasion to walk through the Boston Public Garden and was filled with admiration at the truly wonderful display, particularly of tulips, now at its best.

The thought occurred that perhaps thousands and thousands of people, old and young, were unconsciously missing a marvellous treat by not making a pilgrimage to this beauty spot and enjoying the exquisite shadings and graceful form of what is, perhaps, our most appealing Spring-time flower.

Myriads of these blooms make a riot of color in the many beds, and a few moments or even hours spent in the Garden just now, far away from the rush of the city and yet so near, will fully repay any lover of the rarely beautiful in nature.

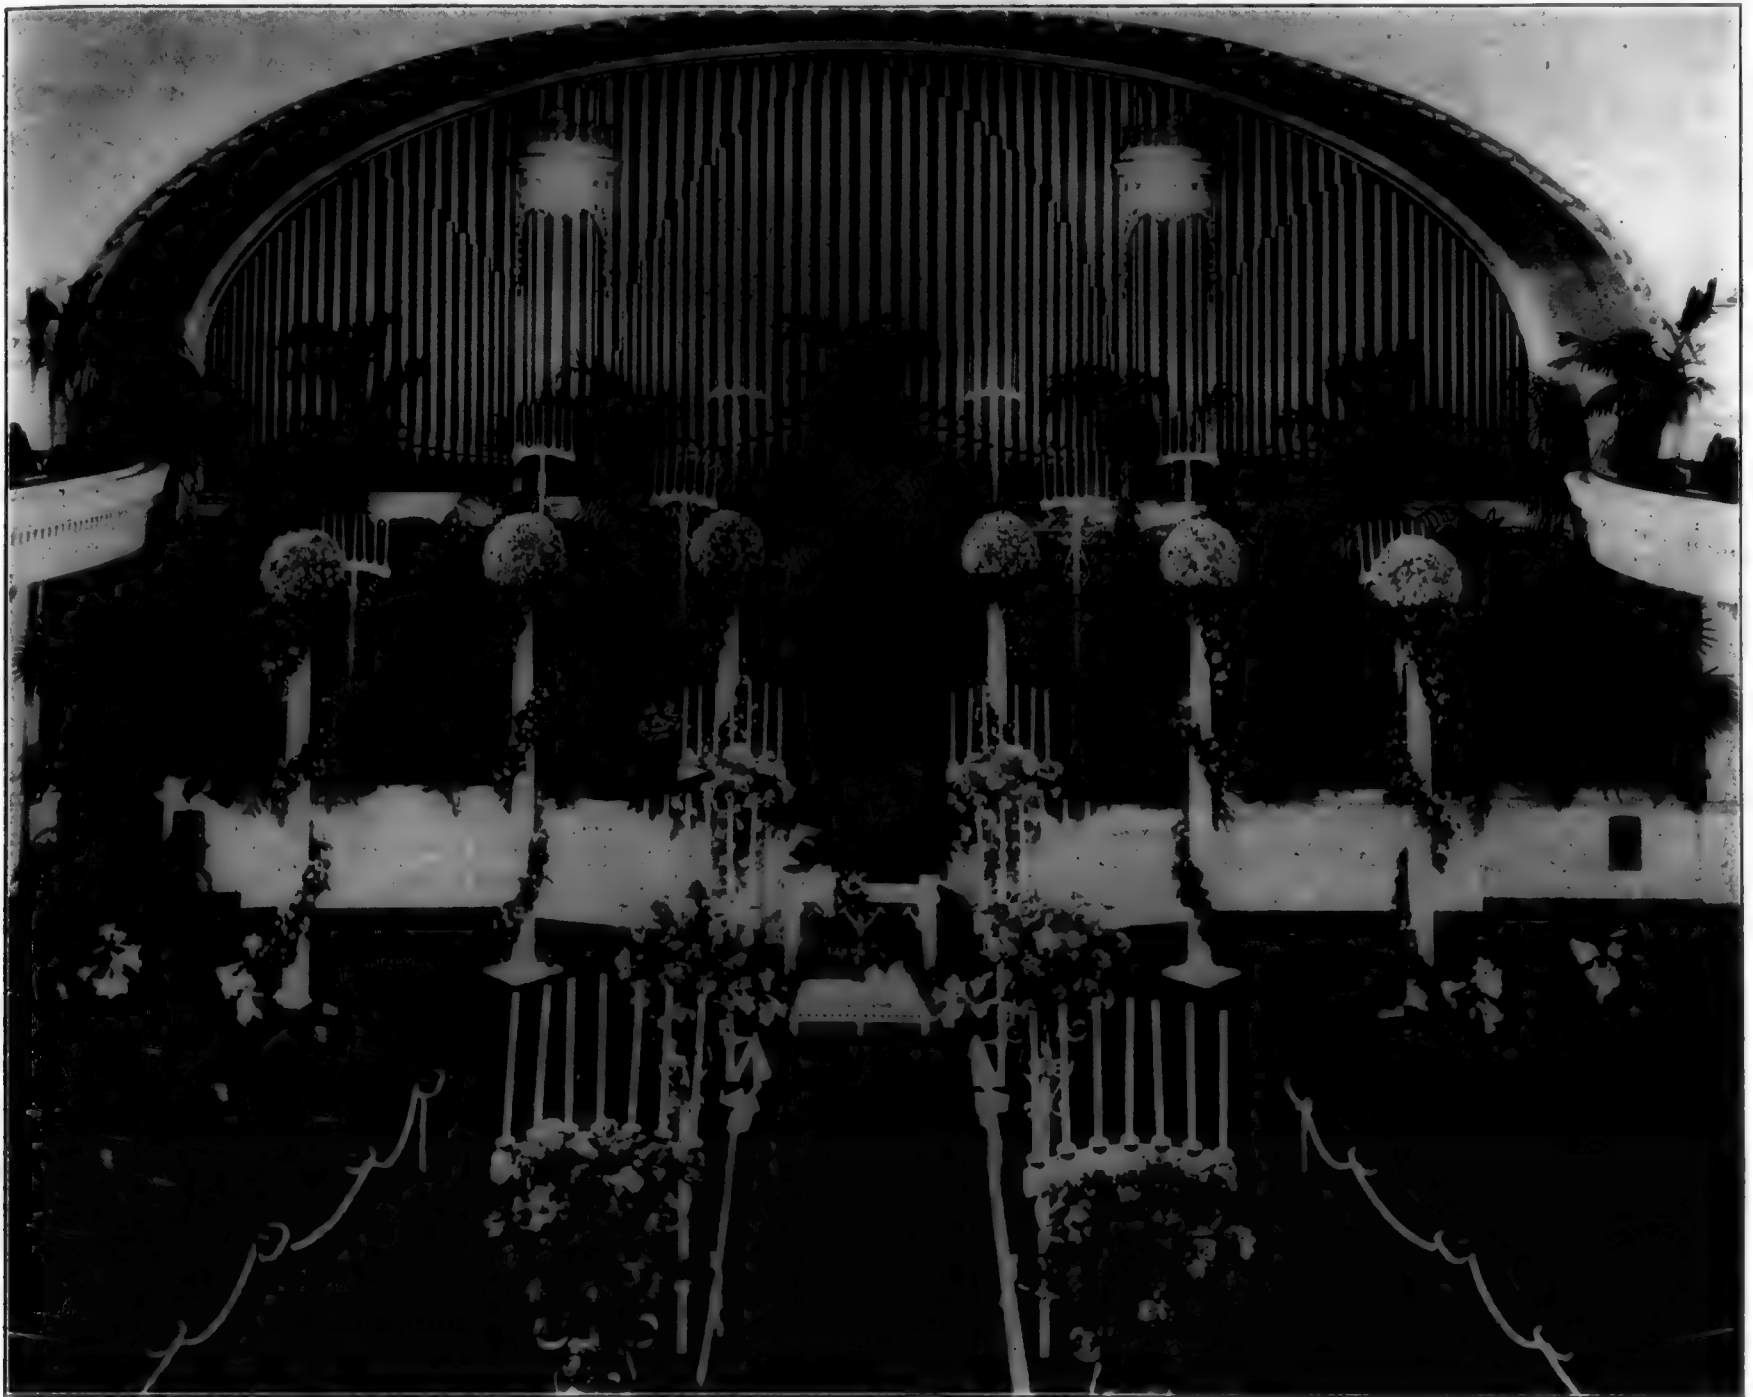

HENRY PENN

not know that there was something worth looking at in the Public Garden.

The result must have been something of a surprise. The ad caused such comment among business people, and people who know, that Mr. Penn was continually called on the phone to be congratulated on the "best ad published in the newspapers of Boston this year." J. K. Allen, advertising manager of the Christian Science Monitor, considered it the best ad he had ever seen, as did Thomas Drier, one of at 4916 South Ashland boulevard as the New City Florist he ordered a complete set of fixtures of Buchbinder Bros. The store opened May 10.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Springfield, Mass.—The principal secured creditors of Sidney A. Saunders, whose petition in bankruptcy was reported in last week's Review, are Nelson F. Higgins and the Third National Bank, of Springfield; their claims are for $3,185 and $360 respectively. There are about fifty unsecured claims, the most important of which are those of Nelson F. Higgins, for $301; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., for $678; Elizabeth Puffer, of Springfield, for $233, and Frank Carter, of Springfield, for $194.57. Mr. Saunders has been operating a store at 150 State street, which he purchased of Mr. Higgins about a year ago. His assets were scheduled as $4,711.64 and his liabilities as $6,236.23.

PEONIES FOR JUNE WEDDINGS.

What would the decorator do, in the season of June weddings, without the peony? What, for instance, would the William L. Rock Flower Co., of Kansas City, find to take the place of the peonies in the accompanying illustration? Lilies? But lilies cost considerably more than peonies, so that they can not be used so freely, and then, again, people see so much of lilies at Easter they want some other big, bold, decorative flower for the spring weddings. In the autumn the mum's the thing, but in June there's nothing to compare with peonies.

The decoration shown in the illustration was in the Independence Boulevard Christian church, at Kansas City. In it there were 1,000 pink peonies and 1,000 sprays of pink rambler roses, also 300 plants of various sizes and kinds. The posts that were the conspicuous feature of the job were ten feet high and the balls surmounting these posts were thirty-six inches in diameter. It was a unique decoration, well done.

THE FIGHT IN ILLINOIS.

As each day rolls by without the bill for the licensing of firemen of steam boilers having come up for the final reading in the Illinois house of representatives, the outlook for a victory for the florists becomes brighter, for greenhousemen throughout the state are in the meantime getting in some good work in their fight on the bill. Among others, J. L. Johnson, proprietor of the De Kalb Greenhouses, at De Kalb, Ill., has been busy. Upon his presentation of the matter to an ex-representative of his district, the latter offered his services. He wrote to several influential members of the legislature, whose replies, appended herewith, will no doubt be of interest to the workers against the bill. For courtesy's sake, Mr. Johnson withholds the signatures, although he has the original letters, but gives permission for the reproduction of the letters, as follows:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 17 and to say that I have been doing some work to defeat house bill No. 563, which is now on third reading. It was introduced by our friend Lee O'Neil Browne, and he seems to be interested in securing its passage. However, if I remember correctly, he said he introduced it by request. I find considerable opposition to the bill, and, if possible, we will try to defeat the bill on final roll call. At any rate, I will leave no effort undone to bring about that result, as I consider it a very bad bill.

Your letter of May 17 regarding house bill No. 563 has my attention. I have known this bill for some time and I do not believe that when it is given daylight it will receive attention. I will do all I can to assist in this matter.

Your letter of May 17 in regard to house bill No. 563 was received. This bill I consider in the same light as you do, and in my judgment it would be an injustice to a great many who operate plants by steam. I will use my influence to defeat it.

BAILEY'S CYCLOPEDIA, VOL. III.

["The Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture," by L. H. Bailey. Published by the Macmillan Co., New York. Volume III, containing pages 1,201 to 1,760, fully illustrated with engravings in the text and with full-page plates, several of them colored. To be completed in six volumes. Price per volume, bound in cloth, $8.]

The publication of the first volume of Professor Bailey's new cyclopedia was announced in The Review of April 9, 1914. About four months later, August 13, 1914, the completion of the second volume was recorded in these columns. In each case The Review's reviewer made a good many complimentary remarks about the cyclopedia—not flattering remarks, since the strongest commendations can scarcely be said to be flattering if they are carefully kept well within the bounds of the truth. Now the third volume, finishing the first half of this big job of book-making, is ready to be introduced to the public.

It would be an easy matter now, in this third little speech of introduction, to make a further enumeration of the cyclopedia's merits, without repeating any word of praise that was uttered with reference to the first two volumes. It would be easy to present a third and brand-new list of the cyclopedia's good qualities, ending with the words, "To be continued when the next volume arrives."

But many readers might be ready to say impatiently, as if trying to silence a pertinacious book agent: "Oh, yes, yes; we know something about Bailey's cyclopedia. We are not so ignorant as not to know how high a rank it holds in the horticultural world. We know that it is the oracle, the umpire, the referee in horticultural questions. We believe it fully justifies its name, 'The Standard.' We are willing to admit, if you will just cease talking, that all you have said or may wish to say in favor of the cyclopedia is as true as gospel and as indisputable as the multiplication table. But might it not still be true that such books as Bailey's cyclopedia are better adapted for the leisurely student than for the hurrying, scurrying florist, seedsman or nurseryman? You cannot prove that the cyclopedia would be worth its cost to the practical craftsman."

Well, it would indeed be impossible to prove mathematically how much the cyclopedia will be worth to each individual who may purchase it, since its practical value will depend largely on the use that is made of it. It may be worth nothing to its owner or it may be worth its weight in gold. The extent of the aid it will render will vary all the way from zero to infinity, according to the degree of faithfulness with which its pages are searched and explored.

But it does seem to be capable of proof that the cyclopedia contains a vast and conveniently arranged store of the most useful sort of information for anyone who will help himself to it; that the books are eminently practical as well as scientific and accurate. The motto of the editor of the books might truthfully be expressed as "Practicality first." Therefore the horticultural tourist who wishes to obtain either wealth or wisdom, or both—and that includes about every horticulturist, does it not?—will find plenty of help in Bailey's cyclopedia.

REVISED TEXAS PROGRAM.

Those in charge of the program of the coming convention at Fort Worth, Tex., of the Texas State Florists' Association in particular and of all southern florists in general, have made several changes. These changes, and also the important change of date from July 13 and 14 to July 6 and 7, are called to the attention of those who have plans for attending.

President Kerr is sending out letters to the presidents of all the local florists' clubs in the south and to as many of the members of these societies as he can get in touch with, in the hope of making the convention at Fort Worth a meeting of florists from all over the south. While it is the annual meeting of the Texas florists, the emphasis is on the sectional rather than state character of the convention, and Mr. Kerr is hoping for a large attendance from outside Texas.

The revised program of the meeting is as follows:

TUESDAY, JULY 6, 9 A. M.

Meeting called to order by Vice-president Baker, of Fort Worth.

Opening invocation.

L. J. Tackett, president of Ft. Worth Florists' Club, welcomes the convention to Ft. Worth.

Address of welcome in behalf of the city of Ft. Worth, by the mayor.

Response, by H. B. Beck, Austin, Tex.

President Robert C. Kerr takes the chair.

"Cooperation of the S. A. F. and the Southern Florists," by Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F.

"What We May Expect at the Frisco Convention," by Dan MacRorie, vice-president of the S. A. F.

"What the Big Growers Think of the South as a Market," by August Poehlmann, member of the S. A. F. board of directors.

"The Florists' Part in the Texas Arboretum," by J. S. Kerr, Sherman, Tex.

PERENNIALS FOR SOWING.

Will you please publish an article on perennials, stating what varieties may be grown from seeds sown now, so as to have plants ready for sale in April, 1916? H. & C.—Ohio.

Some of the most valuable and salable hardy perennials, the seed of which may be sown now, and which will make good stock for selling next spring, are the following:

Dianthus barbatus, or sweet-william, in separate colors or mixed; Pyrethrum roseum, single and double, a fair proportion of the double forms of which will come true from seed; Stokesia cyanea; Papaver orientale; P. bracteatum; Oenothera fruticosa major; Lupinus polyphyllus, blue, white and rose; Lychnis Viscaria splendens and L. Haageana; hollyhocks; Gypsophila paniculata; Geum coccineum Mrs. Bradshaw; Digitalis gloxiniflora; Gailardia grandiflora; Delphinium formosum, D. formosum celestinum, Queen of Blues and mixed hybrids, also D. Chinense or grandiflorum; Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bells, of which the singles are the most desirable; Aquilegia chrysantha, cœrulea and mixed hybrids; Alyssum saxatile compactum; Aster sub-cœruleus and hybrids; Coreopsis grandiflora; tritomas; Chrysanthemum Shasta daisy and King Edward VII.

Double daisies, violas, pansies and myosotis are usually treated as biennials, as are one or two of the sorts already named. They should not be sown before the end of July, or they will become unwieldy in size. The perennials named can be sown outdoors, but better germination will be had if the seeds are sown in coldframes, and these are covered with laths or other shades until the seedlings are nicely germinated. Remove the sashes and shades altogether when the seedlings are well above ground. The transplanting to the open ground must only be done during cool and moist weather. To make doubly sure, it is a good plan to prick them off into flats and from these to the nursery rows. There is then less liability of the little seedlings dying. These perennials make their principal growth after the end of August. C. W.

THE WOMEN YOU MEET

MISS MARTHA C. GUNTERBERG.

CELEBRATING the golden jubilee of the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, which, by the way, is a regular consignor of cut flowers to the Chicago market, Miss Martha C. Gunterberg May 23 took the part of the leading lady in the presentation of "The Divorce." Miss Gunterberg is well known in the trade as one of the few women engaged in the wholesale cut flower commission business. She started in the trade as saleslady for J. Bombenger, the Chicago retailer, for whom she soon became buyer. Perhaps it was because there are so few women in the wholesale end of the business that she decided, when starting out for herself, to become a commission man; at any rate she has made a success of it. But those who have seen her performances with the St. Francis Dramatic Club aver that her hobby might easily be made her life's work.

ROOT-ROT OF THE IRIS.

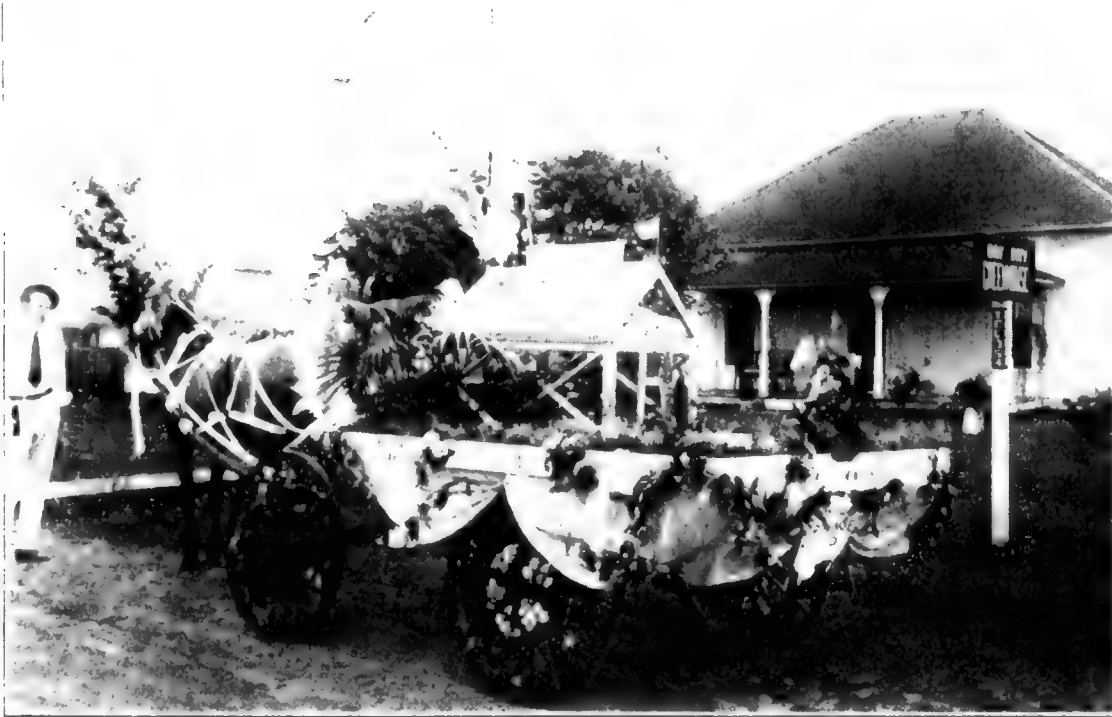

A reader of The Review wishes to know the cause of root-rot of the iris. The trouble is right here: People confound the iris with the flags that grow in swamps and so they put the plants on wet ground. A florist in Minneapolis wanted some irises, but he said he was afraid he did not have any ground that was low and wet enough. I told him such ground as that would be fatal.

For all of the German or rhizomatous group you must have high, dry ground. They are sun-loving plants and will often lift their roots out of the ground to get the heat. If you have irises on low ground you may not have any trouble in dry seasons, but when it is wet, especially when the soil washes onto them from higher ground, you will have trouble.

Some kinds of iris are more susceptible to this trouble than others. Iris pallida Dalmatica must have a high, dry place; so must Maori King. If the ground is clayey, mix sand with it and avoid too much manure. Do not plant too deep. C. S. Harrison.

Milton, Pa.—Two greenhouses have been added at the Fairview Greenhouses, each of them 21x100 feet. The range now consists of five houses, totaling about 20,000 square feet. W. Bruce Clinger, who purchased the range about a year ago from George S. Shimer, plans to use one of the new houses for roses, which hitherto have not been grown here.

H. & C.—Ohio.

Some of the most valuable and salable hardy perennials, the seed of which may be sown now, and which will make good stock for selling next spring, are the following:

Dianthus barbatus, or sweet-william, in separate colors or mixed; Pyrethrum roseum, single and double, a fair proportion of the double forms of which will come true from seed; Stokesia cyanea; Papaver orientale; P. bracteatum; Oenothera fruticosa major; Lupinus polyphyllus, blue, white and rose; Lychnis Viscaria splendens and L. Haageana; hollyhocks; Gypsophila paniculata; Geum coccineum Mrs. Bradshaw; Digitalis gloxiniaeflora; Gailardia grandiflora; Delphinium formosum, D. formosum celestinum, Queen of Blues and mixed hybrids, also D. Chinense or grandiflorum; Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bells, of which the singles are the most desirable; Aquilegia chrysantha, caerulea and mixed hybrids; Alyssum saxatile compactum; Aster sub-ceruleus and hybrids; Coreopsis grandiflora; tritomas; Chrysanthemum Shasta daisy and King Edward VII.

Double daisies, violas, pansies and myosotis are usually treated as biennials, as are one or two of the sorts already named. They should not be sown before the end of July, or they will become unwieldy in size. The perennials named can be sown outdoors, but better germination will be had if the seeds are sown in coldframes, and these are covered with laths or other shades until the seedlings are nicely germinated. Remove the sashes and shades altogether when the seedlings are well above ground. The transplanting to the open ground must only be done during cool and moist weather. To make doubly sure, it is a good plan to prick them off into flats and from these to the nursery rows. There is

MISS MARTHA C. GUNTERBERG.

CELEBRATING the golden jubilee of the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, which, by the way, is a regular consignor of cut flowers to the Chicago market, Miss Martha C. Gunterberg May 23 took the part of the leading lady in the presentation of "The Divorce." Miss Gunterberg is well known in the trade as one of the few women engaged in the wholesale cut flower commission business. She started in the trade as saleslady for J. Bombenger, the Chicago retailer, for whom she soon became buyer. Perhaps it was because there are so few women in the wholesale end of the business that she decided, when starting out for herself, to become a commission man; at any rate she has made a success of it. But those who have seen her performances with the St. Francis Dramatic Club aver that her hobby might easily be made her life's work.

ROOT-ROT OF THE IRIS.

A reader of The Review wishes to know the cause of root-rot of the iris. The trouble is right here: People confound the iris with the flags that grow in swamps and so they put the plants on wet ground. A florist in Minneapolis wanted some irises, but he said he was afraid he did not have any ground that was low and wet enough. I told him such ground as that would be fatal.

For all of the German or rhizomatous group you must have high, dry ground. They are sun-loving plants and will often lift their roots out of the ground to get the heat. If you have irises on low ground you may not have any trouble in dry seasons, but when it is wet, especially when the soil washes onto them from higher ground, you will have trouble.

Some kinds of iris are more susceptible to this trouble than others. Iris pallida Dalmatica must have a high, dry place; so must Maori King. If the ground is clayey, mix sand with it and avoid too much manure. Do not plant too deep.

C. S. Harrison.

Milton, Pa.—Two greenhouses have been added at the Fairview Greenhouses, each of them 21x100 feet. The range now consists of five houses, totaling about 20,000 square feet. W. Bruce Clinger, who purchased the range about a year ago from George S. Shiner, plans to use one of the new houses for roses, which hitherto have not been grown here.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Phaius.

The genus phaius is not as much cultivated as its merits would seem to warrant. The old P. grandifolius is well known as a striking spring-flowering, terrestrial species, but there are now some beautiful hybrids that contain, in many cases, grandifolius blood and are worthy of culture. These latter are less robust in habit than P. grandifolius, but are beautiful and decorative. Among the best are P. Norman, P. Cooksonii and P. Humblotii. The first two are of easy culture. The last is a fussy Madagascar species, but hybrids between it and grandifolius possess a good constitution. During the growing season, phaius plants like a well shaded, moist, warm house. A suitable rooting medium consists of a mixture of coarse fibrous loam and fern fiber, with some pieces of broken sandstone and occasional pieces of dried cow manure. The pots should contain ample drainage.

Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, a showy, free flowering orchid, is of great value in the fall, being particularly useful at the fall exhibitions. In window displays its long, arching branches and spikes of golden flowers are also invaluable. It succeeds best in comparatively small pots and pans, in a mixture of fern fiber and chopped sphagnum moss. The plants are now making up their new growths and need an abundant water supply. They do better if suspended from the roof than if stood on a bench. The water supply can be reduced as the growths are made up. When the flower spikes are appearing, keep a sharp watch for the small shell snails, which sometimes lurk in the compost and which are decidedly partial to the succulent spikes of this orchid. Protect them, as they appear, with bands of cotton-wool, over which snails will not crawl.

Calanthes.

Calanthes are now in active growth and, as the pots or pans become filled with active roots, the water supply can be increased. Calanthes like feeding, but do not start it until the pots have ample roots. Then water them with liquid cow manure; or, better still, dip them in a tub of the liquid. No orchids are more improved by manure water than the calanthes. They like a shaded position in a warm, moist house, and the most successful growers find that a little fire heat right through the growing season, just enough to warm the pipes, is much to their liking.

Dendrobiums.

A few dendrobiums flower at this season, but the most important commercial varieties, such as formosum giganteum, Phalaenopsis Schröderianum, nobile, Wardianum and many hybrids, are now making their growths and all appreciate a warm, stuffy, moist house while doing so. A good syringing overhead should be given about the middle of the afternoon and the house should then be closed tightly, in order to bottle up a brisk heat.

Cypripediums.

Some of the cypripediums are flowering now, particularly those of the

SHRAPNEL

Copenhagen, Denmark.—The war has produced a decided boom in the horticultural industry in Denmark. Seed exports have been far above those of previous years, particularly in lines formerly supplied by other countries which are now unable to make their usual shipments.

Aalsmeer, Holland.—The growers' association for the sale of flowers at Aalsmeer sold in 1914 about $100,000 worth of its products, an increase of $36,000 over the preceding year. This indicates that this center was less affected by the war than would be supposed. During the first few days of the war, however, sales were almost impossible, totaling less than $42 for the period of August 3 to 8. The association's net profit for the year was $1,720.

Upper Walmer, England.—Em. Draps-Boudry, of Oostdunkerke, Belgium, is here and says: "I have been in Belgium to see my nursery. It took me four days to make a trip that in peace times takes only four hours. Of my nursery there is nothing left; plants, benches, frames, perennials, all have disappeared. The remains of the twenty-four greenhouses are hanging about. The village is bombarded every day, and few houses are left unhurt. I had about a thousand young pyramid bay trees that have all been taken to the trenches by the soldiers. They have a couple of trees at every entrance to their trenches."

selenipedium section. There is no month in the year when there is not a fair crop of these popular and useful orchids. Most of the family prefer a well shaded house, with a moist atmosphere, and with a daily spraying in hot weather to prevent the attacks of thrips or red spider. The old and ever popular C. insignis is not at all a fussy subject and will grow and flower just as well if kept in a coldframe, or even under the shade of a tree right in the open air, from June 1 to September 15. If the plants are well rooted, give them a dose of liquid manure once a week.

LATE DOUBLE TULIPS.

Is it possible to hold any of the late double tulips by placing them in a cool cellar until the middle of May? If so, please give the names of the best sorts.

J. E. S.—Pa.

The following are good commercial double tulips which you should be able to hold until the middle of May in a really cool cellar: Murillo, Brimstone Beauty, also called Tea Rose; Rex rubrorum and Couronne d'Or. C. W.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Arthur F. Crabb, formerly manager and designer at the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co.'s retail store, has purchased the store of William Cunningham, at 69 South Division avenue, which he will conduct himself.

Lyon, France.—Claude Pernet-Ducher, son of the famous rose raiser, has been killed in action at the front. His death occurred last October, but the news only recently reached his father.

The Hague, Holland.—The government of Holland is proposing a bill to partly raise the prohibition placed by the law of September 23, 1912, on the importation and transportation of gooseberry, currant and raspberry bushes. It seems to have been established that the fungus that causes the American vine-mildew of gooseberries only occasionally attacks raspberry and currant bushes, and so these will be excepted from the provisions of the law.

London, England.—"Eye Witness," the official chronicler of the operations of the British army in Belgium, recently made this comment: "Among the many incongruities of this campaign not the least strange contrast is that between the waging of trench warfare and the gardening which is carried on in many places by the British soldier. The gardens, which are mostly near the dugouts, are not of an ambitious order, but when circumstances permit, considerable care is devoted to their cultivation. In some cases the small plots of growing primroses and daffodils are not more than 200 yards from the enemy, close behind the breastwork protecting their owners from the bullets which whistle overhead and bury themselves with a vicious thud in the sandbags a few feet away."

CARNATIONS

LAX SELECTION OF CUTTINGS.

Will you please examine the carnation plants sent with this letter and tell me what is the matter? Do you think it will be safe for us to bench this stock?
J. E. M.—Mo.

While the plants submitted are not of the best, with a favorable season they will likely make fair stock for benching. There is quite a good deal of bacteria and they seem rather hard, as though they had stood in small pots too long. Next season, try selecting the cuttings with a little more care.

A SALT SPRAYER FOR SPIDER.

In a recent number of your paper a gentleman mentioned a salt water mixer for spraying red spider, the sprayer to be fastened directly to a hose. We have inquired in Philadelphia at the large supply houses, but they do not carry it and we shall greatly appreciate the favor if you can give us the address of the firm manufacturing it.
W. H.—Pa.

The salt sprayer referred to by me in a recent number of The Review is manufactured by the John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind. As far as I know, it is not handled by any of the supply houses at present, but you can get it by ordering from the manufacturers.

CARNATION WASHINGTON.

In The Review for May 20 it was stated that Carnation Washington originated in Joliet and was disseminated by the Chicago Carnation Co. It is true that the above named concern disseminated the variety, but it originated with Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., who turned the stock over to the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., for distribution. The rest of the article is quite correct.

STIGMONOSE OR BACTERIOSIS.

I am sending you under separate cover some sprays of carnations. They were doing exceptionally well until three weeks ago, when we had a spell of extremely warm weather. The thermometer outside registered 85 to 95 degrees, but the house was shaded on the west side and we gave plenty of ventilation. The tips of the plants are turning yellow. They are full of buds, but these blast when about half open. Can you tell us of something which will remedy this trouble?
C. K.—N. Y.

The specimens submitted are affected by what is known as stigmonose or bacteriosis. This subject has been treated repeatedly in these columns during the last season. There is at present no known remedy that will cure a plant which is badly affected. The next year will likely reveal a better knowledge of this disease, as some of the experiment stations are working on it along different lines than have been followed heretofore. I would suggest that you give your plants a liberal supply of food, as I think the disease is brought on partly through insufficient or improper nutrition. The blasting of the buds is caused by the same disease.

A. F. J. B.

CAMELLIA BUDS DROPPING.

I planted a Camellia Japonica on my lawn seven years ago. It bloomed well from the time of planting until three years later, when it was found necessary to transplant it. Since then it has made a fine growth and has been covered with buds every winter, but in the spring the buds all drop off; not one has opened. Any information as to the cause of this and the treatment will be appreciated.
M. S. M.—Wash.

The most probable cause of the dropping of the buds is an insufficiency of moisture at the roots during the winter. If this, owing to an abundant rainfall, cannot be the reason, it is possible that the soil is too rich. Avoid feeding with nitrogenous manures for a season, in order to moderate the growth, and this may cause an improvement.
C. W.

TREATMENT OF COLD GRAPERY.

I have a cold grapery on which I would like a few pointers. Is it best to leave ventilation on all night as a preventive of mildew? In thinning the branches is it harmful to handle them, providing they are sprayed immediately afterward? Is it better to mix the pollen by shaking the vine or by spraying with the hose? When should watering be done? At what joint from the bunch should the growth be stopped?

J. T. C.—Del.

It would certainly be advisable to leave a little ventilation on all night as a preventive of mildew. In thinning the bunches do not touch the berries with your hands or head, or many of them will show rusty marks as they develop. When thinning, hold up the shoulders of the bunches with a small forked stick. Spraying the berries can be continued until the color shows; it helps to keep mealy bug in check. After the coloring has started, the bug can be killed by being touched with a small brush dipped in denatured alcohol.

Pollenizing can be done by shaking the vines about noon each day. Should the weather be dull, it is a good plan to use a rabbit's tail or bunch of cotton-wool tied on a stick, and gently brush the bunches. If you grow Muscats you will find them harder to set than Black Hambro, but if you slightly moisten your hands, draw them over the Hambro bunches and then go over the Muscats you will have no trouble in setting. Keep the temperature higher and drier while the vines are in flower.

Morning is the best time to water the borders, but damping down or syringing overhead can be done in the afternoon. Close the house tightly after syringing; ventilate again toward evening. Stop at the second leaf beyond the bunch.

Anaconda, Mont.—R. M. Greig is on a trip to California, combining business and pleasure, leaving his up-to-date range of 10,000 feet of glass in charge of Charles Blank. Business is excellent here, although it is customary to have frost every month in the year.

Geraniums

TIME TO WATER GERANIUMS.

Will you please tell us what is the right time of the day to water geraniums?
S. G.—Mich.

There can be no stated time for watering geraniums or, for that matter, any other plants at this season. A morning watering will suffice on some days. On other days another watering in the afternoon or evening may be necessary, while on dull, dark days none may be needed. In winter, morning is the best time to water, as the foliage can then become dry before night, but with the coming of spring any hour of the day will do. Water the plants in pots when they need it. Never mind whether it be morning, noon or evening. For plants outdoors, the evening is the ideal watering time during the hot months.

C. W.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUM.

We enclose a sample of a geranium bud and stem, variety Fleur Blanc. What causes the break near the bud? None of the others crack so.
J. J. G. & S.—Ohio.

The break is due either to some inherent weakness in the plant, which may carry a heavy truss on a somewhat thin stem; or it may be due to the particular variety having too much nitrogenous food, which will sometimes cause the stem to crack just below the flower truss.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bedding Out Time.

The work of selling and planting bedding plants will occupy a lot of our time for some weeks; in fact, some call will be had for them even as late as the middle of July. It is always an advantage to have a goodly percentage of the plants in flower or nearly so, as customers who come to make a selection always pick plants with a bloom on, no matter how many others there may be of double the size not in bloom. Some varieties, such as heliotropes, are easily pushed a little, but it does not pay to run geraniums hot for the mere sake of getting a few blooms open. Be sure the plants are kept well watered, especially when bedding out is being done. Careless workmen will plant them with dry balls and the plants will then remain dry probably for weeks and never develop as others do, which had moist balls. A bedding plant with a damp ball, if well firmed and the soil left loose on the surface, will withstand a lot of drought and too much care cannot be taken to see that roots and soil are really damp when bedded out.

Select Stock for the Field.

Now is the time to plant an ample supply of stock plants, especially of geraniums, in the field. Year after year growers sell out all their stock of some sorts and must then buy from some more or less distant source. The wonder is, therefore, that growers do not reserve an ample supply of strong stock plants before the real selling season is under way, and make attractive beds of them near the approach to the house or greenhouses, or use them in nursery rows. If this is done there is a certainty of an ample supply of strong cuttings in fall.

Asters.

The earliest batch of asters is now getting well established outside and later sowings can go out at any time. Be sure the ground has been well manured and thoroughly pulverized and asters are then sure to thrive. The latest sowings should be made now. They will do just as well outdoors as under glass and there is then far less probability of the plants developing the yellows or stem-rot. Vick's Branching, American Branching, Victoria and Semple's can all be sown now. Such sorts as Queen of the Earlies and Dwarf Chrysanthemum may be sown as late as the middle of June, however.

Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas set out from pots in April will now be making rapid headway and will soon be in flower. Now is a suitable time to give the plants a mulch of old, decayed manure, hotbed manure, grass, partly decayed leaves, spent hops or any similar material. This benefits the plants wonderfully and helps to keep the roots cool and moist. In hot weather it will be found a decided advantage to spray the plants over each evening. In order to secure the best flowers on outside sown plants, do not leave them too thick in the rows. The general tendency is to have the seedlings touching one another. If allowed to remain thus, good stems and flowers cannot be expected.

Hardy Annuals for Cutting.

The present is a suitable time to make a liberal sowing of such useful hardy annuals as hennemannia, larkspurs, lupines, candytuft, mignonette, Shirley poppies, clarkias, Gypsophila elegans, chrysanthemums of the Burridgeanum type, nigellas and others. These will give an abundant supply of useful flowers from late summer until frost, and not a few of them are valuable for use in design work.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

MUMS IN THE SOUTH.

The Early Varieties.

In the south the early varieties of chrysanthemums ought to be planted in their permanent quarters by this time. From the middle to the end of June is early enough to plant the mid-season and later varieties.

Add a 3-gallon bucket of bone meal or commercial guano to every 500 feet of bench surface and work it in with a rake before planting. I prefer the guano, with a guaranteed analysis of eight per cent of ammonia, five per cent of potash and five per cent of phosphoric acid, rather than the bone meal, as the guano is a more complete fertilizer and I have had better results with it.

To get three good flowers from each plant, the rows should be twelve inches apart and the plants ten inches apart in the row. Some of the smaller-leaved varieties can be set more closely. It is always well to keep the varieties of equal growth together, planting the dwarfed ones at the south end of the house, the medium tall ones in the middle and the tallest ones at the north end. Each variety then gets an equal share of light.

Syringing and Other Attentions.

In the south the plants are likely to require water twice on every bright day. Keep the weeds down and work over the surface of the beds every week for the first month. Then a mulch of any old, strawy manure will keep the beds cool and do away with cultivating the surface for some time.

Start to tie up the plants before they Canterbury Bells and Foxgloves.

If the seeds of Canterbury bells and foxgloves are not yet sown, get the seeds into a coldframe without delay. You can postpone the sowing for some time and still get flowers, but if you want strong plants do not delay seed sowing much beyond June 1. The seedlings can go into nursery rows later, selecting a place where they will have dry feet in winter and yet not be too exposed. Outdoor plants wintered with a mulch of leaves or straw are vastly better than lifted ones stored in frames.

Hard-wooded Plants.

Plant out any left-over azaleas, camellias, ericas and other hard-wooded stock. Pick away some of the soil, so as to reduce the balls, and be sure to plant firmly. If the soil where they are to be planted can have some leaf-mold spaded in, the plants will appreciate it. All these hard-wooded plants do well out in the full sun, but let it be within reach of the hose, so that they can have liberal sprayings overhead and in extremely hot weather an occasional soaking at the root. Care for these left-overs well; the outlook is more uncertain for Belgian importations than it was in 1914.

The most important part of the summer cultivation in the south, and one that cannot be neglected even slightly, is the syringing and spraying. Each bed should be well syringed every clear morning, and during hot days should also be sprayed over at least three times. Do this thoroughly from each side of the bed. If you spray only from one side, the foliage on the other side will be weak and the flowers deficient, and spider will be almost sure to develop. Aphids, spider and thrips are the most troublesome pests, but weekly sprayings with one of the tobacco extracts will keep the plants clean.

The Fight with Thrips.

Thrips are the most dangerous of all these pests and are sure to show up in the fall unless great precautions are taken. From the time the bud is taken until it shows color, keep spraying with nicotine twice a week; also have tobacco stems in the walks and hanging here and there on the wires. Keep a pungent tobacco odor in the house, to be safe from the ravages of this pest.

The end of July or the beginning of August is a good time to give another top-dressing of guano, a sprinkling of lime and a heavy mulch of fairly fresh cow manure. This will carry the plants until the bud is taken.

Many growers in the south complain of the old standby, Major Bonnaillon, doing poorly, having yellow foliage, etc. It is usually a plain case of indigestion caused by too much water. If the water is withheld, the plants will soon resume their natural dark green, glossy foliage. This variety takes less water than any other variety of which I know. L.

CYCLONE HITS ILLINOIS RANGE.

The storm that passed over central Illinois on the afternoon and evening of May 15 dropped hail on many a grower, but at Streator it assumed cyclonic proportions and not only destroyed glass but broke bars. The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of Grover G. Gilbert after the storm had passed. The range consisted of three houses. In the picture there are but two. The south house, narrower than the rest, bore the brunt of the storm and was practically blown away. The second house was badly broken up, while the north house was not damaged except for the breaking of considerable glass on the south slope; on the north side there was scarcely any breakage. The three houses were each 250 feet long. In all about 3,000 lights of glass were broken. Repairs are already well along.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

A column of comment in one of the British trade papers contains jottings of interest to those on this side of the water because of its reference to things originating here:

"Carnation Pink Sensation was shown at the R. H. S. by Wm. Wells & Co. Mr. Wells, adorned with one gigantic flower, was also on the spot, and while neuritis still renders his left arm almost useless, it certainly does not affect him otherwise. Many of the flowers were well over four inches, and of a beautiful color. Good Cheer, another of the rose-pinks, which gained an A. M., was certainly good, but it was Pink Sensation that held everyone.

"The fact that hardy flowers are rapidly gaining favor in the United States prompts the thought that we shall in the near future be looking to America for novelties other than carnations. A glance through any list of hardy plants discloses the fact that many are natives of various parts of America, so that one may reasonably expect Americans to do something in the novelty line. Heleniums Riverton Beauty and Riverton Jewel are items we are all familiar with. These hail from Dreer's, where they have in recent years pushed hardy flowers for all they are worth. Last year this concern sent out a phlox named W. C. Egan, a real tip-topper, and this season I am trying out another addition named Riverton Jewel, said to be an improved Asia. Thor, a deep salmon, is another.

"Hardy salvias are attracting the attention of the Americans. A new form named uliginosa is being recommended. It grows like azurea, but is more bushy and taller. S. Greggii, the red form, already is making headway over here, but so far I have not seen S. Pitcheri listed. I am trying out this variety, which bears gentian-blue flowers. It is curious that the Texas species, S. Greggii, should have been neglected. Fully forty years ago it was tested under glass, with poor results, and not until its merits as a border plant were discovered did it make headway.

"It has always been a matter of surprise to me that Stevia serrata is ignored in most seed lists. I have no recollection of seeing it mentioned in any English seed list, whereas in the United States it is not only listed, but is grown on a large scale for market work. In some ways the flowers resemble gypsophila, being small and borne in large umbels. They are sweetly scented, and pure white in color. The dictionaries that quote stevias refer to them as greenhouse herbaceous perennials, but S. serrata is grown in the United States as an annual (the trade propagates by cuttings taken in spring from old stools.—Ed.). Some twenty years ago I tried the plant, and was much charmed with it, but I recall that it flowered rather late in the year, due to the fact that it was not hustled along in heat at the start. It can, I believe, be flowered under glass in the winter, and I would urge some to make experiments with it. Considering it was found in Mexico, as far back as 1799, it is surprising that it has been overlooked."

FREIGHT RATES ON MOSS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has rendered a decision in the complaint of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, vs. the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, involving the freight rates on moss. The complaint asked reparation for alleged unreasonable charges on moss from points in Wisconsin to Chicago. The commission holds that reasonable charges should not have exceeded those which would have accrued had the fourth-class rates, based on a minimum carload weight of 15,000 pounds in cars thirty-six feet long, subject to rule 6 (b) of the western classification now in effect, been applied. As the total charges collected on the shipments of the complainant did not exceed those which would have accrued on the basis found reasonable, the commission dismisses the complaint.

Add a 3-gallon bucket of bone meal or commercial guano to every 500 feet of bench surface and work it in with a rake before planting. I prefer the guano, with a guaranteed analysis of eight per cent of ammonia, five per cent of potash and five per cent of phosphoric acid, rather than the bone meal, as the guano is a more complete fertilizer and I have had better results with it.

To get three good flowers from each plant, the rows should be twelve inches apart and the plants ten inches apart in the row. Some of the smaller-leaved varieties can be set more closely. It is always well to keep the varieties of equal growth together, planting the dwarfier ones at the south end of the house, the medium tall ones in the middle and the tallest ones at the north end. Each variety then gets an equal share of light.

Syringing and Other Attentions.

In the south the plants are likely to require water twice on every bright day. Keep the weeds down and work over the surface of the beds every week for the first month. Then a mulch of any old, strawy manure will keep the beds cool and do away with cultivating the surface for some time.

Start to tie up the plants before they

Canterbury Bells and Foxgloves.

If the seeds of Canterbury bells and foxgloves are not yet sown, get the seeds into a coldframe without delay. You can postpone the sowing for some time and still get flowers, but if you want strong plants do not delay seed sowing much beyond June 1. The seedlings can go into nursery rows later, selecting a place where they will have dry feet in winter and yet not be too exposed. Outdoor plants wintered with a mulch of leaves or straw are vastly better than lifted ones stored in frames.

Hard-wooded Plants.

Plant out any left-over azaleas, camellias, ericas and other hard-wooded stock. Pick away some of the soil, so as to reduce the balls, and be sure to plant firmly. If the soil where they are to be planted can have some leaf-mold spaded in, the plants will appreciate it. All these hard-wooded plants do well out in the full sun, but let it be within reach of the hose, so that they can have liberal sprayings overhead and in extremely hot weather an occasional soaking at the root. Care for these left-overs well; the outlook is more uncertain for Belgian importations than it was in 1914.

get bent over and keep them tied up straight during their whole period of growth.

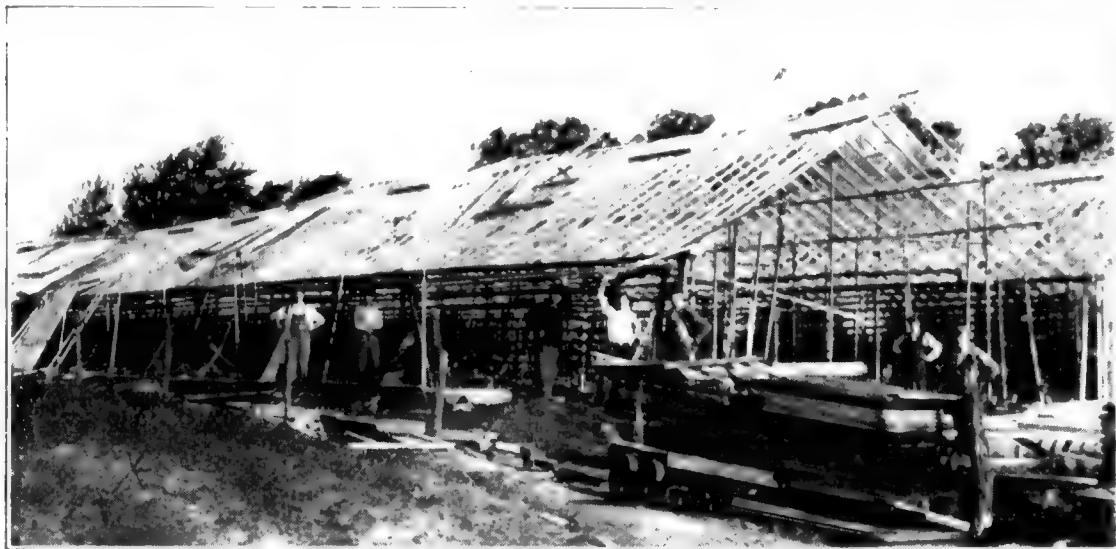

The most important part of the summer cultivation in the south, and one that cannot be neglected even slightly, is the syringing and spraying. Each bed should be well syringed every clear morning, and during hot days should also be sprayed over at least three times. Do this thoroughly from each side of the bed. If you spray only from one side, the foliage on the other side will be weak and the flowers deficient, and spider will be almost sure to develop. Aphids, spider and thrips are the most troublesome pests, but weekly sprayings with one of the tobacco extracts will keep the plants clean.

The Fight with Thrips.

Thrips are the most dangerous of all these pests and are sure to show up in the fall unless great precautions are taken. From the time the bud is taken until it shows color, keep spraying with nicotine twice a week; also have tobacco stems in the walks and hanging here and there on the wires. Keep a pungent tobacco odor in the house, to be safe from the ravages of this pest.

The end of July or the beginning of August is a good time to give another top-dressing of guano, a sprinkling of lime and a heavy mulch of fairly fresh cow manure. This will carry the plants until the bud is taken.

Many growers in the south complain of the old standby, Major Bonnaillon, doing poorly, having yellow foliage, etc. It is usually a plain case of indigestion caused by too much water. If the water is withheld, the plants will soon resume their natural dark green, glossy foliage. This variety takes less water than any other variety of which I know. L.

CYCLONE HITS ILLINOIS RANGE.

The storm that passed over central Illinois on the afternoon and evening of May 15 dropped hail on many a grower, but at Streator it assumed cyclonic proportions and not only destroyed glass but broke bars. The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of Grover G. Gilbert after the storm had passed. The range consisted of three houses. In the picture there are but two. The south house, narrower than the rest, bore the brunt of the storm and was practically blown away. The second house was badly broken up, while the north house was not damaged except for the breaking of considerable glass on the south slope; on the north side there was scarcely any breakage. The three houses were each 250 feet long. In all about 3,000 lights of glass were broken. Repairs are already well along.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

A column of comment in one of the British trade papers contains jottings of interest to those on this side of the water because of its reference to things originating here:

"Carnation Pink Sensation was shown at the R. H. S. by Wm. Wells & Co. Mr. Wells, adorned with one gigantic flower, was also on the spot, and while neuritis still renders his left arm almost useless, it certainly does not affect him otherwise. Many of the flowers were well over four inches, and of a beautiful color. Good Cheer, another of the rose-pinks, which gained an A. M., was certainly good, but it was Pink Sensation that held everyone.

"The fact that hardy flowers are rapidly gaining favor in the United States prompts the thought that we shall in the near future be looking to America for novelties other than carnations. A glance through any list of hardy plants discloses the fact that many are natives of various parts of America, so that one may reasonably expect Americans to do something in the novelty line. Heleniums Riverton Beauty and Riverton Jewel are items we are all familiar with. These hail from Dreer's, where they have in recent years pushed hardy flowers for all they are worth. Last year this concern sent out a phlox named W. C. Egan, a real tip-topper, and this season I am trying out another addition named Riverton Jewel, said to be an improved Asia. Thor, a deep salmon, is another.

"Hardy salvias are attracting the attention of the Americans. A new form named uliginosa is being recommended. It grows like azurea, but is more bushy and taller. S. Greggii, the red form, already is making headway over here, but so far I have not seen S. Pitcheri listed. I am trying out this variety, which bears gentian-blue flowers. It is curious that the Texas species, S. Greggii, should have been neglected. Fully forty years ago it was tested under glass, with poor results, and not until its merits as a border plant were discovered did it make headway.

"It has always been a matter of surprise to me that Stevia serrata is ignored in most seed lists. I have no recollection of seeing it mentioned in any English seed list, whereas in the United States it is not only listed, but is grown on a large scale for market work. In some ways the flowers resemble gypsophila, being small and borne in large umbels. They are sweetly scented, and pure white in color. The dictionaries that quote stevias refer to them as greenhouse herbaceous perennials, but S. serrata is grown in the United States as an annual (the trade propagates by cuttings taken in spring from old stools.—Ed.). Some twenty years ago I tried the plant, and was much charmed with it, but I recall that it flowered rather late in the year, due to the fact that it was not hustled along in heat at the start. It can, I believe, be flowered under glass in the winter, and I would urge some to make experiments with it. Considering it was found in Mexico, as far back as 1799, it is surprising that it has been overlooked."

FREIGHT RATES ON MOSS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has rendered a decision in the complaint of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, vs. the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, involving the freight rates on moss. The complaint asked reparation for alleged unreasonable charges on moss from points in Wisconsin to Chicago. The commission holds that reasonable charges should not have exceeded those which would have accrued had the fourth-class rates, based on a minimum carload weight of 15,000 pounds in cars thirty-six feet long, subject to rule 6 (b) of the western classification now in effect, been applied. As the total charges collected on the shipments of the complainant did not exceed those which would have accrued on the basis found reasonable, the commission dismisses the complaint.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the wholesale market last week was poor as far as demand was concerned, but the supply was great. There was no limit to the quantity of anything seasonable. Retailers bought sparingly all the week. Few large lots were sold and the poorer grades of flowers accumulated from day to day until fit for only the garbage can. Roses were of excellent quality, both home-grown and shipped, as the few cool days had improved them. Killarneys and Wards formed the bulk of the supply. Some splendid Beauties and Richmonds are coming in.

Carnations are first-class, but are so plentiful that the prices are low. Enchantress flowers are not as large now as are the other varieties of the Enchantress family. Sweet peas are holding their own and great quantities are still coming in daily, but the bulk of them are short-stemmed. Gladioli were among the glutted stock last week, with prices down to $4 per hundred. Some splendid America, Francis King and Chicago White were noted. The supply of peonies, too, exceeds the demand. Valley and lilies are scarce. Cape jasmine buds will be in this week. This market has had a large quantity of outdoor stock, which sells poorly. Good smilax and asparagus can be had daily.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting May 17, at the Washington hotel, with a good attendance. The credit system was taken up and fully discussed. It was decided to push this matter to completion. It was also decided to hold meetings during the summer, in order to get this work completed. These meetings are to be held in the open, at different summer gardens. President Young was in the chair and the other officers were present. Secretary Fred Weber was made treasurer also. The next meeting will be held June 21.

The county florists should remember the big meeting of the County Growers' Association, to be held June 2 at the home of Hugo Gross, in Kirkwood. All county florists and members of the Florists' Club are invited to attend the meeting and the members of the association promise to make things pleasant for all that come. Secretary Deutschmann says there will be something doing every minute.

From reports, several of the seedsmen of this city will attend the thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at San Francisco, in June.

The firm name of R. J. Windler, in business at 2300 South Grand avenue, has been changed to Windler's Flowers. E. A. Guntly has purchased the interest of R. J. Windler. J. J. Windler still retains his interest.

Oscar Ruff, who is with C. Bergstermann, was married May 26 to Miss Hulda Niebling, daughter of Mrs. Bergstermann. The wedding took place at the home of the bride, 3117 South Grand avenue. Invitations were extended only to the family and relatives of both parties.

Julius Koenig, city forester, says he is having a great deal of trouble with sycamore trees, which are dropping their leaves. He has a big force of men out daily spraying the trees and now has the trouble pretty well under control.

Planting out at all the big cemeteries in the north end is about completed. Fred Meinhardt, John Nyflot and the Koenig Floral Co. have had a big run of this kind of trade, as their places are directly opposite the cemeteries.

Henry G. Berning spent a day recently at Lincoln, Ill., looking over the new greenhouse range of Gullett & Sons, which is now almost completed. Consignments of stock from this place are received daily by Mr. Berning.

Miss Ella Weber, who is with her uncle, Fred C. Weber, has taken a vacation for a few weeks. It is rumored that there will soon be an announcement of her engagement to Fred Strohmeier, head of the Strohmeier Floral Co.

Two birthdays were celebrated in the wholesale district last week. They were those of W. C. Smith, who was 34 years old, and Frank Windler, who was 25. Dan Cupid has long laid claims to "Bill" Smith, but Frank Windler so far has refused to be lassoed.

The five wholesale houses will, in June, start closing at 5 p. m. daily and at 1 p. m. on Saturdays. The employees have eagerly looked forward to this and the joys and pleasures the early closing hours bring.

Prairie Pick-ups

Kirkville, Mo.—A. B. Chance, who erected a greenhouse here a year ago last winter, has good crops of lettuce and other vegetables just now. He has also a good stock of chrysanthemum plants for market.

Van Horn, Ia.—George Hammer says the season opened at least three weeks earlier than usual, and that bedding stock was moving well before April ended. He counts on a record business this year.

Houston, Tex.—The Houston Florists' Club held its first annual picnic Monday afternoon, May 10, as the guests of H. H. Kuhlmann at Spring. The members left Houston at noon in automobiles, and spent the afternoon at the Kuhlmann greenhouses, where luncheon was served.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—Don E. Curtis, the son of E. D. Curtis, of the Curtis Floral Co., at Webster City, Ia., who has been in business here for more than a year, has been awarded an important job, calling for the platting of the gardens, walks, drives and similar improvements on the Wilbur Allen estate, which comprises several thousand acres.

Champaign, Ill.—The greenhouses of the Illinois Central Railroad Co. are putting out about 20,000 shrubs and plants a week for use along the company's lines. W. E. Stiebener has gone south to begin work in Mississippi and Louisiana. Plans are being projected for planting the company's right of way along the lake front at Chicago, which, says C. F. Swayger, chief gardener, will be the biggest thing in the way of gardening ever attempted by the company.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club a discussion will be started on "The Good and Bad Sides of the Telegraph Delivery." This will be most interesting to retailers. All those advertising in that line will be asked to be present and give their views and experiences.

Some of the south end florists report an exceedingly busy week with funeral work. Among these are Mrs. Pelletier, W. H. Kruse, Fred W. Bruenig and the Diemer Floral Co. Most of these made up designs which were quite out of the ordinary.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, spent a few days here last week calling on the trade and also booming the S. A. F. convention and San Francisco fair.

The Shackelford Nursery, of St. Louis county, will this week commence cutting thousands of Coreopsis lanceolata grandiflora. This rich, golden-yellow flower has taken a good hold on local florists, who say it is a big seller at all times.

The leading hotels in the city have put up well filled window boxes, which give the buildings a fine appearance. Those of the Jefferson, Planters' and Marquette are especially attractive and are filled with the right kind of plants to stand the summer heat. J. J. B.

Waco, Tex.—Wolfe the Florist's entry in the parade marking the opening of the state B. P. O. E. convention, May 11, was a pony cart filled with children in purple and white and with purple and white flowers.

Lincoln, Ill.—Work on the new houses of Gullett & Sons is progressing rapidly. The two smaller houses are nearing completion. Of the big houses, No. 4 is finished, No. 5 is being glazed and for No. 6 the posts are set.

Newcastle, Ind.—Mrs. Joseph Kneidle decorated the tabernacle which was built for a great union religious revival meeting and her advertising cards appeared among the plants. It was good advertising, for thousands of people were in the building every day.

Newcastle, Ind.—Mrs. Charles A. Felts calls her place on South Eleventh street the Jordan Peony Gardens. She is in the florists' business for the duration of the peony season, selling what she can cut and a quantity more, which she buys, in addition to other cut flowers that are called for at this time of year. Peony roots are sold at retail for autumn delivery.

Rochester, Minn.—The Ross Bragg Floral Co. is to be known in the future as the Rochester Floral Co., with the following officers: President, Ross Bragg; vice-president, M. J. Kinney; secretary-treasurer, Gilbert C. Utz. The company will sell its property on the east side, and erect a large range of greenhouses in the western part of the city. Two retail stores will be maintained, one downtown and one in the west end. An automobile will be added to the delivery equipment soon.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was cold, rainy and dull. Business in the cut flower market was fairly good, prices were firmer, and retail trade was more encouraging than for a long time. Saturday's clean-up was spoiled by the rain, which came down in torrents all the afternoon and evening.

Shipments have been comparatively light, especially of high quality roses. Beauties are small, and only a few perfect flowers of this variety are seen; these bring as high as $20 per hundred. The supply of novelties is decreasing. Hadley, Russell and Ophelia are most popular.

White carnations sold at $3 to $4 per hundred. Some days nothing worth while in carnations could be found anywhere under $2 per hundred. Larger shipments and lower prices are predicted for this week. Another large order of 50,000 for Brooklyn, Sunday delivery, is reported.

Prices of about everything are expected to be maintained at present levels until after Memorial day.

Orchids are of splendid quality, especially Cattleya gigas. Prices continue low, the selects selling at $35 per hundred. Valley is down and will stay there until the outdoor stock is exhausted. Lilies have begun a gradual improvement, which will doubtless continue until the end of May. Memorial day orders are heavy. There will be a sufficiency of callas also.

There is still a great abundance of tulips, irises and gladioli. Peonies are here, and the daily increase is marked. There is an overflow of sweet peas and pansies and a liberal quantity of spring flowers of every variety. Gardenias are arriving from Texas.

Next week will come the crimson ramblers. Already spireas and wistarias adorn the retail windows.

Various Notes.

Hugo Mock, president of the National Floral Corporation, has returned from a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The committee of the New York Florists' Club appointed by the president to confer with a similar committee to be appointed by the Horticultural Society of New York, with reference to holding a flower show in New York in the spring of 1916, consists of A. L. Miller, F. L. Atkins, Charles H. Totty, F. H. Traendly, John Young, Julius Roehrs, G. E. M. Stumpp, Wm. H. Duckham, Wallace R. Pierson and Leonard Barron.

It will be rose night at the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, June 13. This will be the final meeting of the club until September.

The stork brought Max Zarnow, of the Margarite Floral Co., Brooklyn, a boy last week.

The wife of James C. Conlon, the retailer at 46 Smith street, Brooklyn, died at the family residence, 69 Dean street, Thursday, May 20. She is survived by three sons and three daughters. Mrs. Conlon was a member of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

The display of window and porch boxes in the two cities this spring transcends any former decorations in this line ever seen here. Florists are still extremely busy in this department.

At a meeting of the council of the Horticultural Society of New York last week it was voted to invite the newly organized American Dahlia Society to hold its first autumn exhibition under its auspices. President Vincent states that the invitation undoubtedly will be accepted and that it is his belief that it insures the largest and most successful special dahlia show ever held anywhere in the world.

Secretary Nash, of the Horticultural Society of New York, announces that an exhibition of this society, in co-operation with the American Rose Society, will be held Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park. The features will be roses and peonies. Schedules may be obtained by application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York city. The American Rose Society offers the following medals as sweepstake prizes: Silver medal, for the best collection of outdoor-grown roses; bronze medal, for the best vase of outdoor-grown hybrid teas; bronze medal, for the best vase of outdoor-grown hybrid perpetuals.

Reisterstown, Md.—In a recent thunderstorm lightning struck the brick stack at the greenhouses of Charles B. Wright and demolished about four feet of the top. Although such occurrences frequently have been reported elsewhere, it is the first time a brick chimney has been struck here.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

During the early part of last week business was unusually good, but toward the end it slackened considerably. The inauguration of all the city officials, from the mayor down, created a good demand for first-grade stock and used a large quantity at fair prices for this season of the year. Beauties and first-grade roses were most called for, but the demand took up nearly everything the wholesale houses had in stock, except, possibly, lilies, which were slow movers. Peonies are now arriving in quantities and are bringing fair prices. Roses are not overplentiful, but sufficient to fill orders. While there are some good carnations, the majority are growing smaller and their keeping qualities are deteriorating. Some gladioli are being shown and are bought on sight. To sum up the week's business, it may be said that trade was good and prices fair, with enough stock for all orders but no surplus.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 24, with a good turnout of members. President Hamilton occupied the chair. The Mothers' day committee presented its complete report and showed a balance left from the recent publicity campaign. It was decided by those present to set this balance aside to be the starting of a permanent fund for the purpose of bringing this day more prominently before the public. It was announced that the club bowling team would roll on the Regent alleys in the city tournament May 26 and the result of this contest will be reported in the next issue of The Review. A number of individuals have entered, besides the team.

The question of retail stores being required to take out traders' licenses was discussed and, while some have secured the license, others have not as yet taken it out. As near as can be ascertained, those who conduct stores and have greenhouses and produce some of the stock sold have been able to escape this additional expense.

The question box brought up a number of interesting matters which required some time to thresh out and the meeting adjourned at a late hour.

Various Notes.

The summer meeting of the Maryland Horticultural Society will be held at the Maryland Agricultural College, College Park, May 29. An interesting program has been arranged and there will be something doing throughout the day.

Mrs. H. J. Quick, who has been ill for some time, is reported as having only slightly improved.

The demand created by orders for flowers for presentation to the mayor and other city officials, on their induction into office last week, caused one well-known retailer to say he wished a new mayor and city councilmen might be elected every week during the summer.

Chas. E. Smith & Co. will shortly move from their present location, at 131 North Liberty street, to 207 North Liberty street, a few doors above Lexington street. W. F. E.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

the remarkably short space of four hours by the firm of J. Bolgiano & Son May 24. Some of the purchasers, having in mind the popularity of former Bolgiano sales of rose bushes, arrived before the doors of the establishment were opened, in order to be on hand early. The store usually opens at 7 a. m., but the firm was constrained to open the doors long before that hour, in order that the traffic on Pratt and Light streets might not be congested. At 9 o'clock there were at least 500 persons lined up before the doors. Another rose sale will be held the day before Memorial day.

Wheatridge, Colo.—W. W. Wilmore, Jr., says the heavy frost last week practically ruined all stock exposed. Snow fell in Denver and vicinity for three days, from May 18 to 21.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Dreer's exhibit at the Garden Pier, Atlantic City, N. J., is one of the permanent features of this popular resort. The central, circular mound of hardy rhododendrons will be a fine sight in a few days. A border of golden euonymus is striking. The various beds planted to roses, lupines, etc., are doing well. The yellow viola, so effective last year, is again in use for the ribbon border and is a mass of bloom. Nymphæas will fill the front space and undoubtedly be as attractive as last season. The promenade is being widened several feet and will make a splendid approach to this beauty spot.

The Edwards Floral Hall Co., Atlantic City, has some big jobs in sight. The mammoth new hotel, the Traymore, in course of construction, will combine the latest in architecture and decorative art—a grand opportunity for the florist.

Dreer's windows at Philadelphia are worthy of more than passing notice. They are a study. One window is given over to a complete collection of native birds and their houses. The whole is framed or bordered with pictures of the feathered songsters, painted true to life. It can be easily understood that the sale of bird houses has been large. Another window is devoted to Japanese maples in pots—a rich and effective display. The others are dressed with flower and vegetable seeds, most artistically arranged.

Michell's seeds were scattered along Market street, Philadelphia, last year, but everything is concentrated in the main store this season. Business, in both seeds and plants, is most satisfactory. The Andalusia plant is taxed to its capacity, with every possibility of being extended to keep pace with the demand.

Burpee's season is on the wane, but it has been a most satisfactory one. Advertising Manager W. F. Therkindson is lending his best efforts to the 1916 show, which promises to be a hummer. A tour among the palm growers shows a grand lot of stock in all shapes and sizes. A new species of thrips has been discovered. It is described locally as a "house of correction" variety, owing to its stripes. It was imported along with other good things.

R. M. Eisenhart, Torresdale, Pa., made his usual hit on single violets, which have made him so well known. Sweet peas have proved a profitable addition.

Isaac Larkin, Kennett Square, Pa., was for many years a prosperous builder and contractor, and says he has done a lot of figuring this winter to keep out of the hole.

William Wunder, Pittville, Pa., says it has been a season of surprises, but the craft is so closely allied to nature that optimism becomes positive with the advent of spring.

J. Beavis & Son, Pittville, have a splendid showing of Killarneys.

W. M.

Tionesta, Pa.—As there is to be an Old Home week and a Chautauqua here this year, townspeople are planning to beautify their residences and grounds by setting out more plants. For this reason the C. A. Anderson Greenhouse Co. looks forward to a prosperous season, despite the depressing war clouds.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business was quiet last week and, if it had not been for funeral work, would have been exceedingly dull. Even the Saturday special sales have been small since Mothers' day, which was a record day for business. The Killarneys, Taft, Milady, Sunburst, Ward, Shawyer and Mock are all good. Cecile Brunner roses are used a great deal for corsages; so are valley, orchids, gardenias and sweet peas since the violet season has closed. Pink peonies have arrived in small quantities. P. festiva maxima is also coming in and the quality is good. Purple and white lilacs are available, but there is little demand for them. Good carnations are in oversupply. Harrisii lilies are somewhat scarce. Yellow marguerites, forget-me-nots, pansies, cornflowers and outdoor valley are plentiful and sell well. Bedding plants of all kinds are finding a ready sale. Outdoor work is being pushed. Cemetery urns and baskets are being filled now, so as to have this work done before Memorial day. The weather has been quite cool for May and has, in some cases, retarded outdoor work.

Various Notes.

Miss Susan Streit has filled the vacancy at the Elmwood store of S. A. Anderson, made by the resignation of Miss Edith Christy, who is to be married in June.

L. H. Neubeck has begun work on cemetery urns. He will be rushed from now until Memorial day.

Peter Hoffman, in the Washington market, handles a few rare things in the plant line. He has some fine clivias the bulbs of which came from England, and were quite expensive.

Nearly all the downtown florists had large and costly floral designs for the funeral of S. H. Knox, which took place May 18. S. A. Anderson had a large cascade wreath of pink roses and valley, which stood six feet high. An English wreath of cycas, Easter lilies and orchids, mounted on an easel, was also effective. An immense standing wreath of orchids, yellow snapdragons and valley, on a groundwork of bronze galax, was handsome. The most gorgeous design of all was an immense mound of orchids, cattleyas, phalaenopsis, oncidiums and various other spray orchids. These were arranged on an easel to give a natural drooping effect and were combined with pale green asparagus fern tips. Besides the foregoing, there were numerous wreaths, mounds and clusters.

A bowling match has been arranged by M. A. Vinson, of Cleveland, for the Buffalo and Rochester bowling teams, to be held during the Cleveland flower show, November 10 to 14. The Cleveland Florists' Club has offered a silver loving cup as a prize to the winning team. Let us line up, boys, and keep in practice for the great event, for Rochester has some great bowlers. All should plan to attend, for we want to bring the cup back to Buffalo.

Lightning struck the office building of the South park conservatory, May 21, tore away a considerable part of the roof and did damage amounting to about $500. A big hole was ripped in the roof and the gutters were demolished.

Miss Mabel Hoke has been confined to her home with diphtheria, for the last two weeks.

OBITUARY

William H. Grenell.

William Horatio Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., and Saginaw, Mich., widely known in the trade as one of the pioneer seed growers of the United States, died at noon May 19, at his home at Pierrepont Manor.

Mr. Grenell suffered with cancer, but the immediate cause of death was heart failure. While it was known he was seriously ill and a physician and nurse were in constant attendance, it was not known that the end was so near, and he passed away unexpectedly. His health began to fail last autumn and, after he went home in December to be with his family during the holiday season, he declined rapidly. In January he went to Clifton Springs, where he remained for about two months, going from there to Baltimore, where he was treated with radium. By this time he was so weak the trip from Baltimore to his home at Pierrepont Manor had to be made by private car.

Mr. Grenell was born at Pierrepont Manor, January 26, 1846. He was a student at Union Academy, Cazenova Seminary and Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie. He began his career as a seedsman in 1873. About twenty years ago Mr. Grenell moved the business to Saginaw, Mich., and it will be continued under the present management, as it was the desire of Mr. Grenell that his business should be carried on by his grandson, who is now a lad at school.

Besides his seed business, Mr. Grenell owned a large farm, comprising about 1,000 acres, near his home, and was a breeder of Holstein cattle. He had various business interests and was a director of the Citizens National Bank at Adams, N. Y.

For thirteen years he served as captain of Company A, Thirty-fifth Regiment, New York State Guards. He was a member of the Masonic order, being affiliated with Rising Sun Lodge, Adams Chapter, with Watertown Commandery, K. T., and with Media Temple, Mystic Shrine, also of Watertown. As a young man he devoted much attention to music, being for many years leader of the village band. Throughout his life music gave him great pleasure. He was a Democrat in politics.

March 19, 1867, Mr. Grenell was united in marriage with Adelaide E. Allen, who survives him. He is also survived by his daughter, Mrs. Matthew J. Huggins, his grandson, William Grenell Huggins, and his brother, Benjamin P. Grenell, all of Pierrepont Manor.

The funeral was held May 22 and was under the auspices of Watertown Commandery No. 11, K. T. About eighty knights in full uniform attended, with their band. It is said to have been the largest funeral ever held in that vicinity. The floral offerings were exquisite and extremely numerous, coming from all parts of the country. Interment was in the village churchyard, where several generations of his family have been laid to rest. I. M. S.

Robert Leonard.

Robert Leonard, youngest son of S. F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, died at the home of his brother, Edward Leonard, in Antigo, Wis., May 17, at the age of 30 years. For more than three years he had been suffering with diabetes and had sought relief in various climates, but without beneficial results. At one time he was in charge of the growing station of the Leonard Seed Co., at Columbus, Wis., but his health proved too delicate for this position, and he was compelled to forego all work. S. F. Leonard arrived at the bedside a few hours before death. The body was taken to the Leonard home in Oak Park, Ill., where the funeral was held May 20. The floral offerings quite filled a room. Interment was in Rosehill cemetery, Chicago.

Cut Bank, Mont.—Mrs. D. S. Clark has the sympathy of the trade in the death of her husband, May 6. Mrs. Clark plans to continue the business.

Catskill, N. Y.—Henry Lang, who had been employed by florists here for two years, May 23 shot two little girls and then turned the revolver on himself.

Rockford, Ill.—M. Tremulis, proprietor of the Rockford Floral Co., has purchased a residence on Bolvin avenue from Carl Sundstrand for a consideration of $5,500.

Beatrice, Neb.—Walter A. Dole, manager of the greenhouses of the Dole Floral Co., was married May 4 to Mrs. Etta Zenthoser, of Williamsport, Pa., at Lincoln. Upon their return home the same evening in an Overland touring car, the gift of the groom to the bride, the couple were given a reception by a number of their friends at their home, at 1101 North Fifth street.

Racine, Wis.—Wynn Jackson, proprietor of the Lake View Greenhouse, was driving his automobile Saturday evening, May 15, when it collided with that of Fire Chief James Cape. Two wheels were broken off the car and other damage was done, but fortunately nobody was injured. As it was raining at the time, Mr. Jackson had all the curtains down and did not see the chief's car, which was speeding on its way to a fire, until too late to avoid it.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.
Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE florist whose first care is to see that every customer has reason to be satisfied is on the high road to success; the one whose first thought is not of the customer's view is trifling with his business chances.

CONDITIONS in Belgium seem to indicate a shortage in bay trees for several years. Many a nursery has been stripped of stock by the soldiers, who have placed the bay trees in pairs at the entrances to their dugouts.

THE jobbers in florists' supplies are not making their usual European trips this year, the situation over there being regarded as hopeless. Instead, they are arranging to meet the demand next season with merchandise from other sources.

THE first free state fair in the United States will be held in Topeka next September, by the Kansas State Fair Association. A special tax levy has been voted with which to pay the fair premiums and this enables the fair association to announce that the general admission gate will be thrown open for the entire week.

A QUITE general confidence has developed that Killarney Brilliant will prove a better sort than many thought it to be three or four months ago. The policy of watchful waiting has resulted in the belief that stronger plants and a more sympathetic appreciation of the variety's special needs will demonstrate that Killarney Brilliant is all its introducers claimed for it.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

TWO NAMES FOR SAME THING.

When those who have used classified ads in The Review write of the results they use various expressions, but they all mean the same thing—satisfaction. Like this:

Those ads sure bring the business.—F. E. Selkregg, North East, Pa., May 8, 1915.
The little ads in The Review surely bring us the simoleons.—Albert Troth, Cantril, Ia., May 7, 1915.

IMMORTELLES LOWER IN PRICE.

One of the effects of the European war will be, it is said, to put the price of immortelles back where it used to be, or at least to make them cheaper than last year. The supply comes from southern France and the demand in Europe is much less than under normal conditions, so that America will get the bulk of the supply without so much competition as usual. Word comes from Ollioules, via Marseilles, that the crop is looking good, with dealers willing to book orders for shipment in due course at prices below those of last season.

PROTEST THE PLANT EMBARGO.

The State Department at Washington has received a request from the Merchants' Association of New York that it try to obtain the consent of Great Britain to the exportation of certain flowering plants which are produced only in Belgium. A letter to Secretary Bryan from S. C. Mead, secretary of the association, declares that the plants can not be obtained from any country other than Belgium, that these shipments constitute one of the few remaining trade links between this country and Belgium, that this is the only open market for the sale of these goods, and that if fall shipments of azaleas do not leave Belgium, florists here will face serious losses.

THE PROOF OF THE PUDDING.

The Mothers' day reports again demonstrate the accuracy of the old saying that "the Lord helps those who help themselves." There are just enough people who see nothing to enthuse over to afford the necessary contrast to make the reason for success stand out fairly clear and sharp.

There still are a good many florists whose only effort to get business is to keep the store open. And, naturally, these trust-to-luck florists dwell in communities. They are the ones who tell you Mothers' day was "nothing much"—a disappointment. Mothers' day was made by florists by advertising. Of course where only one florist advertises all the others get a part of the benefit, but usually the advertiser forges to the front so fast a lot of others begin to use the same means of salesmanship—in print. Then they all go forward fast.

It was so at Mothers' day. In the cities where the most advertising was done the demand increased fastest; in the cities where the least advertising was done, there the demand showed little development—the Lord neglected to provide for those who neglected to provide for themselves.

When you see a good thing talked of and advertised in The Review, pass on the talk and the advertising to the public or it will do you little good.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, May 26, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Thunder showers will be followed by generally fair weather. Somewhat warmer, except in the Lake Superior region, but moderate temperatures will be the rule.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plain States—Generally fair weather will prevail, with seasonable temperatures.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Generally fair weather is indicated, except possibly local thunder showers; seasonable temperatures.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—Fair weather will prevail, except that occasional day thunder storms are probable in the Florida peninsula. Temperatures will be normal or slightly above.

For the West Gulf States—Fair weather will prevail; temperatures will be normal or slightly above.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society will meet at the store of Gude Bros. Co., 1216 F street, Washington, D. C., at 1 p. m., Wednesday, June 2, to go to the trial rose garden at Arlington. All members of the society, and others who are interested, are cordially invited to join the party.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Chicago market conditions continue to improve, not erratically and by jumps, but slowly and conservatively. Prices are not high, but they are steady, which is much more desirable. Supply, too, though barely enough to meet the demands in most lines, has been quite even. Demand, which is altogether alive and alert, has been active enough to keep the market cleared of superior stock and discriminating enough to decline the palpably inferior stock that still finds its way to the salesrooms.

Roses find a good demand, which is fully equaled by the supply. Mrs. Charles Russell leads all other varieties and seems to have forged far ahead of Beauties in the public favor. That this is so is evidenced by the fact that the Russell invariably clears early, while Beauties quite frequently remain in the iceboxes as holdovers. And this in spite of the fact that the receipts of Russell, taking the market as a whole, are much larger than those of Beauties. The demand for Ophelia, Sunburst, Milady and White Killarney, while not approaching that for Russell, is quite satisfactory.

Carnations are again in the limelight as a commodity most desirable and rather scarce. A repetition of Mothers' day conditions is undoubtedly scheduled for Memorial day. It seems the usual thing and quite the order of the day to meet a procession of wholesalers' buyers making the rounds of the market trying to persuade their competitors to part with at least a few white carnations. But their efforts are generally unavailing, for white carnations of quality are few on the market and the outside demand for them is strong.

Peonies are in good demand and the supply is ample and there has been a quantity of inferior stock that has not realized a great deal of money. Easter lilies are finding a sluggish demand, although the supply is only fair. Callas are short, with a moderate demand. Snapdragons and gladioli are plentiful enough and are in fair demand. The same may be said of daisies and Spanish iris. Mignonette is practically done for. Valley is plentiful but is moving well. Sweet peas are in fine form and are selling rapidly.

Memorial Day Prospects.

Monday, May 24, following the appearance of the Memorial Day Number of The Review, the wholesale houses had the heaviest mail in many months. The number of orders was such as to encourage the belief that the week will end with one of the biggest rushes on record. There is, however, a marked disposition on the part of the buyers to turn away from high-priced stock.

It seems quite clear carnations will be short of the demand and short roses probably will not go around, but there will be enough roses for all those who can use long stems. Peonies are far less abundant than a year ago, the quantity in storage being only a small fraction of what was there a year ago today. There will, however, be enough peonies for all who wish to pay regular prices; the bargain hunters probably will have to postpone their special sales a week or so. Cape jasmine will not be in large supply. Most of the stock is of good quality, worth what is asked.

The shipping begins May 27, but the heaviest orders go out May 29 and 30. Growers are advised to get their stock on the market early.

Chicago Baskets.

It is of interest to note that all the baskets on the display tables of the A. L. Randall Co. now are of Chicago manufacture. When the war shut off imports from Germany it became necessary to find some other source of supply. The only course open seemed to ards of living here and abroad makes the domestic baskets cost more than the imported ones, but the trade is no longer dependent on ocean transportation for its supplies in this line.

The Randall Co., local distributors for A. C. Zvolanek's sweet pea seed, has received word that Mr. Zvolanek has been awarded a gold medal at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Various Notes.

The greenhouse in connection with Daniel Branch's branch store on Fifty-eighth street has had to give way to a moving picture theater, but no doubt Mr. Branch will be benefited by the improvements.

May 24 was house-warming day with Kyle & Foerster, the John Kruchten Co. and A. C. Spencer, each of whom had moved, over the week end, into new, enlarged and better quarters. Each now has greatly improved facilities, although Kyle & Foerster have not been able to get their fixtures finished, due to the strike in the building trades. They have a big storage box in the basement shipping room, operated by a Kroeschell ice machine, and an Orr & Lockett box is to be installed on the main floor as soon as the labor difficulties, with which they have nothing to do, are settled.

Next month, everything in the shape of a carnation bids a long farewell to the ranges of Hoerber Bros. They will then throw out 50,000 plants, and in the future will devote their attention exclusively to roses and seasonable stock.

He could sell out and retire, but he finds the business too much to his liking; besides, he has a son who has grown up in the greenhouses and will carry them on after the father is through. Mr. Thinnies recently was offered $25,000 for his property for building purposes. He de-

Mr. Thinnies has it in mind that some day an offer will tempt him to sell, relocate on cheaper land, put up a modern range and grow roses. He is thinking about it. A special call for Sunburst is noted by Wieter Bros., who account for it by the scarcity of other yellow flowers since bulbous stock went off the market. Sunburst now is of excellent, deep color and has practically displaced Ward on this market.

A. E. Hunt will add another house of Foley construction, 24x130 feet, to his range in Evanston. It will be devoted to the growing of sweet peas and novelties.

If this market is willing to pay for a rose-pink gladiolus, C. S. Clausen is willing to meet the demand. He has planted 15,000 bulbs of the variety Panama, probably the largest planting thus far made of this novelty for cut flower purposes. He also has planted a smaller lot of Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., a flaked yellow.

John Schoepfle, 933 Belmont avenue, is devoting his spare time to the pleasure to be derived from a new touring car.

Weiland & Risch are quite enthusiastic over their newly registered rose, Champ Weiland. After considering a number of descriptive names, Mr. Risch dropped them all at the last moment and chose that of his associate, Mr. Weiland.

It is of Dietsch construction and equipped with a Kroeschell threaded tube heating system.

According to Fred Lautenschlager, of the Kroeschell Bros. Co., there is no such thing as Blue Monday, and to prove it he showed orders brought in by the first mail May 24 for boilers to heat 115,600 square feet of glass.

Thomas Conlon, the new superintendent of the plant department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, has a fine lot of crotons, caladiums and pandanus coming on for the fall trade. He says the call for geraniums has been unusually heavy. Tony Gabel, who has charge of the carnations and mums, says Poehlmann Bros. Co. will add the following varieties of carnations: Mrs. C. Edward Akehurst, light pink; Alice, flesh pink; Matchless, white. A 500-foot house of Enchantress will be dropped.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling

Co., predicts that the latter part of this week will be a repetition of Mothers' day. He believes the light crops of carnations and the small supply of peonies, as compared with last year, will result in all flowers cleaning up at reasonable prices; the higher-priced grades will be last to sell.

Mrs. Shawyer rose has run its race at Peter Reinberg's. Superintendent Emil Reichling says the need for space for Mrs. Russell caused Shawyer to be dropped. Felix Reichling says Russell has been the rose in best request practically all through May.

When Ordering Peonies, Buy New Castle Grown Stock

Last season our Peonies were the best in the Cincinnati market. Our crop will be in full bloom for Decoration Day.

No better Peonies to be had at any price. To prove this statement, I offer to pay express charges both ways if stock is not as stated. Price, $4.00 to $6.00 per 100.

A letter from C. G. Anderson, who assumed the management of the Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis, a few days ago, states that there is quite enough business to keep all hands occupied.

The store of the W. W. Barnard Co. resembles a summer garden with its profusion of blooming plants, tree swallow boxes and martin boxes. The arrangement and display of the various garden accessories is highly attractive.

After trying every conceivable combination, Tim Waters has at last got the office of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. supply department arranged to his satisfaction.

The Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., the office of which has been enlarged from time to time, now occupies almost the entire floor. In addition, a complete experimental laboratory has been fitted up on the floor above and an agricultural chemist put in charge.

The Market.

Business is fearfully slack. The dreary, cold weather which we have had during the last week or two is more or less responsible for these conditions. There has been little sun, too, but stock continues to arrive in the usual large quantities. American Beauties are quite plentiful, but move slowly. Among the other roses, Hadley, Ophelia, Russell, Sunburst and Ward are the best sellers and have great keeping quality, but the prices are quite low. Carnations stand much the same, and their prices are well maintained. Lilacs sell fairly well and are plentiful. Easter lilies are about gone. Sweet peas are improving nicely and appear to be rather more plentiful. Much outdoor valley arrives each day and is sold cheaply. Orchids are of fine color and receive a fair demand. Tulips are on the wane, but sell well. Irises are coming in fast, but do not move well. Pink and blue lupines, white and yellow daisies, forget-me-nots, cornflowers, gypsophila and pansies sell well. The shortage of smilax is felt all around.

Various Notes.

The Aster Candy & Flower Store is doing a fairly good business. They have added an icebox, which is kept well filled with choice flowers.

Despite the drenching rain of Sunday, May 16, about a dozen Syracuse florists visited this city and made a tour of the parks. Several members of the Rochester Florists' Association entertained them during their stay.

At the recent meeting of the Florists' Association the plans for the flower show were shown and appeared to meet with favorable comment. They were drawn up by H. E. Bates. The flower show, which will be a part of the industrial exposition, promises to be more beautiful than in previous years. It will occupy building 5.

Most of the florists are booking fairly good orders for June weddings.

Keller Sons, has been visiting friends in New York city during the last week.

With the opening of the baseball season here Monday, May 17, the Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive window display, a baseball diamond set in colors and worked in paper capes, with two teams of players on the grounds.

A beautiful casket cover composed of pink carnations, with a large spray of Ward roses and valley tied with Ward ribbon, was the work of H. E. Wilson for the Smith funeral last week. The edges of the cover were of white lilac, which made a pleasing contrast. Their window decoration this week is a landscape scene with artificial pools of water, in which ducks are floating.

Among the visitors last week were E. F. Kennon, of the Climax Mfg. Co.,

Castorland, N. Y., and Stephen D. Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

A. J. Brown reports business fairly good. He is moving a large quantity of carnations just now.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The feature of the week ending May 26 was the demand for flowers in the churches for May 23. This was chiefly for red and white carnations and roses, although there was a good market for all flowers. Peonies are coming in more freely, retarded and improved by the rain and the cool weather. The heavy crop has not come yet. The indications are that it will be in time for Memorial day, but this depends on the weather. Carnations are far less plentiful, good ones being eagerly sought. Sweet peas, like carnations, are fewer than they have been. The first outdoor peas have arrived and with them some fine late indoor blooms. Gladioli in four leading varieties of extra fine quality are quite plentiful. Baby gladioli also can be had in numbers greater than a week ago. There is no special change in the rose supply, beyond the fact that a few high-grade flowers can be had to balance somewhat the heavy supply of short-stemmed flowers.

The market is hardly so well supplied as might be desired with greenhouse-grown stock. This leaves a good field for the peonies, which promise to be extremely fine for the next fortnight.

The Flower Market.

Rittenhouse square presented an animated scene May 19, when the second annual flower market opened there. The day was unusually favorable, clear and cool weather bringing out a large attendance. Attractive programs had been sent out among the charitably inclined fashionable folk, announcing that every sort of plant and flower and garden tool would be sold for charity. To these were added the extra inducements of refreshments and mild amusements. Booths were erected that bloomed profusely with salable choice stock. Charming matrons and maidens dispensed the wares. The public taste appeared to favor dainty basket creations rather than cumbersome plants or useful garden tools. Good prices were paid and no change was given, as often at these fairs. The profession was well represented. Mrs. Drew-Baer presided over a booth that dispensed flowers from the London. Harry W. Jones came from the Bellevue; George Rausch from Twelfth street; Charles F. Edgar from Pennock Bros., who also sent a delivery car. Then there were the private contributions, notably Mrs. Wilson's handsome case full of orchids. The proceeds were a generous amount.

The Club Outing.

Monday afternoon and evening of the longest day in the year, June 21, has been selected for the annual field day of the Florists' Club, to be held at Schuetzen park. The committee, consisting of John C. Gracey, chairman; Frank Adelberger, George Burton, Harry S. Betz, John Kohn, Charles E. Meehan, Fred J. Michell, Jr., Arthur A. Niessen and David Rust, secretary and treasurer, has decided that the tickets will cost $1.50, the same as last year. There will be no children's tickets at half price. A baseball game, sports with handsome prizes, a dinner and music and dancing will be among the attractions. The committee earnestly hopes that every member of the club will come with his family, to make the gathering the jolliest the club ever has held.

A Coming Flower Show.

The Natural History Club will hold a flower show in the Twentieth Century Club house, Lansdowne, Pa., Saturday, June 5, from 2 to 10 p. m. The exhibition is intended for outdoor flowers only. All lovers of outdoor flowers, whether they be amateurs or florists, are cordially invited to come and bring their flowers. The Lansdowne Natural History Club has affiliated with the American Rose Society. In recognition of this fact the American Rose Society has offered three medals for competition at this meeting: A silver medal for the best twelve varieties of outdoor roses; a bronze medal for the best six hybrid tea roses, one or more varieties, and a bronze medal for the best six hybrid perpetual roses, one or more varieties. A good exhibition by real flower lovers is confidently predicted.

Class X, 12 to 18-in. stem.....	$1.15 per 100; $10.00 per 1000
Class A, 8 to 12-in. stem.....	.75 per 100; 6.40 per 1000
Class B, 4 to 8-in. stem.....	4.00 per 1000

The express rate on Cape Jessamine buds is very low, same as fruit rates. This coupled with the low prices we are making will put them to you at a song, compared with prices of other flowers. The Cape Jessamine is the prettiest of all flowers for all occasions, waxy white, very fragrant, 4-in. in diameter, foliage dark, glossy green. Parties unfamiliar with the Jessamine should try a sample at these prices, they will make you money. Those acquainted know what it means.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Blooming and foliage plants for garden and cemetery are moving well and local florists are expecting still greater sales between now and Memorial day. Geraniums are being sold in large quantities. There has been a large sale of hardy roses. Those handling nursery stock have disposed of a considerable number of ornamental shrubs and trees. Tuberose and gladiolus bulbs and dahlia roots have had a ready sale. Sweet william plants are called for and many carnation plants are being sold. Myrtle sells well, retailing generally at about three plants for 25 cents. Pansies are cheap, many selling at 10 and 15 cents a basket of eight plants.

White peonies have just come into the market. Red peonies are more plentiful than they have been since first coming into the market. Cut carnations are of fair quality and bring as a rule 50 and 75 cents per dozen, though a few of the choicest bring $1 per dozen. Roses are selling well, Ward and Brunner both proving popular varieties.

Various Notes.

The flower department in Hahne's department store, of which H. Stein is proprietor, is doing a good business.

J. H. Harvey, of 453 Broad street, reports business quite good. He has considerable funeral work.

Henry Leahy, 1169 East Jersey street and 1220 East Broad street, Elizabeth, has 50,000 geraniums of all varieties for cemetery and garden decoration. He also has 50,000 scarlet sage plants and is looking forward to a large Memorial day sale.

The Newark Flower Shop had considerable funeral work recently. The transient trade has been a little light.

Extensive alterations are being made in the flower shop of George Penek, 637 Broad street.

A flower day program was conducted by several Hebrew organizations of Newark Sunday, May 16, and several hundred dollars' worth of flowers were sold at the two local branches of the Jewish National Fund. The fund is for the purpose of purchasing land in Palestine for colonization purposes.

A certificate of incorporation for the Jakobsen Floral Co., Springfield, has been filed. The authorized capital stock is $50,000, of which $4,500 has been subscribed. The incorporators, has excellent window displays, which help the sale of plants. W. T. U.

St. Louis, Mo.—The board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden has applied to the Circuit court for leave to use $100,000 of the funds in its hands to erect a plant house at Shaw's Garden. The trustees have in their hands between $400,000 and $500,000, accumulations of the income of the Shaw estate and from the sale of property. They are not certain whether, under the terms of the will, they have the right to use the money for the purpose.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists's business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. H. Weber

The Market.

A decidedly improved tone has come over the market. The change for the better started May 20 and has continued without a break. The weather, on the whole, has been remarkably cool for May and the output has, on that account, been less than normal. The Memorial day outlook at this time is encouraging and, if we can escape such a heat wave as afflicted us May 26 to 28 a year ago, all will be well.

Roses have been cleaning up nicely. Select American Beauties make $2 per dozen, a few only reaching $3. These are in heavy supply. Hadley, Russell and Richmond are all selling well, while Taft, Dark Pink Killarney and Killarney Queen are other favorites. The supply of Ward is small; another year Sunburst will displace this variety in a large measure. Short-stemmed colored roses are being eagerly bought up at slight advances in price. Carnations are cleaning up nicely and the quality was never better for Memorial day.

Snapdragons are cleaning up somewhat better. Sweet peas, particularly colored ones, are in good demand. Darwin, Gesneriana and other late, colored tulips are selling well. Of narcissi, the common poeticus and some of the old double white gardenia-scented are seen. The present week will finish these bulbous flowers. There is an abundant supply of Spanish iris and Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride. The supply of America, Mrs. King, Augusta and other large-flowered varieties is increasing. So far these realize good prices. An immense crop of yellow marguerites is now being cut. The price on these dropped sharply last week, but is now improving.

In the way of coarser flowers, there is a large cut of double and single stocks, feverfew, spiraea, candytuft and other Memorial day specialties. Some growers, owing to the cool season, are a little late with some of their crops. Quite a few outdoor flowers are available. The outdoor valley is superior to most of the forced article. In addition to bulbous flowers, there are German iris, some aquilegias and lilacs, Spiraea Van Houttei and other shrubs, so that an abundance of flowers is certain.

Cattleyas are moving slowly. Gigas makes $8 and $9 per dozen, Mossiae half these prices. Gardenias are druggy. The supply of green stock is large and sales have improved.

Club Field Day.

May 21, the date selected for the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at the Arnold Arboretum, proved cool and overcast. Light showers fell in the morning, which affected the attendance somewhat; however, sixty-five were present, including a number of ladies, and the rain held off nicely until the gathering had dispersed. W. H. Judd, of the arboretum staff, met and conducted the party, the veteran, Jackson Dawson, joining them a little later. The shrub collections in the numerous long beds near the Forest Hills gate were first inspected. The cydonias, diervillas, loniceras, exochordas, halesias and Cytisus purpureus and C. purgans were particularly noteworthy. Everyone admired the beautiful Prunus serrulata with its large, double, peach pink flowers.

The lilac collection, of 140 varieties, was at its best and members used their notebooks freely here. Marie Legraye and Mme. Moser are still the best single whites, while Mme. Lemoine and Mme. C. Perier have no superior as double whites. Volcan, Negro, Philemon and Souvenir de L. Spaeth are grand dark purples. Prince de Beauvan and Prince Imperial are two fine newer varieties.

The great banks of the brilliant Azalea Kämpferi were a blaze of flowers. Some of the earliest rhododendrons, such as Mont Blanc, were in flower. The gaps in the beds here bore mute testimony to the way these plants died in the spring. The colonies of Cedrus Libani, the only hardy form of Lebanon ever introduced here, continue to make splendid growth both near the summit of the Overlook and on Hemlock hill. The immense collection of crataegus, some 600 varieties, was examined, also the malus collection at the base of the same hill. The last part of the arboretum inspected was the propagating department and nursery, near Mr. Dawson's home. Here hundreds of thousands of seedling rhododendrons of Chinese origin, and other interesting plants, were noted. The day proved a most delightful and profitable one to all who attended.

Various Notes.

In recognition of his fifty years' career as a florist and horticulturist and at present park commissioner of the city of Boston, the friends of Thomas F. Galvin are to tender him a complimentary dinner June 2, at the Copley-Plaza hotel. The committee in charge consists of John McFarland, Thomas Roland, Alexander Montgomery, Patrick J. Donahoe, Patrick Welch, W. H. Elliott, H. M. Robinson, James B. Shea, Samuel Goddard and Fred Esty.

John J. Fee is cutting a splendid lot of Darwin tulips, two of his leaders being Clara Butt and Pride of Haarlem.

ment, bird baths, boxes, etc. Mr. Carbone, in spite of the conditions prevailing in Europe, is planning to leave on his usual trip early in June.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports that the call for bedding plants is immense. Plants hardly open a flower before they are snapped up. For Memorial day a big crop of candidum and longiflorum lilies, spiræas and late tulips was put on the market.

Peirce Bros. had a fine crop of valley for Memorial day. Their roses have been in fine crop, including Mlle. Cecile Brunner, Prince d'Arenberg, Killarney, White Killarney, Ward and Sunburst.

A. A. Pembroke left in his auto May 22 for a fishing trip at Lake Winnebago, N. H. Accompanying him were his brother, A. G. Pembroke, A. E. Walsh and E. J. Rogean, salesmen at the Flower Exchange.

William H. Elliott has been getting a fine crop of Kaiserin roses from Brighton. His Tafts also are splendid.

At the funeral services, May 19, for Edward J. Welch, son of Edward Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., and nephew of Patrick Welch, the well known and popular president of the S. A. F., there was a large gathering of sympathetic friends, and the wealth of floral tributes, including many from the trade, attested the popularity of the deceased. Mr. Welch was only 21, and one of the trusted employees of Welch Bros. Co. He was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him.

N. F. Comley, of Burlington, had a heavy crop of sweet peas and carnations for Memorial day. He has a number of large houses planted with cucumbers and tomatoes, which are now yielding well.

Penn had an elaborate wedding decoration May 22 for the wedding of Miss Claflin, of Milton, Mass. American Beauty, Killarney Queen, peonies, palms and southern smilax were used in quantity at the house and church. Great preparations were made here for Memorial day trade, and 5,000 artificial wreaths are in readiness in addition to fresh flowers. Orders in shoals have arrived from all parts of New England, due to extensive advertising.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, will erect one of the most up-to-date Hitchings houses in place of the one recently destroyed.

Zinn's, on Park street, had a charming window May 22, consisting of fuchsias, yellow marguerites, Spanish iris and Darwin tulips.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, has the finest lot of Mrs. Sander marguerites arriving at the wholesale markets; also, yellow marguerites and pink snapdragons in quantity.

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., has a heavy crop of American Beauties. They also have extra fine Russell, Hadley, Ophelia and Stanley.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. reports good May business. They keep most attractive windows. One May 22, of blue cornflowers mixed with yellow marguerites, Darwin tulips, Cattleya Mossiae and blue Spanish iris, was effective.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is getting a good cut of cornflowers, Gladiolus nanus and Spanish iris.

No florist in Boston puts more care into his window arrangements than do Wax Bros. They are always delightfully fresh and seasonable. May 24 one large window, which was banked high, looked charming with an arrangement of large bunches of Darwin tulips, iris, marguerites, cornflowers, ixias, Gladiolus America, orchids and Beauty roses.

I am sorry to report Robert E. Montgomery as again on the sick list at the Natick hospital.

John McFarland and J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, are each cutting splendid lots of valley.

Judging from advertisements appearing in the daily press and from window displays, artificial wreaths are going to be more of a feature than ever this Memorial day. Prices run as low as 98 cents each at the dry goods stores. I look for a reaction in favor of fresh flowers another season, as the artificial business is being heavily overdone.

Welch Bros. Co. was well equipped for Memorial day trade. They had an immense stock of both natural and artificial flowers. Peonies are here in quantity from the south. No local flowers were available for Memorial day.

Sweet peas, roses and marguerites are meeting with a heavy sale with the Boston Cut Flower Co.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will have one more of its popular ladies' nights June 15. Admission will be by tickets only, which are now procurable at a low price from all officers and members of the executive committee.

Henry Penn leaves on his transcontinental trip June 15. He will visit many beauty spots in the Canadian Rockies, going also to Yellowstone park, Seattle, and to the San Francisco and San Diego expositions. He will return via Chicago and expects to be absent six weeks.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business conditions have improved considerably and the stores are pretty well booked up with orders for this week and next for graduation exercises in private schools and seminaries. Last week there was an unusual quantity of funeral work and a number of large receptions and other occasions for decorations. Out-of-town trade has been good, and the wholesale houses report many large shipments to the north and south. Peonies have had the call, and on several occasions there was a scarcity of these in certain colors. They have gone in large part to far northern points, while from the south came a demand for carnations. Dagger ferns have also been shipped in large quantities. Peonies have been bringing an average of from $4 to $6. There has been a marked shortage of whites, probably brought about by the placing of large quantities in storage for future needs. The cool weather last week seemed to put new life into the rose crop, for many varieties came in strong and met with ready sale. There has, however, been a change and the thermometer is registering high. Local stock is bringing from $2 to $5 per hundred, while northern stock is being held at from $4 to $8. Killarney Briliants have figured as the week's leaders. There has been a good demand for white roses of all kinds. Gardenias, although small, are of good quality and have not as yet shown the effects of the heat. There has been a fair sale of America and Augusta gladioli.

A new fashion has sprung up in Washington in corsage bouquets; society women are demanding flowers that will match their sweaters worn while engaged in outdoor sports. For this purpose sweet peas have the preference. It happens that these flowers are at present of exceptionally good quality, having held out well, and they thus meet with a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Among the week's visitors were W. P. Craig, of Philadelphia; James Meiklejohn, representing H. F. Darrow, New York; A. M. Henshaw, of Henshaw & Fenrich, New York; U. Cutler Ryerson, of Newark, N. J., and J. E. Rolker, of New York.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington is scheduled for Tuesday evening, June 2. A special entertainment will be provided. At the business session, plans will be discussed for the attendance of members at the convention at San Francisco.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals, in deciding the case of the United States vs. Hermann Boker & Co. last week, held that hedge shears are dutiable at the rate of thirty per cent ad valorem. This assessment had been made by the collector of the port at the time of entry. The importers claimed that they were entitled to free entry as agricultural implements, and their contention was upheld by the Board of United States General Appraisers. Upon coming to the higher court, it was said that the records presented to it were barren of facts save for the appraiser's report and the sample. The meaning of the word agriculture is dealt with to a considerable extent, following which the court arrives at the opinion that hedges are purely ornamental whether on the farm or about the city home; they do not contribute to the subsistence of man or beast, directly or indirectly, and whether or not the shears should come in free depends upon whether or not they are chiefly used for trimming purely ornamental hedges and shrubbery. The court found them to be so used and held them dutiable at thirty per cent, upholding the assessment of the collector and reversing the Board of Appraisers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Preparations for Memorial day and an unusually heavy demand for bedding plants have been the means of keeping the local market from the doldrums during the last week. Roses are in good supply. Valley is abundant, a good supply of outdoor stock keeping prices well down. For the first time, lilacs have been quite generally displayed this season and have sold fairly well, although the prices have been low. The whites have outsold the purples. Magnolia

Various Notes.

J. Baraducci has opened a retail store at 148 Atwells avenue.

William E. Chappell, of Branch avenue, secretary of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, is confined to his house by severe illness.

Miss Annie Peckham, of Carpenter street, was a business visitor in Boston last week.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., has purchased the entire stock of aspidistras from the Knight estate.

Walter S. Sword, of Valley Falls, has several large contracts for bedding plants for outdoor planting.

Alex Macrae, of F. Macrae & Sons, had a narrow escape a few days ago from serious injury when the automobile in which he was driving was run into by another machine. He was thrown out, but suffered only a few cuts and bruises, although his machine was considerably damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Kalmar Max, of San Francisco, arrived last week for a few weeks' stay with relatives in this city and Boston.

E. D. Tucker is now settled in his new store near the railroad station at Pawtucket.

Timothy O'Connor was in New York last week.

Frank Bush is now in charge of the shipping and delivery department of J. E. Koppelman.

J. Frederick Baker, of Moosup, Conn., was in this city last week and reports the recent enlargement of his store, necessitated by increasing business.

Frank Vose has been elected a trustee of the Cook Cemetery Association, at Woonsocket.

Frank Buffinton was a visitor last week. He had the decoration for the Chase-Gifford wedding Tuesday, May 18, one of the largest weddings in Fall River in several years.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco,
Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

A. H. SMITH, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, attended the canners' convention in Indianapolis, Ind., May 19 to 21.

THE turnip seed in Tennessee has been mostly harvested and, while the acreage was much below normal, the crop is of good quality and the yield at least normal.

NOTICE of the death of Robert Leonard, youngest son of S. F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, will be found in this week's obituary column.

NEWS of the death of W. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., will be found in this week's obituary column, with a brief account of his long and active career.

THE Pacific Seed Growers' Co., formerly at 252 Clay street, San Francisco, has recently moved its offices to the Holbrook building, on Sutter street near Sansome.

THERE was a meeting of the location committee of the allied associations in the canning trades at Louisville last week. While no announcement has as yet been made, it is expected that within a day or two it will be officially stated that Louisville gets the next canners' convention, February 8, 1916.

SEEDSMEN at Nashville, Tenn., report a revival of business that promises to bring up the season's average better than was at first thought. Some items are already growing short. We are told that 15,000 bushels of cowpeas were shipped out of the city in the last ten days and that there is every promise of a shortage within the next two weeks.

ACCORDING to a story in the Philadelphia North American, W. Atlee Burpee paid 250 pounds sterling, or $1.39 per seed, for three ounces of the new scarlet sweet pea, Fiery Cross, the novelty that won the silver medal at the London show last July. Trial plants bloomed at Fordhook May 18. W. F. Therkildson vouches for the story by sending out marked copies of it.

THE McGill Seed Growers' Co., San Francisco, confirms last week's report of damage to the onion seed crop from late rains, saying that loss from mildew is almost certain to be heavy in practically all parts of the state, though the real extent of the shortage cannot be known for some time. This is the first time in several years that the onion crop has suffered in this manner. In other lines there appears to be little injury. Sweet

MAN

A man has 500 muscles, one billion cells, 200 different bones, four gallons of blood, several hundred feet of arteries and veins, 28 feet of intestines and millions of pores. His heart measures 5 x 3½ x 2½ inches, weighs from 8 to 12 ounces and has a capacity of from 4 to 6 ounces in each ventricle. It is a hollow, muscular organ, beats 72 times a minute and pumps 22½ pounds of blood a minute, or 16 tons a day. Now if you had such a delicate machine in your factory, you would be very careful what work you did with it. Therefore, you should be very careful what lily bulbs you plant, to be sure that you are operating your delicate mechanism for something worth while. Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs are positively the best you can buy—they will average better than most brands. We don't claim each case is beyond criticism, but we do claim that for an article produced by nature in a foreign country, under all kinds of weather conditions, imported into this country and sold to growers who force them under all kinds of conditions, they will produce better average results in quantities than any other brand known. Prices very reasonable, upon request. Plant some Cold Storage bulbs now—you will need them by the time they bloom.

WE REJOICE

With the lucky florist who has a bench of my famous Silver Pink Snapdragon Seedlings at his command for Memorial Day. We have a great show and have had many words of praise and congratulations from visiting florists and from retail customers. Though we shall cut armfuls of S. P. blooms we will not have enough, and have turned away many inquiries at wholesale.

Four other leading varieties that have cropped at their regular season will give practically no yield for this important flower day—a fact that is greatly advancing the popularity of our Silver Pink Seedlings, which can be so timed as to get blooms when you need them.

Now is the time to sow seed for fall crop. Stop hustling long enough to send your order. Price of seed of our original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seedling plants of same, at $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. Plants of Nelrose, Garnet and Yellow, at $5.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Remember, we grow snapdragons, and can supply your every need.

SAN FRANCISCO CONVENTION.

Details of A. S. T. A. Meeting.

Special train via Santa Fe road to Grand Canyon, Los Angeles and San Diego leaves Chicago 8:05 p. m., June 12. It is necessary that all those intending to take this train write at once to S. F. Leonard, 226 West Kinzie street, Chicago. Friends of members are invited to take this train. This will be a fine trip, and members are urged to make every effort to make the special train a possibility.

The side trip to San Diego may be omitted if desired. Those requiring hotel accommodations in Los Angeles should write at once to M. L. Germain, c/o Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles.

It may be necessary to alter the trip from Los Angeles up the coast to San Francisco. Should there be 125 tickets assured, we can have a special train up the coast, which will make side trips a possibility; otherwise it will be impossible to make more than one or two stops.

Our arrangements with the Inside Inn necessitate visitors arriving either Saturday night, June 19, or Sunday morning, June 20. Reservations at the Inside Inn can be made by writing direct to the Inside Inn, Exposition Grounds, San Francisco. Rates are:

Outside rooms, without bath, single, $2.50, $3; double, $3, $3.50, $4.
Outside rooms, with bath, single, $3, $4, $5; double, $4, $5, $7.

Friday and Saturday, June 25 and 26, the members and their families will be the guests of the local seed growers, who will bear all of the expense connected with railway fares, entertainment over night at Hotel Vendome, lunches, automobile trips and barbecue at San Juan.

This will be the first time the American Seed Trade Association has met west of Chicago, and it will probably be many years before the members will come out to California again.

We are planning to give our friends a good time and hope we will have a good attendance.

Reputation and Sensation

ONLY ONE IS FOR SALE, and when we say: "Plant SENSATION because it is the earliest, freest, most profitable Sweet Pea in existence," we will stake our reputation that it is all we claim for it. We are also giving you absolute proof in the letters published, that other reliable firms and people are gladly backing us up in our statements. It is a true Orchid-flowering Variety, and, if planted in August, will start producing in October and continue as late as any variety, giving months more profit than other Orchid-flowering Varieties, and this at a time when SENSATION has no Sweet Pea competition in the markets.

We are introducing two colors: First is color of Orchid-flowering Xmas Pink; second is a good, bright scarlet, same as King Edward Spencer. Both produce flowers up to 16-inch stem, flowers averaging two inches and over in diameter. It has the foliage of the Grandiflora type, which is a great benefit, allowing all available light in dark winter days.

Supply is limited; order now and avoid disappointment. Seed will be sent out early in July.

Newman & Legg, Manasquan, N. J.
Dear Sirs.—In regard to your variety of "Orchid-flowering Grandiflora Sweet Peas," which you have been shipping us since early November, we repeat this stock is great. You will find that it brought nearly double the money of any other such early variety, and our best customers jumped at it; we never had enough to go around. You will notice that for some time the Peas were bringing more per flower than the Carnations you were shipping. If you care to have us do so, we will send you the opinions of some of our customers who, as we have mentioned before, greatly appreciate such stock.

Very truly yours,
HENSHAW & FENRICH,

Newman & Legg, Manasquan, N. J.
Gentlemen.—I wish to say in regard to your new Orchid-flowering Sweet Pea, Sensation, that it is the finest Winter-flowering variety that it has ever been my pleasure to have seen. I have examined it growing, from time to time, and have no hesitation in saying that it has a great future in store for it.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE MASSON,
Superintendent to Fred'k Frelinghuysen.

PLEASE NOTE.—Secretary Elberon Horticultural Society.

Newman & Legg, Manasquan, N. J.
Gentlemen.—Both the samples of your new Pink and White Orchid-flowered Sweet Peas, which you sent us, were very good, especially so since they started to bloom in October. The foliage is of the Grandiflora type and quite distinct from the Spencer.

Your photographs leave no question of its great floriferousness. Kindly advise us how close you allow the plants to stand in the rows, as we shall undoubtedly want some of the seed.

Newman & Legg, Manasquan, N. J.
Dear Sirs.—In regard to your new Winter-flowering Sweet Pea, Sensation, I would say that you have named it rightly, as it was a pleasure to me to see it growing with its remarkable freedom of bloom, long stems, and pleasing color; also one of the greatest points in its favor, over other varieties, is its extreme earliness. And I am sincere in saying that I wish Sensation and your firm all success in introducing this great Pea.

Yours respectfully,
MR. MILLS,

WISCONSIN SEED LEGISLATION.

J. M. Clark, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, was in Madison, Wis., last week attending a hearing on the amendment to the new seed bill now pending in the Wisconsin legislature. The effect of the amendment would be to place under the classification of agricultural seeds all canners' varieties of peas and sweet corn.

There was a further hearing of the bill beginning May 25, to determine whether or not the disclaimer of the seedsmen should remain in it. It seems to be the desire of the canners to do away with this. The seedsmen, on the other hand, of course, wish it to stand. For though they are willing to be responsible in any reasonable degree, they do not wish to be held accountable for the vagaries of nature, as, for instance, when the product from some cause not attributable to their negligence, is not true to type. Whether or not the disclaimer remains or goes out, the seedsmen cannot be affected to any alarming extent; for if legislation is repugnant to them, they will merely be under the necessity of shipping to Illinois, where the contract of sale can be consummated, and from where the goods can be re-shipped to Wisconsin.

BURPEE SHORTENS HOURS.

After the strenuous season, when long hours are the rule in all mail order seed shops, the action of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., in shortening both the working day and the working week, will be of interest to the trade. The following slip was in employees' pay envelopes May 22:

After careful consideration, we have decided to make a radical change in the hours during the summer of 1915, commencing June 1, by having the day's work commence at 8:30 instead of 8:00 a. m. Of course, those whose duties require that they get in some time in advance of other employees will have to continue reporting at an earlier hour.

During July and August we shall close the building Friday night and the employees will not report until the following Monday. This special week-end holiday goes into effect on Friday, July 2, and will continue up to and including Friday, August 27.

The starting hour in the morning we shall continue at 8:30 just as long as we think it advisable, but both this radical change and the week-end special holidays will, of course, be governed entirely by the way our employees show their appreciation. It is to be hoped there will be no "cutting off corners of time" either in the morning or evening; that is, that all, no matter what their work may be, will be ready to go to work promptly at 8:30 in the morning and continue working right up to the moment the 5 o'clock gong rings. We feel sure that if this sort of spirit is shown in the work, we may be able to make the opening hour 8:30 permanently, but this all depends on the employees.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

The Market.

Trade is a little quiet here, and hardly likely to improve for some time, but the florists are keeping up a nice display and in this way making a bid for what there is going. Good bulbous stock, such as gladioli and Spanish irises, are the chief offerings; the stock comes mostly from northern points and Los Angeles.

Various Notes.

A. Beverley, of the Mission Oak Nursery, reports a larger trade than usual in vegetable plants and roses.

Joseph Whipple keeps up an elegant display and the nursery stock is looking fine. He has just purchased a new Studebaker Six.

At the nursery of the Southern California Acclimatizing Association, on State street, there is always something of interest, and on this trip I was just in time for that most beautiful shrub, Carpenteria Californica. The lovely, pure white blossoms were just then in their prime. Fremontia Californica was also in full beauty, the tree a golden sheet. Sterculia acerifolia was also in bloom, showing the peculiar habit it has of dropping the foliage when the flowers appear. This is known as the Australian flame tree, on account of its bright red flowers.

At the W. H. Cowles estate, W. Donald still keeps up the good work. A large specimen of Phoenix macrophylla is being moved from Goleta, probably the largest of its kind in existence and one of the few known in cultivation.

H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is little doing either in decorative work or transient business. Funeral work is the only thing that has in any way helped to reduce surplus stock. Although the northern growers apparently have not dumped as much stock here as usual at this time of year, yet there are many flowers that do not find a purchaser. Indoor roses are fine, but the price is low, owing to the large number of outdoor flowers that are coming in. Carnations are a drug on the market, selling at prices that hardly pay for gathering. Now that the climbing form of Cecile Brunner is about over, the bush form will probably sell better. As it is, the flowers are not worth picking. Delphiniums and other hardy stock are making a pretty show in the windows. Greens are cheap, especially Asparagus plumosus.

Various Notes.

Quite an extensive rose show was held on the fourth floor of the Hamburger store, May 17. Many hundreds of fine blooms were staged in the greatest variety and the majority of the prize-winning exhibits were worthy of a place in any show. The first-prize single was a splendid bloom of Sunburst, while the cups for the best bloom in the show and for the best three both went to splendid flowers of Frau Karl Druschki. As showing the interest taken, large crowds thronged the floor long before the judges had finished their work. The show was under the management of A. Hunt, manager of the floral department here. The judges were Fred Hills and H. R. Richards.

Howard & Smith report that nursery business is keeping up well. There is a bright and pretty showing now at the Montebello grounds. Practically everything is in bloom, but one of the finest of all is the collection of sweet peas. All the novelties of other growers are being tried out, while the new hybrids raised by the firm are exquisite in color, of true Spencer type and of immense size. All show the modern long stem and have four flowers to the stem. There is also a grand showing of hybrid gladioli and new or distinct shrubs. Deutzia magnifica is an elegant species, with large, pure white flowers, a great improvement over D. crenata.

Henry J. Kessel, of the Richmond Fernery, San Francisco, has been calling on the trade here with his specialties.

C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., stopped here for a couple of days en route to San Diego and has nothing but praise for this section. H. W. Turner, who is working with Mr. Totty in the dissemination of some of the newer roses, was piloting him around.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. has made several changes in the store at 316 South Broadway. The stairway has been opened up and a plate glass window has been put in to show off the stock. In the basement a new icebox has been installed and things generally are much better arranged than before.

R. W. Saakes and O. C. Saakes both had a good deal of work for the funeral of "Hap Hogan" this week.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

More rain has fallen this week, and, while no further storms are expected, a few showers would be no surprise. Small sales are picking up a little and business has been active in work for funerals, as well as for weddings and other social affairs. The many large conventions planned for this summer are sure to take a lot of both greens and cut flowers. Considerable attention is being given to Memorial day and it is believed that a better business than usual will be done.

The cold, wet weather has held back many kinds of outdoor stock, which are coming in late, but the market is well supplied in several popular lines. Carnations are again plentiful. The situation in this line is unsatisfactory to dealers, as the market is commonly glutted, with occasional shortages when they are wanted, and there is a disposition among some of the larger downtown houses to let the street vendors have this business to themselves. Peonies are still scarce and rather poor, but with fair weather from now on there will be more of them by May 30. The same may be said of sweet peas. Irises are on the wane, but some of them will be available till the end of the month. A good many gladioli are being sold. A much larger supply of Lilium giganteum is expected for Memorial day and a large sale is probable.

Potted rambler roses are popular, but not "popular-priced," and a good many are still coming on. There is an unusually large call for Cecile Brunner roses, the abundance and fine quality of which are making them popular with the eastern tourists. Other roses are showing better quality, though the damp weather is conducive to mildew. Russell is fine and quite popular, white Killarney finds a fair demand and Aaron Ward is kept closely cleaned up. Some fine Sunburst is appearing. Orchids of several kinds are in fair supply and meet with about a normal demand. Gardenias are increasing in popularity, and while the present cut is fairly large and nothing unusual in quality, the offerings are cleaned up without trouble.

Various Notes.

Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been feeling the effects of too close application to business and accordingly spent last week in recreation at a health resort. He has just returned, refreshed and ready for another period of hard work. He says his planting of dahlias is coming up nicely.

Owing to the recent spell of cold, wet weather, it has been found necessary to postpone the show scheduled for June 4, under the auspices of the exposition and the American Sweet Pea Society, until June 23 and 24. The exhibition will be held, as planned, in the Palace of Horticulture and exhibits will be staged by 11 a. m., June 23. It is felt that the postponement is in the best interests of all concerned and should permit many to make a bigger and better display than they had planned. Entries should be all in by June 10.

The bowling team of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, interest in which has been lagging for some time, has been reorganized, with B. Podesta as chairman, and met May 21 at a downtown alley.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has purchased another large automobile delivery wagon, to handle its increasing shipments. This company is just closing an unusually successful iris season, having had an excellent crop and a large shipping demand. Memorial day

The Market.

No important change in market conditions has occurred this week. The most noteworthy feature is that counter trade holds up well in spite of the profusion of outdoor flowers available. Some firms report a marked increase in May business over last year, which is partly due to an increase in orders from outside points. Plenty of cut stock of all sorts is coming in, but there is no oversupply of any particular variety. Cornflowers in several colors, pyrethrum hybrids, Spanish irises, gaillardias, stocks, peonies, campanulas, delphiniums, snapdragons and perennial poppies are rivaling in popularity the carnations, greenhouse roses and sweet peas. The season for bedding stock is nearly over—about a month earlier than usual.

Club Meeting.

The Portland Floral Society held its regular monthly meeting, May 18, at its headquarters in Masonic Temple.

A resolution was passed, unanimously authorizing an invitation by the society to the representatives of the American Seed Trade Association en route to the convention in San Francisco to stop in Portland to enjoy the hospitality of the seed growers and dealers, assisted by the society.

It was reported that the itinerary of the party from the New York Florists' Club on the westbound section of their trip to the S. A. F. convention provides for a day in Portland, August 14. The New York club's delegation will be heartily welcomed by the Portland society and the hope was expressed that a large number of members of the trade from the Atlantic district will come with them.

Julius Dorsche, manager of the rose festival floral center, reported that all spaces had been taken and contracts signed. James Forbes, chairman of the exhibition committee, reported that arrangements for the exhibit under the society's name were completed.

The nominating committee reported its list of candidates to be voted on at the June meeting.

The retailers' committee reported that an agreement had been reached as to summer early closing hours, the same as were tried successfully last year.

Owing to ill health, J. J. Butzer resigned as trustee and President Van Kirk announced the appointment of Henry Clemmens to fill out the unexpired term.

L. W. Scott, chairman of the entertainment committee, was asked to provide for a florists' picnic on Sunday, July 4. It is proposed to close, so far as is practical, all the downtown stores on this day and permit employees to attend the picnic.

The table by the president's desk was decorated with a bunch of roses brought in by G. Indermuhle and by a bouquet of mixed perennials from Gill Bros., which were examined and admired at the close of the meeting.

Various Notes.

L. W. Scott reports that Fred Young, formerly of Portland, but now a member of the firm of Young & Lester, of Walla Walla, Wash., is succeeding well in business. Just now he is busy with a new delivery car the firm recently purchased.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

G. F. MADISON, Lodi, Cal., has purchased land adjoining his nursery preparatory to enlarging the establishment.

G. A. CHEDEL is shipping 300,000 Norway spruce trees from his nursery, at Randolph, Vt., 200,000 of which are for reforestation in Vermont, the others going to neighboring states.

CALIFORNIA orchardists have suffered heavily from the abnormally heavy and persistent spring rains. Three-fourths of the first strawberry crop is reported ruined, and the loss on early cherries is put at $150,000. Other small fruits and berries have suffered likewise.

J. NORRIS BARNES, of the Barnes Bros. Nursery Co., Yalesville and Wallingford, Conn., is assisting the school children of the latter place in their city-beautiful movement by offering 400 apple and peach trees to those taking part in it. Other items are given them at cost price.

H. L. BROWN, who entered the employ of the Wagner Park Nursery Co., at Sidney, O., shortly after it was started by B. P. Wagner, and who has been in charge of the office for the last few years, after serving in practically every other capacity on the place, is moving to Cleveland, where he will engage in business.

MISTAKING the gasoline for the kerosene tank when getting oil for flares to protect the buds from frost on a recent night, an employee of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., at Owatonna, Minn., caused the loss of over 1,000 gallons of gasoline and considerable damage to the tanks, in all amounting to about $500 worth. The gasoline running from the faucet to the barrels being filled caught fire from the lantern, so that all the contents of the large tank were consumed, making a spectacular fire. Fortunately, the tank did not explode and no adjoining buildings caught fire.

PROPAGATION OF PEACH TREES.

The details of propagating the peach begin with the pits or seeds from which the stocks are grown and on which the different varieties are budded. The pits are obtained from many different sources. They are handled in different ways, depending quite largely upon climatic conditions, the extent of the business and other factors.

In the middle latitudes, where probably the largest peach nurseries are located, the pits are generally planted in the fall in rows three to four feet apart where the trees are to be grown. In the north the pits are sometimes stratified or bedded in the fall in moist sand, where they are under some degree of control, and the planting is delayed until spring. In either case, the action of the moisture and freezing temperatures results in the cracking of the stones. If the pits have been stratified, the kernels are usually sifted from the stones and sand before planting. They are then handled in essentially the same manner as pits that are planted in the fall.

In mild climates where there is little action from frosts or freezes, it is probably quite important to prevent the pits from ever becoming dry. If they are not planted as soon as they are removed from the flesh of the fruit, they should be held in such a manner as to prevent the loss of much moisture. Otherwise a slow and irregular germination would follow. However, pits that have become dry will frequently germinate fairly well without freezing, provided they are soaked in water for a sufficiently long time before being planted.

The usual method of propagation is by budding, and the seedlings should be large enough to bud by midsummer. This is done largely during July and August, extending sometimes into September. The buds put in during these months should take, that is, become attached to the stock, within a comparatively few days if the operation is successful; then they should remain dormant until the following spring. After the buds take, it is a common practice to lop over the tops of the seedling stocks by cutting them nearly off just above the point where the bud is inserted. Subsequently, the tops are entirely removed, or the tops may be left until the following spring and then removed without being previously lopped over.

The trees are ready to be planted permanently in the orchard after they have made one season's growth in the nursery. These 1-year-olds compose the great majority of the trees that are delivered by nurserymen for fall and spring planting.

A limited amount of budding is done in June. Buds inserted as early in the season as this are expected to start into growth with but little delay instead of remaining dormant until the next spring, as is the case with the buds that are put in later in the summer. The trees so grown are termed "June buds," and are ready for permanent planting the following fall. While some growers plant this grade of tree with a high degree of success, the majority prefer 1-year-old trees, as already stated. Trees older than one year are planted only in exceptional instances.

In California, the stocks which are budded during the summer are sometimes used the following fall and spring for planting orchards. This practice is commonly referred to as dormant-bud planting.

Readers who desire further information on this subject will find of value Farmers' Bulletins 157, on "The Propagation of Plants," and 631, on "Growing Peaches: Sites, Propagation, Planting, Tillage, and Maintenance of Soil Fertility," from which the above is taken. Both can be obtained upon application to the Secretary of Agriculture.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

There has been little change in business conditions since last week. Stock is not quite so plentiful as it was, partly owing to the cold, cloudy weather we have been having and partly to the close proximity of Memorial day. Growers are busy figuring on the quantity of stock they can cut for that time and are much more anxious to have a large crop for the coming holiday than to supply the present demand. From all indications, Memorial day should prove good for the trade this year. Last year the weather was extremely hot, and the market went to pieces during the last few days preceding May 31. Stock was overplentiful and prices went down, although there was some demand for first-class stock, which was almost unobtainable. This year stock is scarce, and orders are being taken care of with difficulty. Prices are far in advance of last year's, and the quality is so superior to last year's cut that there is no comparison. If the coming holiday does not meet all expectations it will be because the stock does not hold out, as the demand is brisk and the market has been cleaning up daily for some time.

Roses are in exceptionally fine shape. The cut is about equal to the demand, but there are no left-overs. Carnations are quite scarce and are bringing good prices. This is due to the dark, rainy weather, but what stock is handled is of fine quality. A few sunshiny days will make a big difference in the cut and will be almost necessary to provide stock for all the advance orders already booked for Memorial day.

Peonies are moving fairly well and the stock looks good. From present indications, there will be a large supply of these for Memorial day trade, and they will be a tremendous help in the absence of a big supply of roses and carnations. Valley is in good demand and lilies are moving well. Sweet peas are cleaning up nicely every day. The quality is beginning to deteriorate, although there is some fine stock to be had. Prices are fairly good.

Various Notes.

Gimbel Bros.' floral department is enhancing its window display by the use of live butterflies, which Mr. MacDonald has been successful in procuring by a most diligent search of the Indiana forests. There are about ten varieties already out of their cocoons.

Mrs. J. T. Hinchliffe, Racine, Wis., was in town Monday, May 17.

Miss Meyer, with the Rentschler Floral Co., Madison, was called to Milwaukee Tuesday, May 18, by the death of her niece. Her sister, the mother of the child who passed away so suddenly, is seriously ill at a local hospital. Miss Meyer has the sympathy of her many friends at this time. H. J. S.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business has been good in spite of a week of rain and cool weather. Funeral work has been unusually heavy for this time of year, and a number of florists had a share of the floral tributes for the opening of the new Hotel Muehlebach. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, with the exception of carnations, which suddenly fell short in supply. Roses are still of good quality and bring a fair price. Peonies are arriving in large quantities, while the quality is unexcelled. It is expected that there will be a shortage of peonies for Memorial day. Outdoor gladioli from Texas are coming in more heavily. Snapdragons, stocks, lilies, daisies and other such flowers are plentiful and reasonable in price. A large number of orders have been placed, especially in carnations and peonies, for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

At its opening, the Muehlebach hotel was decorated from top to bottom with cut flowers, fancy basket work, palms and decorative plants. The management purchased a large number of palms to be used in the hotel. Each table was decorated with handsome centerpieces or basket work. The W. L. Rock Flower Co. furnished all the decorating material for the new hotel, using over 500 American Beauties alone. Well flowered hydrangeas were the principal flowering plants used. This firm has some of the best hydrangeas that have been seen for some time.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that orders are heavy for Memorial day, especially for out of town. Mr. Noll's partner, L. R. Bohannon, and Mrs. Bohannon were in this city last week, from Chicago.

Miss L. E. Bogness left last week for a short vacation at St. Louis and Cape Girardeau, Mo., where her family lives. She will be back before Memorial day.

Spring bedding stock is going out more slowly this year than ever before, is the general report of the florists who do a bedding plant business. W. J. B.

GERANIUMS

Don't plant your culls, left over from the bedding season, to make stock for next season. Your Geraniums are an important item and the best stock procurable is none too good. We have a fine lot of young plants, propagated especially for this purpose. Have the following varieties, at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000:

S. A. Nutt, crimson; Marvel, dark red; Decorator, orange-scarlet; A. Ricard, orange-scarlet; Beaute de Poitevine, salmon.

We will soon begin delivering young Poinsettias. Write us if you need some. $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been getting its April rain during the last two weeks. Shrubbery never looked finer than it does just now; the parks are looking their best.

There has not been much complaint about trade. Everyone is busy, though there is nothing large as a rule. Stock has been fine. There are plenty of roses and lilies, but carnations have hardly been up to the demand. Beauties are not quite so plentiful and prices have shown an advance. Some local peonies are coming and they give promise of being right for Memorial day. Southern peonies, iris and gladioli are on the market, but have not shown much value. Pyrethrum is another flower that does not seem much in demand. The outlook for carnations for the holiday is not good. Everyone seems to be a little off crop, but the peonies will fill the bill if they get here right.

Plantmen are certainly "making hay," even in the rain. The indications are that most of the planting will be done by Memorial day.

The wholesale houses have all been handling heavy cuts of flowers, which usually clean up, but some of the prices are not entirely satisfactory.

The retail stores which handle plants are busy, but the cut flower people are not pushed to any great extent.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a pink wedding last week. The wedding set included seven bouquets of Bulgaria roses. The church and house were decorated with vases of fine, large, pink snapdragons.

Randolph & McClements have a large wedding for Thursday, May 27, at Youngstown, O.

David Hill, the Fifth avenue florist, has been on the sick-list.

Abe Krongold, of the Victoria Flower Shop, was married Sunday, May 23. The couple will be at home to their friends at their home in Beechview.

Clarke.

Muskegon, Mich. — Cemetery vase planting is keeping the Butterworth Floral Co. busy at present.

HYDRANGEAS

We have a magnificent lot of large plants grown in tubs and half-barrels for

JULY AND AUGUST FLOWERING

We have made a specialty of Hydrangeas for years, and our plants have never been finer than they are this year. They are well budded, and will begin to show color the end of June, and will be in perfection during July and August—when they are most in demand.

Hydrangea Otaksa, the standard pink variety, and the new French Hydrangeas—Avalanche, Fraicheur, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere and Mlle. Renee Gaillard. Strong plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each—according to size.

Otaksa, very large specimens in half barrels, $7.50, $10.00 and $12.50 each—according to size.

DRACAENA INDIVISA

Large plants for centers of vases, 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $1.50 each—according to size.

CROTONS

Assorted varieties for bedding, in 3½ and 4-inch pots, $15.00 and $25.00 per 100.

VINCA MAJOR VARIEGATA

We have a fine stock of this in strong, heavy plants in 4-inch pots, at $10.00 and $12.00 per 100—according to size.

ENGLISH IVY

Strong plants, 4-inch pots, $10.00 and $12.00 per 100—according to size.

FERNS

Nephrolepis Teddy, Jr., 8-inch, $1.00 each; 4-inch, 15c each; 2½-inch, $6.00 per 100.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima, 8-inch pots, $1.00 each; 2½-inch, $6.00 per 100.

Nephrolepis Muscosa and Smithii, 3½-inch pots, 2c each; 5-inch, 50c each.

Nephrolepis Harrisii, 6-inch pots, 50c each; 12-inch, very large specimens, $4.00 and $5.00 each.

Cibotium Schiedel, large plants, 10-inch pots, $3.50 each.

Table Ferns, assorted varieties, nice plants, 2½-inch pots, $4.00 per 100; extra size, 3½-inch pots, $15.00 per 100.

WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

We have a particularly fine stock of Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg, strong plants, own root and grafted; also a fine lot of grafted roses in the standard varieties, like Killarney Brilliant, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Mrs. Geo. Sawyer, Mme. Edmond Rostand, etc., etc. We will be glad to quote prices on application.

ADVERTISERS

Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture.

First, second and third volumes now ready. Remaining volumes will be issued as soon as possible. The following are a few of the features to be found in this new work:

KEY TO IDENTIFICATION OF PLANTS.

This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it.

SYNOPSIS OF PLANT KINGDOM.

This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters and the number of genera and species and the ranges.

THE GLOSSARY.

This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works.

TRANSLATION AND PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN NAMES.

In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2,000 and 3,000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

There are 24 colored plates, 96 full-page sepia halftones, and more than 4,000 engravings which serve as guides in the text.

CLASS ARTICLES.

Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling.

GENERAL INDEX.

The final volume will contain a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind. With the Index, Key, Synopsis and alphabetical arrangement of the Cyclopedia, any reasonable question asked by the consultant will receive a ready answer.

This work consists of six large quarto volumes, more than 3,600 pages, 500 collaborators, approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species and 40,000 plant names. Price, $6.00 per volume; $36.00 per set. Can be paid for one volume at a time.

The Market.

Business is fair. The supply is still larger than the demand, but is showing a tendency to shorten, as the season for some of the outdoor flowers is coming to an end. Roses are a little more plentiful than they were and are generally of a pretty fair quality. The carnation cut is somewhat smaller than it was at the last writing, and from present indications there will not be a superabundance of them for Memorial day. Peonies are plentiful and generally are of good quality. Other offerings include gladioli, lily of the valley, orchids, sweet peas, corn-flowers and baby's breath. The business in green goods is large.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger has been having some fine cuts of Ward and Sunburst roses.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some excellent Adiantum Croweanum from the Hoffmeister Floral Co., at Lick Run.

William Murphy is so far on the road to recovery that he is planning to get back to his desk this week. Mr. Murphy has had a long siege of it and his friends will be mighty glad to see him able to be back at the office again.

L. H. Kyrk had a fine lot of cactus dahlias from H. Greensmith's place last week. Mr. Kyrk was also the first in the market with field daisies and sweet williams.

Visitors include Mr. and Mrs. Kiger, of Marietta, O.; Mrs. L. A. Fennell, of Cynthiana, Ky.; Jos. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; J. G. Donaldson, of the Willadean Nurseries, Sparta, Ky., and Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

The Market.

Business during the last two weeks has been rushing. The bedding season is in full swing, although it has been hindered by unseasonably cool weather. Besides the bedding plant trade, numerous weddings and commencements and much funeral work have kept the florists hustling.

Cut flower stock is of excellent quality, and there is a wealth of variety available. Roses are in excellent condition. Local peonies have appeared on the market, as well as outdoor German iris. Miniature gladioli are in and also some fine greenhouse-grown America. Sweet peas are decreasing. There has been a big demand for smilax, owing to the large confirmation classes.

The outlook for Memorial day is a scarcity of flowers, owing to the unfavorable weather and the immense demand during the last few weeks.

Various Notes.

At the equal suffrage bridge, which was given in the Commercial Club rooms Saturday, May 22, the floral decorations consisted of long-stemmed snapdragons and Sunburst and white Killarney roses, which carried out the suffrage colors of yellow and white.

The opening of Teppel Bros.' new department store was the occasion for showy decorations Saturday, May 22.

A wedding of much beauty occurred Tuesday, May 4, when Miss Ruth Flick became the bride of Richard Blossom. The ceremony was performed at St. Patrick's Catholic church, which was decorated with Easter lilies and snapdragons. The bride's bouquet was made of lilies of the valley with clusters of white orchids. The maid of honor, Miss Marguerite Flick, and the three bridesmaids had bouquets of Ophelia roses in colonial style with edging of old-fashioned lace. Georgia Alice Flick, who acted as flower girl, carried a daisy chain. The reception was held at the Flick home, where great quantities of southern huckleberry foliage and smilax were used. Bronze baskets and wall baskets were filled with snapdragons, lilacs, deutzias, roses, sweet peas and apple blossoms. The bride and groom took an eastern trip, and will be at home after July 1 at 444 Arcadia court. R. F.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

THE COAL MARKET.

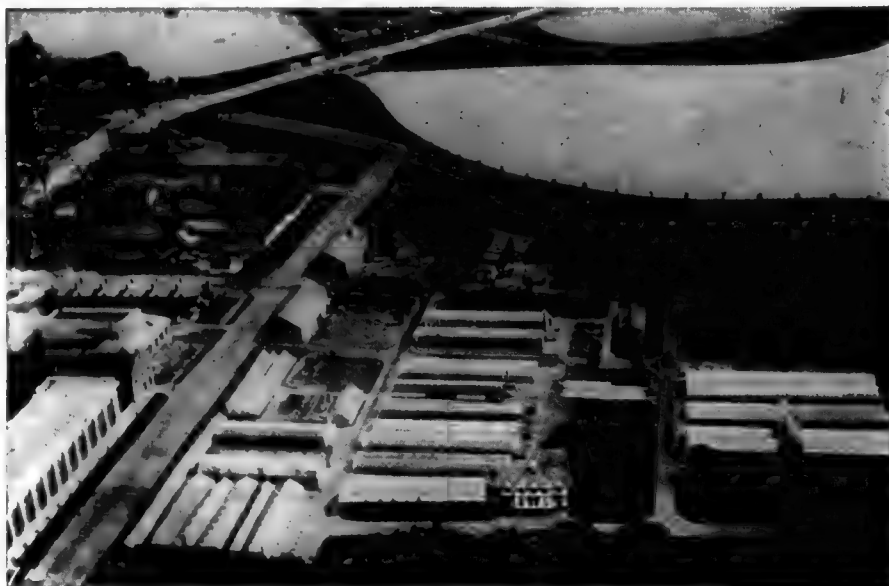

Among coal men the all-absorbing object of interest now is the new development in the export trade, resulting directly from the European war. The increased foreign demand has been the most important feature in the market for some weeks and it is assuming greater and greater significance. It looms up in vast proportions and is full of meaning for both dealers and consumers, including the florists. The Black Diamond summarizes the situation thus: "The coal trade continues to get its biggest demand, its best prices and its largest prospects from the export trade. The home business is decidedly slow, both in domestic and in steam coal."

"In a literal sense," says a Chicago writer for the same coal journal, "a diligent search would fail to disclose any real coal market in Chicago." Sooner or later, however, the boom in foreign business must have an enlivening effect on home sales, beginning with the sales of smokeless coal, the florists' fuel. So the Chicago coal man continues:

"Smokeless coal has strengthened considerably within the week. One case was actually reported of a retailer who was short of coal and shopped around several offices before he could find a car within easy reach of Chicago that could satisfy the orders he had on his books. Some sales agents say that the retailers are pretty well stocked. The major shippers say they are not stocked at all. Halfway between the two statements is probably correct. Better prospects at tidewater made some dealers uneasy over future supplies and thus some contracting has been done within the last week. The business is generally slower, however, than is safe. Prices are unchanged."

MAY USE A COIL HEATER.

I intend to build a greenhouse, 21x75 and six feet high to the gutters, running east and west. The north wall will be entirely of boards; the south wall will contain two feet of glass. The east gable end will be exposed, but the west end will be connected to the boiler shed. How many 1½-inch flows and how many 1¼-inch or 1½-inch returns will be needed to heat the house to 50 degrees, with hot water? Would it be preferable to place the returns under the benches or along the sides of the solid beds? There will be

THE WHITE HOUSE GREENHOUSES, Washington, D. C.

The conservatories of the President of the United States are located opposite the Washington monument, at Washington, D. C. Over 40 greenhouses are devoted to the growing of cut flowers, orchids, stove plants, tropical and decorative stock.

A No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILER was installed in 1906 for the high temperature houses. This boiler replaced a number of other makes and made a wonderful record for fuel economy.

The new iron frame range erected in 1910 is heated by KROESCHELL BOILERS.

The Plant Introduction Garden of the United States Department of Agriculture at Chico, California, is heated by No. 2 Kroeschell boiler and generator system.

In 1912 two No. 5 KROESCHELL BOILERS were installed for the new range of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, at Garrett Park, Md.

The U. S. Government's new establishment, the Northern Great Plains Field Station, at Mandan, N. Dakota, ordered a No. 7 KROESCHELL BOILER for the new greenhouse range erected in 1913.

August, 1914, two more No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILERS were ordered for White House Conservatories, Washington, D. C.

3-foot benches along the walls and there will be two 5-foot solid beds. I expect to build the house in southeastern Wisconsin, as I already have a small place there. The temperature there occasionally drops as low as 10 to 15 degrees below zero. The house will be protected on the north by the residence and sheds, and at the west end by the boiler house.

If I construct a coil heater, how many coils will be needed and how long should the coils be? Would 1½-inch pipe be large enough for the coils, or would you prefer 2-inch R. B.—la.

To heat the house described to 50 degrees, with hot water, I would advise using a boiler with a rating for 1,000 square feet of radiation. It would be preferable to use some of the greenhouse boilers on the market, rather than attempt to use a coil boiler, but if such a boiler is to be built, I would use twenty-five 2-inch pipes, each four or three feet below the ridge, and either eight 2-inch or ten 1½-inch returns. If the first method of piping is used, all of the returns should be on the walls, the larger number on the south side, on account of the glass in that wall. In the other plan, using three flows, part of the returns should be on the sides of the beds or in the walks.

Especially if 1½-inch pipe is used for the returns, a mercury generator or some other method of placing the water under pressure should be installed.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business has been rather quiet during the last month, except for the trade in bedding plants. This part of the business had been good until May 18, when a snow storm, followed by a frost, put a stop to the work. A large number of plants which had already been planted out were broken down by the snow and frozen the following night. Peonies and iris were not hurt much, and should be all right for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

William Kash has taken a position as rose-grower with the Mauff Floral Co.

Miss Lenora Williams, of the Park Floral Co., is spending her vacation in California. She is visiting both expositions with a party of friends.

Among the visitors last week were Mrs. W. S. Woods, of Monte Vista, Colo.; Carl Espelin, of Espelin & Warren, Fort Collins, Colo.; C. N. Fohn, of Colorado Springs, and B. C. Johnson, of the Sterling Floral Co., Sterling, Colo.

City park was one of the heaviest losers from the snow storm and frost last week; 3,000 cannas were frozen down to the ground and about the same number of geraniums were badly frozen.

Julius Brotje is adding a house 28x60 to his range at Oak Grove. It will be used for stove plants, so it has a large number of heating pipes. W. Thompson has charge of the construction.

Among the perennial flowers brought in by F. M. Gill were Campanula glomerata, Thalictrum adiantifolium and betonicas. Mr. Gill stated that these were quite durable as cut flowers.

John Holden has bought the interests of all his former partners and is now sole owner of the Holden Floral Co.

S. H. Forshaw, of Pendleton, attended the club meeting. He reports a fair season's business.

E. J. Steele, the pansy specialist, has made his strain, the Mastodon, well known among admirers of this flower. He has now about three acres of blooming plants, grown on a southerly slope, which are a beautiful sight. He has received many compliments on the appearance of about 200,000 yellow pansies, grown from his seed, which form an attractive feature on the grounds of the San Francisco exposition.

R. M. Bodley, who has a range of greenhouses on the Powell Valley road, has developed from several years' selection a strain of Earliana tomato which makes a good appearance on his benches. He says it promises to prove a desirable strain for outdoor culture in this climate.

Thomas Bodley is trying out a strain of Bonny Best tomato for inside and outside culture. He has a range of houses on property adjoining that of his brother, R. M. Bodley, and grows principally carnations and green and bedding stock for the retail trade.

Clarke Bros. have an extensive establishment in the southeast section of the city. Several acres of outside ground are devoted to perennials, deciduous shrubbery and blooming annuals. The large range of glass is filled with benched and potted stock in great variety, which shows the effect of expert culture. About 100 varieties of geraniums are grown. Some benches of White Wonder carnations have given good results this season. The firm has a large catalogue business and whole-

The Market.

The last two weeks have been rather humdrum weeks, but there has been a pretty good demand for both cut flowers and pot plants. There have been a few small commencements and other functions that have helped to create a demand. A nice rain the last of the week put things in good condition outdoors.

Peonies are gone or practically so, and the same thing may be said of Spanish iris. There is a small supply of peonies in cold storage, but it is doubtful if there is much profit in these, as there is no Memorial day trade.

Carnations are about gone and the few remaining are not good. Roses are reasonably plentiful and of good quality. Peas are not so plentiful as they were a few weeks ago. Outdoor valley is gone, but the supply of indoor-grown stock is good. Bedding plants are about sold out, but the demand continues good. Business was never better in this line than it is this spring.

Propagating is well along, and most of the stock that goes into the field is already out. There is little change from last season in the quantity planted, except that there is a larger proportion of the better quality roses and carnations. Dahlias will go into the field this coming week.

Various Notes.

Mr. Lewis, who has been so active in the interests of the florists of the city and state during the last winter, is advocating the celebration of Memorial day here. He is doing good work in the daily press, and if the effort were well seconded by the trade, there is no reason why this day might not be put on the calendar here. Mr. Lewis deserves great credit for getting the Mothers' day bill through the legislature and securing a repeal of the state florists' tax of $30 per year, in so far as it applies to agents who handle flowers and plants on commission. As most of our florists have agents in the towns nearby where there are no growers, this relieved them of a heavy burden.

McIntyre Bros. have been showing a model cottage and lawn planted with bedding plants in their window for the last fortnight or so. As the season has advanced, they last week placed palms on the lawn. These suggestions are practical to the public.

Geny Bros. report that they are sold out of practically every kind of bedding plant and that they have never had a better trade in this line. They have received a line of the best preserved wreath material from Germany that I have seen for many a day. Though it is somewhat out of season, they are selling it readily.

J. F. Corbett is shipping a great deal of bedding stock to the north at present. He has cleaned up all of his early stock in the home field and is rapidly doing the same with the later stock, grown for northern trade.

Lem Savage is to be numbered with the smaller Nashville growers in the future, I understand.

The Joy Floral Co. has had an enormous sale of hanging baskets this season, averaging better prices than ever before. They plant their baskets for next year in June or July and hang them in the peak of the fern houses.

They certainly are winners when the time comes to offer them. They are adding tomatoes and potatoes as side lines to help over the dull summer season.

Haury & Sons have cleaned up closely this spring on bedding plants and have perhaps the smallest stock of ferns they have had for a long time.

The Mt. Olivet Greenhouses have done a more general business this season than usual, selling much stock that was not for use in the cemetery at all. The hanging baskets and porch boxes they sent out were particularly good.

Interior of one of the three big iron frame greenhouses 75x450 feet, erected by Dunbar & Hopkins last year. Every one is Skinner System equipped.

Dunbar & Hopkins say the Skinner System Makes Possible the Use of from 5 to 15% more Growing Space in their Greenhouse.

OVER and over again, we hear of wonderful crop increases with the use of the Skinner System; but no one before has told us that it increases the greenhouse growing space.

Here is how Mr. Dunbar explains it in one of his letters:—

"When the Skinner System of Irrigation was first presented to us we recognized its possibilities, tried out a short line, and suggested improvements. Today, the Skinner Irrigation System is a part of the outfit of every up-to-date vegetable grower, either outside or under glass. Reported areas of fifty acres or more under this system are common, and the modern vegetable greenhouse, on account of this method of watering, has discarded all paths, thereby adding 5 to 15% to their growing area. The Skinner System has come to stay and will help to spell Success for many of its users."

When a concern of the size and importance of Dunbar & Hopkins makes a statement like this, it carries a tremendous conviction with it.

Out of 500 letters like this received last year, we have selected eight and put them in a little booklet.

Each letter has a vital bearing on some particular phase of growing and how the Skinner System was helpful in both increasing the crop and improving the quality. Send for this booklet. You will find it full of helpful hints.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

the McLellan Co., attributes the vogue of this rose to its excellent keeping quality, which gives it great favor among the country people. He says a lot of the old Killarneys are being thrown out, though some Queen and a good many Brilliant are being kept, and he considers the white the best of all the Killarneys in this territory. Hadley, also, he says, has done well.

The Gill Nursery Co. is making the largest cut it has yet had of Irish Elegance roses, which are especially handsome this year, and all that appear are eagerly taken by a few leading retailers. The Gill rose plot at the exposition is blooming finely now.

Paul Grallert, of Alameda county, who took a special award last week for oriental poppies, which are large and extra fine in coloring, has not a large supply, but some beautiful displays of them are being made at one or two downtown stores.

The many friends of Alfred Hammersmith, designer for Joseph's, are extending sympathy on account of the death of his wife this week. Mr. Hammersmith is an old-time florist and is well known in the city.

"Charlie" Abraham, proprietor of the Western Nursery, at Greenwich and Franklin street, reports business good. Mr. Abraham is keeping pretty busy at present and regrets that he has not more time for "puttering around," as he puts it, with experimental work.

The Hogan-Kooyman Co. did a large shipping business in calla and freesia bulbs last summer and expects to repeat it this season.

D. Gruettner & Son, of Vallejo, Cal., will soon be located in a new building, work on which started this month.

Lavinia Priest, of Berkeley, Cal., is offering her business for sale.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club was well attended. The discussion for the evening was opened by Albert M. Herr, who read a brief paper on "The Newer Bedding Plants." In geraniums, it was generally conceded that Ricard, Nutt and Poitevine are the most in demand. Other varieties well spoken of were Viaud, Oberle, Jaulin, Montmort and Buchner. J. P. Siebold spoke on the value of the new American Beauty geranium, and Rudolph Nagel had a warm word for the beautiful red, Scarlet Bedder.

H. D. Rohrer exhibited Paul Crampel, the single scarlet, which is the principal variety used in the parks of London, England. Pink Beauty gladioli were also shown by him.

President B. F. Barr appointed Elmer J. Weaver, H. K. Rohrer and Frank L. Kohr to arrange for the annual picnic, to be held about the middle of July.

The Florists' Club will hold a dahlia show in connection with the Lancaster county agricultural fair, during the first week in October. Prizes for the exhibits of amateurs will be awarded by the fair association. A committee, with Albert M. Herr as chairman, was appointed, which is a sufficient guarantee that the exhibition will be first-class.

Maurice J. Brinton, of Christiana, Pa., spoke on the losses in a season resulting from the careless handling of express shipments by the employees of the different companies. The secretary was instructed to communicate with John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., concerning the action to be taken by the club.

H. S. Hostetter, of Manheim, Pa., was elected to membership. The next meeting will be held June 17, at which Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, will read a paper on "Summer Treatment of Carnations."

Various Notes.

Amos N. Rohrer, of Strasburg, and Jacob H. Weaver, of Witmer, are cutting sweet peas of exceptional quality from outdoor stock.

Ira Landis, B. F. Barr, H. D. Rohrer and A. F. Strickler are cutting fine peonies in quantity. H. K. R.

Members of the trade throughout the state have been invited to attend a meeting in Milwaukee during state fair week to form an association. The Milwaukee Club's annual picnic will be held at Keipper's park, August 1.

PLEASE MENTION THE REVIEW WHEN WRITING ANY OF THESE ADVERTISERS

A 5 TO 0 SHOT "Cypress Wins in a Canter"

As a straw to show how the wind blows, a recent issue of The Florists' Review carried advertisements from the following greenhouse contractors and material men, all of whom recommend CYPRESS in large, black, healthy display type:

JOHN C. MONINGER CO., Chicago, users of Cypress ("and no substitutes.") ALL CYPRESS.
STOKES BROTHERS CO. (Inc.), Philadelphia—specialize in CYPRESS Bench Boards.
LOCKLAND LUMBER CO., Lockland, Ohio, shout for "Spot Clear CYPRESS." SCHNUTE-HOLTMANN CO., Evansville, Ind., announce "Clear Cypress."
ADAM SCHILLO LUMBER CO., Chicago, specialize in "PECKY CYPRESS."

The A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., Neponset, Boston, Mass., while not advertising in this paper, is strong on CYPRESS for sash bars and Hot Bed Sash, with "Pecky" cypress bench lumber.

Now the joke in this is: No dealer in a "substitute" for CYPRESS mentioned his "cheaper" article. Those who use clear, heart CYPRESS seem to be PROUD OF IT. They are willing to "go before the country" on the standard that all experience in greenhouse construction has set—clear, heart CYPRESS, "and nothing but."

THERE'S AN ARGUMENT IN THIS SO PLAIN WE DON'T HAVE TO TELL IT.

There's Profit for You in the Facts—So Plain You're Bound to Go After It.

How about our free booklets in the CYPRESS POCKET LIBRARY? They're attractive—and chock full of greenhouse "hoss-sense." Vol. 1 is the Government Report on the "wood eternal"; Vol. 3 has the last word on GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION; Vol. 20, "Cypress for All Farm Needs"—it's new; Vol. 36 is the new and interesting book on Home Carpentry; Vol. 37 is the big "Silo Book"—a dandy treatise of the Silo question. A postal will bring you one or a dozen—they're free, absolutely. Write us a letter just for luck and good-fellowship—and as a good business move.

Why Metropolitan Construction was used by the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J.

Here is the story:

Every grower knows to what test the Government and State experiment stations put their greenhouses. The construction and heating system must be far above the ordinary in order to produce the desired results. The greenhouse on the extreme left was not built by us, but when a new one was wanted we were awarded the contract. This greenhouse (the one in the center) was constructed of the Metropolitan patented iron wall construction. Two years later they needed a third house, and would have none but our construction—that's the one to the right.

Here is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, Director of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, has to say about our work:

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

If contemplating the building of a greenhouse, let us submit plans and prices. We go anywhere in the U. S. A.

WAYS OF WEARING WEDDING FLOWERS

Weddings call for more than flowers from the florist, and he should be prepared to meet all demands upon him, particularly those for advice. How the bride should bear her bouquet and the bridesmaids carry their flowers are points on which he is often asked to render fashion's fiat.

NO ONE, except the parson, participates in more weddings than the florist. This is not a charge of polygamy against him, but a statement of fact. He is not always, of course, one of the contracting parties. Solomon was, so far as is known, the only man who was a contracting party at every wedding he attended; that accounts for his record. But though the florist's participation is personally, though not pecuniarily, disinterested, he gains thereby a fund of knowledge that places him in the position of matrimonial mentor during the month of June.

In the month when the jar labeled "becomes a benedict" is so frequently disturbed from its dusty place in the cannery, the florist has a wearying time, not so much of selling flowers as of giving advice. To Nat Goodwin, DeWolf Hopper, et al., one month, connubially considered, is quite like another, but the contracting parties at June weddings are usually committing their "first offense." So the June bride is in need of a coach, and though it would seem that the groom, particularly as a member of a bridal party, should have more to do with such a vehicle than a florist, the latter is it.

Dismounting.

If the reader is not now hors de combat, from the equine allusions just above, he will come down to earth gently. For, when the bridegroom is romantically reviewing the benedictine—put down your glass!—bliss that he fancies awaits him, the florist's practical head is much needed to ensure the success of the ceremony.

One of the problems that are most often carried to the florist for solution is that of the manner of carrying the flowers by the various members of the bridal party. The bride's bouquet, as the adornment of the most important person in the parade, comes first. Most of the difficulty arises from the fact that this feature is purchased by the bridegroom. He is just learning, by premonitory perplexities, the truth of the old song that "when a man's married, his trouble begins."

He goes to the florist with a heroic heart and a plump pocketbook, to make this feature of his day of days something that will do full justice to the occasion. Wise is the florist who points out to him the superiority of quality to size, of merit to show. For he shall win the esteem of the bride.

It is the sad fact that too few florists take this wiser course. Many prefer the easier way, to try to satisfy the bridegroom that he got his money's worth by means of large size and big show. Naturally the heavy bouquet is a burden to the delicate girl who nervously paces the path to the altar. Consequently, one bride holds it bravely in her two hands as if she were a standard-bearer; another slings it over her arm upside down, and still another packs it up under her armpit as if it were a pound of steak from market. Then some younger sister or girl friend, seeing the ludicrous effect, decides to carry only a prayerbook at her wedding, and the florist is the loser.

It is easy to see the correct way from the illustration on this page. The bride, if she has the strength, or the groom has bought the bouquet of a wise florist, carries it gracefully over her left arm. The ribbons are at the front—but, let us hope, not of the fighting variety—and the flowers droop forward. In this position, the bouquet shows to its best advantage, and yet does not hide the beauty of the bride or that of her gown, on which—the latter, that is—she has lavished many hours of preparation.

The Part of Art.

The florist should remember that, while his part of the arrangements may be the most important contribution to the beauty of the wedding scene, the flowers, neither those borne by the bride and maids nor those in the decorations, should be so prominent as to spoil the effect of the whole. The retailer who caters to the best class of trade will tell you, if he has studied the matter, that the high prices he receives are not for his flowers so much as for his art.

The bridesmaids, if they carry bouquets, hold them loosely over the arm in the same fashion as the bride, bearing them on the left and right side alternately. Should they have baskets of one kind or another, they carry them on the same side as the bouquets and as easily and gracefully as possible. It is hard to give instructions as to grace and ease to self-conscious young things, who either smile apologetically or blush resentfully at suggestions and then continue to laugh at the way the bride holds her left foot in the air waiting for the next chord of the wedding march from the faltering fingers of the amateur pianist who acts in lieu of orchestra. But it may be hinted to the basket bearers in a delicate manner that they are neither bringing buckets of water nor carrying censers to the altar.

Shepherds' crooks are a source of amusement to some and of grief to others. These are not to be borne in the way Pat carries his hod, nor yet are they to be handled like the band-leader's baton. They should be grasped just below the flowers on the staff and carried, in the right hand, in front of the body, but without stiffness.

It is to be presumed that the groom and his attendants can wear their boutonnieres without advice and counsel from the florist. It should be noted, however, and with emphasis, that the office of the flower girl is not to carry flowers, but to distribute them. The flowers should be placed loosely in the basket, and the bearer should scatter them here and there as she precedes the bride to the altar or whatever may be her particular destination. Often it happens that the flower girl carries her basket of blooms purely as a piece of ornamentation, and brings it back to the house undisturbed. If she does so, it is because she has not been advised by the florist of the error of her ways. He knows, or after he has read this article will know, better.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

PARCEL POST IN KANSAS.

We were much interested in the comments of G. E. Schulz, of the firm of Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky., on the subject of parcel post in The Review for May 20. This brother is on the right track. Since the law went into effect we have sent by parcel post nearly all the retail packages that have come within the lawful measurements. In fact, our customers instruct us to ship that way. We use the common pasteboard boxes, of the best make, and in most cases do not tie the flowers in the box. Up to date we have had but one complaint, and in that case the box was crushed, but the flowers were in good shape. We have sent flowers by mail the distance of 400 and 500 miles. The largest spray box we have sent by mail is 36x8x5, and the largest design box is 16x16x8. We have not insured a package or lost one.

NOVEL WINDOW POSTERS.

A new idea for the window artist is offered by W. T. March, manager of The Newburys, Inc., Mitchell, S. D. The marked success with which it has met in use at the store of that concern has led him to believe that other florists might benefit by it also. The poster that formed the center of the firm's bride window recently is reproduced on this page, and gives some idea of the general appearance of those that have been displayed in the South Dakota window. Of them, Mr. March writes:

"The originals of these posters are 16x24 inches, and are matted and framed, making a total size of 24x36. They are done in charcoal (crayon conté) on drafting paper by our artist, and then fixed and covered with a light coat of water color, so that the principal parts of the pictures are nearly in their natural colors, although it is impossible to have them absolutely true to life. They do, however, make a mighty attractive looking window, with plants and flowers grouped around them.

"The posters are not all heads, but vary with the occasion. The one used for Memorial day shows a full-length figure of a bugler standing beside a rotting cannon, in front of which is a rough wooden cross, with a woman kneeling by it and placing a wreath of flowers on it. In the foreground is a flower box, showing the trade-mark, "Newburys." The picture is entitled "Taps," and received much attention from the G. A. R. and the W. R. C. here."

SELLING THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

The Price.

A first-class bride's bouquet is expensive, and quite often the retail florist offers it at too low a figure. Since the more expensive bouquet will be chosen by the patron.

It is much easier to lower the price of an article than to raise it. Often the prospective buyer will become suspicious if the price is suddenly advanced, and fancy that the salesman is taking undue advantage of the patron when he tries to get more money for a specified floral arrangement, whereas when the tactful salesman gives his patron an idea of the costliness of some of the finer and more artistic creations, he at once prepares him for the relative values of the various kinds of bunches used for that particular purpose.

The Style.

As styles in garments and hats change frequently, so do styles in brides' bouquets. A few years ago the proper thing in a bride's bouquet was a formal, compact arrangement of Bride roses with a few sprays of valley tucked in symmetrically at points equidistant from the center. But now we are getting away from the stiff, formal arrangement and aim to get a natural and an artistic effect. We do not cut off the stem and foliage of every flower used, nor do we object to having a few flowers in the bunch higher than the rest. If a bud or two find their place in the bunch among the open blooms, or if a few delicate sprays of asparagus fall carelessly here and there from the bunch proper, we are not alarmed for fear we have failed in the successful arrangement of the bride's bouquet, for we are striving for good lines and graceful curves, not symmetry of outline. So let us offer the best first—the most artistic, the choicest, the most expensive. We should educate our patrons to choose the best in preference to the inartistic and the less expensive, with the exception of extreme cases when the prospective buyer can afford but a modest, simple bunch.

Examples.

The loose arm bunch shown herewith, made of cattleyas, gardenias, lilies of the valley and Farleyense fern, is characterized by its richness, simplicity and graceful lines. Its construction is delicate and lacy. Instead of the average person is married but once, he is willing to pay a fair price for the wedding flowers. So when the florist quotes prices, he ought first to quote prices of the larger, choicer arrangements and end by saying that cheaper ones can be made, but that they are much less desirable because of the fewer flowers or inferior materials used in the construction. Invariably the stems of the flowers running into the handle of the bunch, the stems are mounted on wires long enough to permit the gathering together of all of them into a slender, compact handle, which is covered with white satin ribbon. The bunch is not round but elongated, being shaped to fall gracefully over the arm, and curved in its construction to fit the arm. It therefore retains its position without any effort on the part of the bride to hold it in place. Instead of forming an edging to the bunch, maidenhair fern is used sparingly here and there, and the effect is much better.

The illustration on page 14 shows the arm bouquet entirely of lilies of the valley. This also is elongated in construction, with the light and dainty shower arrangement.

The Bride's Corsage.

When the bride wears a traveling gown, a corsage is preferable and more in keeping with the costume. Pale cattleyas and valley make a choice corsage for the bride, and should be arranged so as to be worn or carried, thus making it possible for the bride to carry it during the ceremony if desired and also to wear it on the wedding journey. Gardenias and valley form another charming combination for the bride; this is tied with two-toned green satin ribbon. Bride roses and valley are always good for a bride's corsage. A miniature shower effect of baby ribbon and valley is a pretty costume for this corsage. Great care should be taken, however, not to have the shower too long or too fussy. E. C. A.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—E. Foster Heller announces that there will be a hearing at his office, 1008 Coal Exchange building, Monday, June 7, at 11 a. m., in regard to the petition of the trustee in the matter of Ira G. Marvin, bankrupt, to sell two pieces of land. One is on Main street, Thornhurst, and contains a little over an acre, improved with a dwelling and outbuildings; the other comprises two lots, 70x136 feet, on West Gibson street, Scranton, on which is a greenhouse.

Columbus, O.—May 26 Judge C. M. Rogers appointed Hugh Dugan receiver for the Art Floral Co., in the Keith theater building, under $2,000 bond. The suit for a receiver was filed by the State Bank of Oak Park, which obtained a judgment on a note against the floral company for $614.20 that had not been paid. The Art Floral Co., with $5,000 capital stock, was incorporated in June, 1912, by Thomas F. O'Neil, Samuel Graff, Ben Harmon, Lunar Funston and H. A. Goodwin. Mr. Graff is the manager. He also is the manager of the Art Floral Co., 7 West Monroe street, Chicago, but the two concerns are separate and distinct. At Chicago Mr. Graff has Nate Lewis as his associate.

Greensboro, N. C.—Upon application of C. B. Bogart, Judge C. C. Lyon in Superior court May 21 named W. M. Combs as receiver for the Greensboro Floral Co. The application for receiver followed the execution of a judgment earlier in the day against the company obtained by the Leo Nissen Co., of Philadelphia. Mr. Bogart formerly was owner of the Greensboro

Griffith and J. F. Stutts. It was to protect himself for deferred payments, some of which were past due, that Mr. Bogart filed application for a receiver. The business, it is understood, will be continued under the receivership and it is probable that a reorganization will be perfected.

IRISES, OLD AND NEW.

Some Old Favorites.

When you see a vast field of irises, hundreds of thousands of them in full bloom, each vying with the others to see which can be arrayed in the most gorgeous robes, there is a bewildering fascination that is present nowhere else.

The old favorites are resplendent with bloom. Black Prince, which has held undisputed possession of the name for twenty years, is a marvel of splendor. It is rich purple, with a glistening sheen, and bears great masses of bloom. It is the earliest of the German family.

Next comes Florentina alba, from which is obtained the orris root of commerce, used in the manufacture of delicate toilet powders.

Then comes the stately Mme. Chereau, ivory white, fringed with blue.

Queen of May is pink, and marvelous in its beauty.

We must not forget the fragrance of the iris. Floods of rich perfume float over the fields.

Some Newer Varieties.

Among the newer sorts we note Dorothea, intermediate in the time of blooming, a sweet, open-faced flower. The petals, instead of being upright, droop like those of the Japanese family. This is a charming flower and is in bloom a long time. It flowered in the first part of May this year. In color it is porcelain white, tinged with lilac; the bases of the petals are beautifully veined with purple. This variety is still quite rare and brings a high price in England.

I. macrantha is from Asia Minor and is the largest of all. It is a rich purple, with immense petals, as large as a lady's hand.

Loreley is a fine, large flower. Its standards are light yellow; the falls are ultramarine blue, with a rich border. The petals are dotted and sprinkled in a most charming manner.

Monsignor heads the list for glowing splendor. The standards are rich, satiny violet; the falls are a velvety purple-crimson.

Perfection is tall and kingly and a prolific bloomer. The standards are shaded blue; the falls are velvety, dark violet, with a glistening reflex.

EXPRESS RATES GOING UP?

A hearing was held last week at Washington, before the Interstate Commerce Commission, on the application of the express companies for permission to rearrange the factors making up their rates so as to procure an increase in operating revenue. It is figured that the increase asked for

The express companies request first that the present terminal allowance of 20 cents on each package weighing 100 pounds or less be increased to 25 cents; secondly, they request that the weight allowance, which is now 25 cents, be reduced to 20 cents. A representative of the express companies explained that the first effect will be to increase the charge on all packages 5 cents. The effect of the second change is to take one-twentieth of 1 cent per pound from that 5 cents, so that the addition is gradually cut down until it reaches eighty-five pounds, when there is no increase at all. On fifty-pound packages the increase would be $2\frac{1}{2}$ cents. If the changes proposed by the ex-be increased, if the changes are allowed, the increase on a five-pound package at the \$1 rate amounting to twenty per cent. A news agency report says: "That admission in an ordinary rate case would have caused a lifting of the eyebrows, but in this one the testimony seemed so overwhelming in behalf of the companies that no one paid any attention to it."

S. A. F. REPRESENTED.

At last week's hearing on express rates, before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, Attorney A. Leftwich Sinclair was present, ready to qualify on behalf of the Society of American Florists should the hearing produce any unusual feature that would enable him to take up the matter of the classification on growing plants. It was, however, confined entirely to the matter of the readjustment of the express rate structure and no effort was made to go into the subject of classification. To the representative of The Review, Mr. Sinclair stated that it would be necessary to secure a separate hearing by the commission should it be the desire of the association to push the matter. William F. Gude, the national representative of the organization, who is devoting considerable attention to plant rates, expressed himself as being of the same opinion. C. L. L.

VINES TO COVER WIRE FENCE.

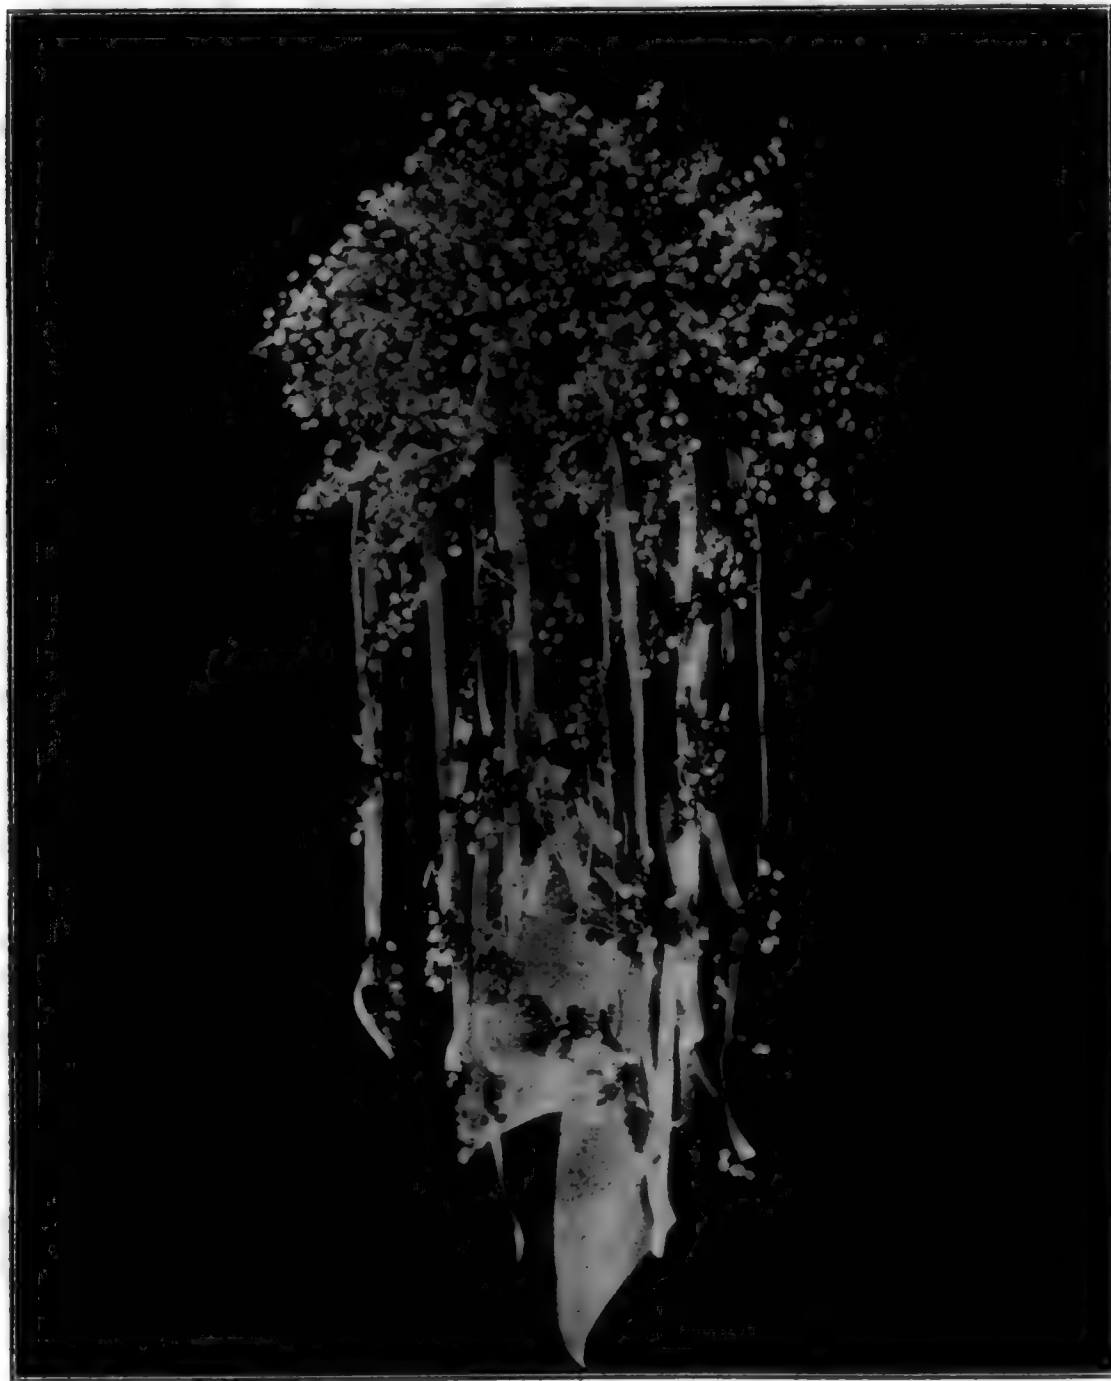

Will you give me information in regard to some suitable vine to be used for covering a wire fence 300 feet long? I wish to get one that would be hardy in this part of the country and which would grow fairly fast. Please state, also, how many plants I shall need.

C. C. N.—Me.

The only evergreen climber which would be suitable for your purpose is Euonymus radicans. This will withstand a temperature of 20 to 25 degrees below zero. If used, plant twenty-four inches apart. In good soil it makes rapid growth. A top-dressing of old manure each fall will assist it. Among flowering deciduous climbers, Clematis paniculata is one of the best and makes rapid growth after the first season. It needs pruning back close to the ground each spring. These need not go closer than four feet apart. Other creepers you could use are Ampelopsis quinquefolia, which is a rapid grower, and Celastrus scandens. Place the ampelopsis three feet apart and the celastrus four feet.

The rambler roses, wistarias, actinidias, bignonias, loniceras and some other good climbers would not prove hardy with you. A number of nursery firms carry the plants named in pots, so that you can plant them any time during the summer, but the earlier they are set out now, the better. C. W.

Joplin, Mo.—The second annual rose show of the Country Club, May 23, was far ahead of that of last year in spite of the rainy weather. Three times as many roses were entered for competition. H. A. Hall made a non-competitive display of Mrs. Russell roses. The jury of awards consisted of William L. Rock, of Kansas City; William P. Stark, of Neosho, and H. A. Hall, of Joplin.

would be $5,062,534, or 3.86 per cent of their operating revenue for the year ending January 31, 1915, which is the first full year under the rates now prescribed by the commission.

During the year the Adams, American, Southern, United States and Wells-Fargo, which do ninety-five per cent of the business and receive ninety-two per cent of the total operating revenues, collected from the public $131,173,669, as compared with $144,854,480 in the preceding twelve months. Notwithstanding they cut their operating expenses from $70,011,535 to $65,835,930, their loss in operating income was $2,380,894.

press companies are permitted to become effective, there will be added to the average package weighing less than 100 pounds, shipped on first-class rates, 3.932 cents and 1.79 cents on the average shipment on second-class rates, which include nearly all shipments, except cut flowers, of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen. The figures are based on the total number of packages carried during the year ending January 31, 1915, divided by the actual transactions on two selected days for each of the companies.

At the hearing an agent for the express companies frankly admitted that the charges on the small packages will

MOTOR DELIVERY FOR THE FLORIST

THAT the great bulk of the hauling and delivery work of the country will in the near future be done by motor trucks, is an assumption that is justified by the rapid increase in the use of this type of vehicle during the last few years. The eternal movement toward better things includes the use of motor vehicles, and they will be regarded as somewhat "antique" whose equipment does not include as an evidence of progress this modern system of delivery. Our particular interest on this occasion, however, centers on the application of this type of vehicle to the florist. What are its advantages?

The speed and ground-covering ability of motor trucks are proving a big advantage to the florist. The swift-moving power vehicle assures a rapid and punctual delivery of the fragile blossoms for weddings, dinners, banquets, funerals, etc.

One florist has been for four years a user of motor trucks. With his truck he takes care of the varied needs of a general delivery of all kinds of flowers, plants, ferns, etc., for a variety of functions. The body of the machine has been built with a special regard to the service it must render. It is built high for plants, ferns, etc., so that they will not be crushed in transit.

The fore-door construction, which is built in and closed, protects the driver from the elements, and makes it possible for the decorator to go along on trips to places where his services may be needed. It is a decided advantage.

Developing Business.

The truck has been a big factor in developing a lucrative line of decorating work at distant points in the suburbs. Assuming, for example, a wedding: The flowers and plants can be packed into the wagon, and the decorator can go along. It is possible to make a twenty-mile journey in a comparatively short time, and the work can be readily handled. The result of thus possessing an equipment capable of going the distances, has brought its return in the shape of many profitable orders.

In one respect the delivery of flowers presents a different problem from almost any other field where the truck is used. Weight is almost entirely absent from the calculation. Not many articles offered for sale carry less avoirdupois than the blooms used at weddings, funerals and banquets and for decorative purposes of all kinds. Yet the motor truck is becoming the vehicle preferred for the florist, and it is not uncommon to see a vehicle of 3,000 pounds capacity making a trip with ten pounds of blooms.

This apparent contradiction is readily explained. The florist uses a motor truck because he is handling a commodity where speed and punctuality are vital considerations. If he cannot get to his customers on time, he might as well go out of business. There is no manner in which a wedding can be postponed until flowers are tardily delivered. Funerals cannot be made to wait, and the decorations for a banquet must be in place before the guests begin to assemble. Moreover, the fragile nature of flowers puts a premium on dispatch in handling them.

A prominent florist puts some of the more important arguments for the motor truck in the florists' business in the following words:

"We have to be ready for a rush at all times. There is no fixed demand in our line, no schedule of business as in the case of so many staples. A man has to have food every day, but he needs flowers only on certain occasions. A wedding, a banquet, a funeral, or several of them taking place in one day, can put a most severe stress on delivery facilities, and in order to cater to customers it is necessary to guarantee an absolutely punctual delivery.

"In this rush work, the motor truck alone can rise to the situation. It is necessary to have the right kind of a car, right equipment and intelligent direction. With this combination, it will be found that the truck cannot fail to give results.

"Trucks can be forced in a rush in a manner that would not be possible to horses. Trips that used to be difficult for the horses are the simplest things in the world for a truck. With a truck the florist is always in position to handle an emergency order and to make prompt delivery, no matter what the volume to be carried or the distance to be covered. Weather conditions matter not. For this reason trucks are really an essential of the system."

This excellent summary is the experience of many prominent florists. Naturally all florists do a large amount of work in the suburbs, for it is in the suburbs that a large part of the city's wealth and social prominence are to be found, and these are the people who give a special regard to the handsome decorations in which flowers play so marked a part.

Covering the Suburbs.

To send a pair of horses to Paoli and back is about the limit that could be expected of a pair of animals in one day. In fact, such a day's work is likely to leave them pretty well fagged out for the next day's toil. Such a trip is easy for a truck. It can make the run to Paoli in the morning and be back in the afternoon in time to run to Jenkintown, or even farther. It is not uncommon for trucks in the service of Philadelphia florists to go to points as far distant as Chester, Wilmington and Trenton.

A Well-Known Truck Operated by Well-Known Florists.

There are many fine residences in the suburbs, not situated along the railroad lines. These are often too remote to be reached by horses and wagon. Here is another application for the truck.

Advertising Value.

A special advantage in the use of trucks is that it is possible to have the vehicles arranged to suit the particular needs of the florists' business. Mention has already been made of the elevation in the body to permit the carrying of tall plants. It is possible to have the bodies built so that they combine elegance and good taste with proper advertising value. Electric lights are installed so as to facilitate the handling of the flowers, so that the driver or his helper will not break or damage the flowers in removing them. Artificial heat in the interior of the vehicle is also feasible, and is a most helpful factor. This is especially valuable in cold weather to protect the more fragile blooms. A device something similar to the foot warmer more or less used in carriages, gives this safeguard against too low a temperature. Thermometers in the truck make it possible to regulate the temperature.

There is an undoubted advertising value in motor trucks for floral delivered only as a means for transporting things from place to place. But if one stops to consider, it is discovered that the motor truck is also an advertising factor of growing importance. The motor truck symbolizes progress; people think of it as one of the signs of the times, one of the things which, along with the wireless telegraphy, airships, skyscrapers, etc., separate the present from the past. When a business firm places its name and the name or illustrations of its products prominently upon its motor trucks, it is an effective advertisement and creates prestige for the advertiser with the thousands who see it daily.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger expresses the opinion that "in a system of good bookkeeping a large portion of the cost of maintaining a motor truck delivery system would be charged to advertising. By this method justice would be rendered in the amount of profitable publicity that accrues from the possession of power vehicles. The motor truck, with the name of its owner prominently displayed, is a moving billboard that advertises a firm in all parts of the territory in which its business is located. A power vehicle is accepted by the public as a demonstration of the ability of the firm to make good its delivery promises, and to reach on the vehicle pass. It is striking. They admire the enterprise it represents. Instinctively they figure that the firm that owns it must be modern, and must be selling high-grade articles.

The character of the medium is one of the important elements in any advertisement. The firm or the product represented by trucks advertises through a medium most potential in prestige-creating value.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the great advantage of motor delivery in this line of business is efficiency. This efficiency, however, is not to be obtained in a haphazard manner. Much forethought and careful deliberation should be given to the selection of motor equipment, and the co-operation of transportation analysts, whose services are extended by most truck companies, should be obtained, so that the proper size and style of equipment will be the result.

Selection of Truck.

There are many important points to be considered in the selection of a motor delivery vehicle. On many points of motor construction, manufacturers dispute and differ widely, and every truck on the market today has various good talking points which may, or may not, appeal to the prospective purchaser. But when all is said and done, the construction which gives the best results in actual operation is the correct one, and all theoretical practice without the test of widely varied service, is of little consequence.

Your selection of a truck should be influenced by four factors: Simplicity of construction, accessibility, economy of operation and service. By simplicity, I mean that it should be of interest to you that your vehicle, going as it will into the hands of unskilled drivers, should be devoid of all unnecessary complications and should have as few parts as is practical. All working parts should be accessible, so that when adjustments and replacements become necessary, the amount of labor consumed in making said replacements and adjustments is by this accessibility reduced to a minimum. The more accessible the machinery and parts of your vehicle, the less the mechanical upkeep will cost.

Economy of operation is also important, and the mileage per gallon of gasoline and oil should be carefully looked into. While it may be true that gasoline does not cost much, and that a gallon per day more or less seems trivial, yet when this is multiplied by approximately 300 working days in the year, its value becomes more apparent. The cost of tires is an item to be strongly considered, and the vehicle selected should be well balanced, with weight so distributed as to give greatest life to the tires. The weight of the vehicle should also be considered, as it is poor economy to select any vehicle whose own weight is excessive for the load it is to carry.

Service is a most important factor to the prospective truck purchaser, and he must needs be assured that the delivery which supplants his horses shall be continuous and uninterrupted. Assurance on this point can only be insured by investigation on the part of the prospective purchaser. He should be sure in the first place that the company whose proposal he is considering is big enough and healthy enough to eries. People like to see a handsome power vehicle in front of their home, and it is nothing uncommon for a florist to get a request to have an order of flowers delivered by his truck rather than a horse and wagon. Moreover, the vehicles carry the name of the florist through the fashionable sections and help to attract public attention to a firm that has the modern equipment to take care of its customers.

The motor truck is commonly considered only as a means for transporting things from place to place. But if one stops to consider, it is discovered that the motor truck is also an advertising factor of growing importance. The motor truck symbolizes progress; people think of it as one of the signs of the times, one of the things which, along with the wireless telegraphy, airships, skyscrapers, etc., separate the present from the past. When a business firm places its name and the name or illustrations of its products prominently upon its motor trucks, it is an effective advertisement and creates prestige for the advertiser with the thousands who see it daily.

Many firms have demonstrated, by actual test, that every time a truck goes into an unexploited territory it produces new customers. People see live up to the promises it makes in this regard. He should ascertain whether a service station of the company is located in or near the town where he proposes to operate his truck, and whether the station is open at all times for his convenience; also whether a complete supply of duplicate parts are kept on hand to meet the demands of all emergencies.

This information can all be secured with little trouble on the part of the purchaser, and the best way of securing it is from the present truck owners, the men who have had the experience and know whereof they speak.

Finally, do not be misled by the lowest price. It is poor economy at all times, but especially so in the matter of motor trucks. Buy the best and keep it. Forget the bugaboo of the automobile world, "trade-in." The late Elbert Hubbard said: "Keep your car. Don't buy a car that was built for trading purposes. Buy a good one and keep her." He further said there are three things you must keep: "Keep your temper, keep your friends, keep your health," and he added a fourth, "Keep your car."

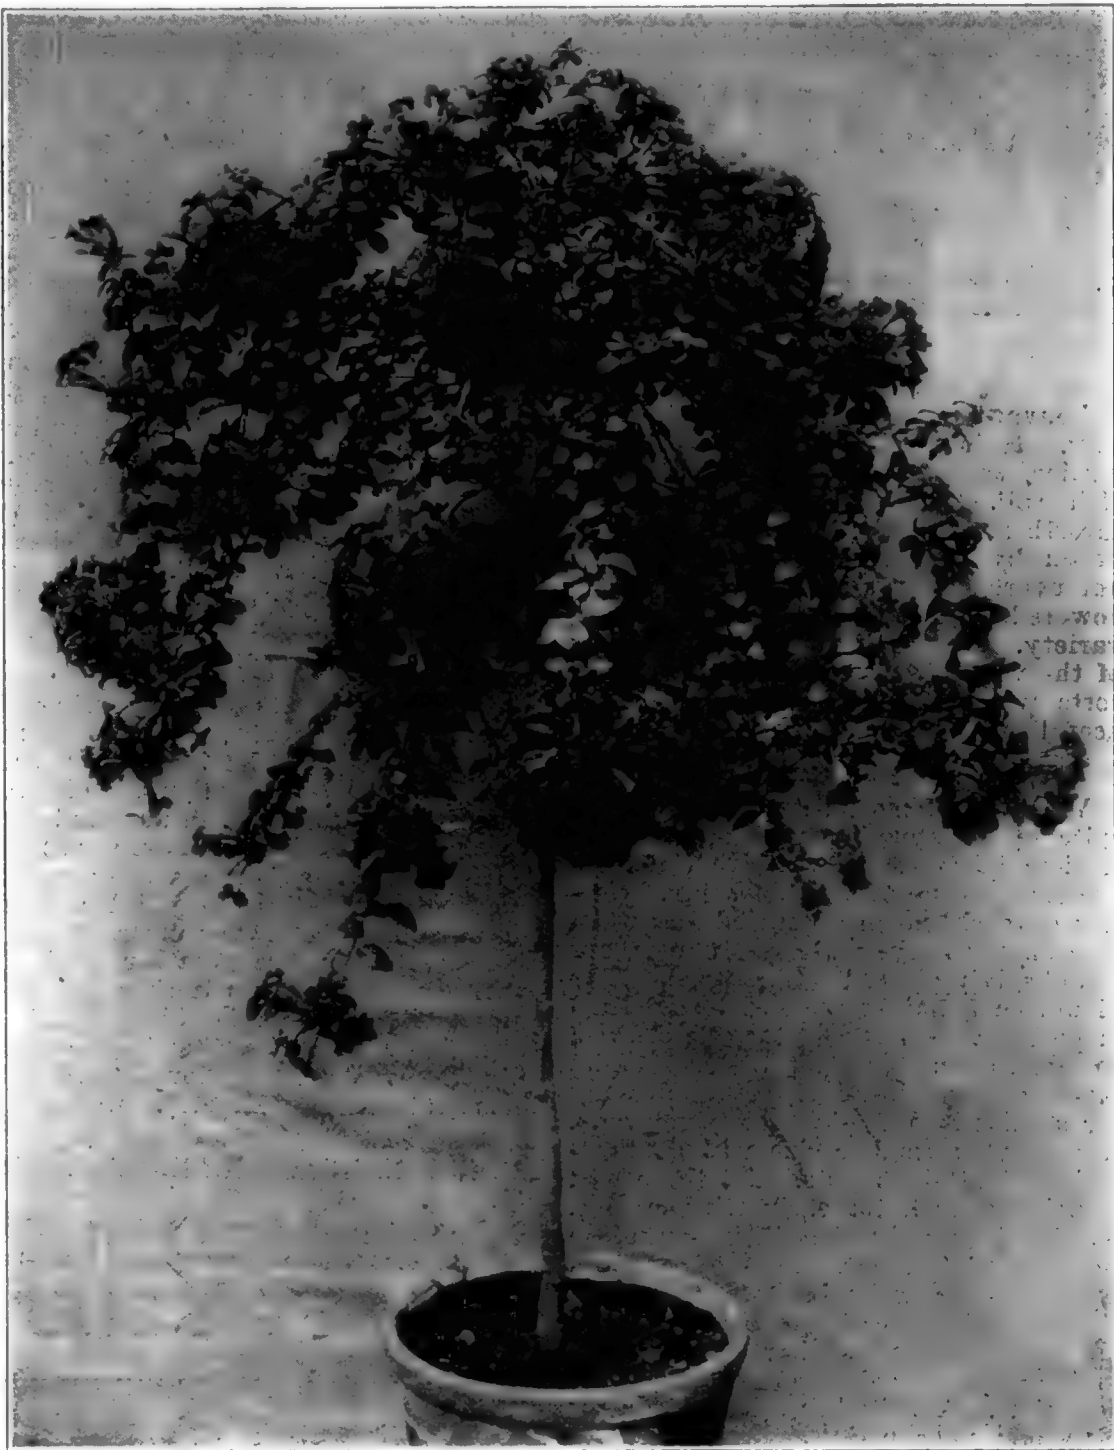

AN OLD FAVORITE AND A NEW.

Streptosolen Jamesonii.

A large number of present-day florists are not acquainted with Streptosolen Jamesonii, which is an old favorite of our greenhouses. It was introduced into England from Colombia as long ago as 1847, and has been cultivated in America for many years. In California it is a common outdoor plant as far north as San Francisco, making a splendid climber as well as a desirable standard or bush specimen. As a greenhouse or conservatory climber, it is splendid. It is not so much seen now as it was a decade or two ago, but the writer has in mind one or two specimens in old greenhouses which make a grand show each February and March, which is the usual flowering time in an ordinary greenhouse.

As a commercial plant this is rarely seen; yet, strange to say, I have had inquiries from more than one florist recently asking where stock could be obtained. I think that as a pot plant it is seen at its best when grown in standard form. The plant has a natural, graceful droop, and the rich orange flowers, which are carried on terminal corymbose panicles, show up beautifully when thus grown. The small evergreen leaves are a rich dark green in color, and I consider a nice standard of this streptosolen a desirable florists' plant and one which would bring a good price.

Propagation from cuttings is easy in winter or early spring. If standards are wanted, let the cuttings, when potted, grow to a height of not less than eighteen inches—twenty-four inches is best—before pinching out the top. Keep the plant securely staked. It will make a nice head in a surprisingly short time. If not sold the second season, the plants can be rested for a few months, pruned back and plunged outdoors within convenient reach of water. If the plants are kept two or three seasons, the stems will be stout enough to hold up the heads without supports. Specimens of this old favorite would be quite telling dotted in a group of plants, and it is safe to say that anyone making a display of them would find a strong demand for the plants. Streptosolen Jamesonii succeeds best under ordinary greenhouse treatment. It can be flowered in January or can be kept back as late as April in a cold house.

Primula Malacoides.

Primula malacoides is undoubtedly the greatest acquisition in greenhouse primulas we have had for many years. It is already eclipsing P. Sinensis in favor, and threatens to give P. obconica a close run as first favorite. That it is the most graceful and decorative of all primulas admits of no question. For table decorations few plants can equal it, and the cut spikes last surprisingly well. It has, furthermore, a pleasing odor, and has not the poisonous properties of P. obconica. The flowers are usually of a delicate lavender, but there is also a white form. Double varieties are now appearing.

P. malacoides is to be had as early as Christmas in good bloom, but, if grown cold, can be had in good condition as late as early April. It is particularly fine in February. A few points to remember in growing P. malacoides are: First, seed should not be sown earlier than from June 15 to July 1. Second, it is best grown in a coldframe until October. Third, it needs a cool house if wanted in the best condition; 40 to 45 degrees at night should not be exceeded. Fourth, when watering, use care not to water the center of the plant; otherwise the thickly crowded leaves will start to decay. Fifth, never spray the plants overhead once they are in the greenhouses.

GOOD TULIPS FOR FORCING.

What are the best half dozen tulips for forcing?
L. M.—N. S.

La Reine, single white, slightly shaded pink early in the season; Yellow Prince, golden yellow, and White Hawk, pure white, are good. Flamingo, a sport from White Hawk, is the best commercial pink tulip, but is still somewhat higher in price than the others named. In doubles, Murillo, of a beautiful pink shade, is easily the most popular of all forcing tulips. An increasingly popular sort is Tea Rose, also called Brimstone Beauty, a sport from Murillo, of a soft saffron yellow color. Couronne d'Or, golden yellow, flushed orange, is another grand double forcing tulip. If you want a single scarlet, try Belle Alliance.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bouvardias.

Bouvardias can go out in the field now. It is not safe to put them out earlier, as they are tender. If given rich soil, they will make an ample growth and be fit to dig up and pot or bench by the middle of August. Do not overlook B. Humboldtii, the large-flowered, sweet-scented, fall-flowering variety. This is far and away the best of the whole family, although the other sorts which naturally flower later are useful for Christmas.

Cyclamens.

With the Memorial day rush over, in spite of an abundance of other work, it should be possible to give the little cyclamens some needed attention. Neglect now will mean a decided loss when it comes to the sale of plants for Thanksgiving and Christmas. The plants must not be allowed to get hard or potbound, nor should they be allowed to crowd one another. Our largest plants are now in 4-inch pots and ready for a shift into 5½-inch or 6-inch pots. A somewhat smaller size will go in 4-inch and 4½-inch pots. All these will make fine stock for early winter sales. Some will probably have flowers before the end of October. Part of a batch have been growing in flats, somewhat thinly, and these are splendid plants. We have doubts whether to put these in 4-inch pots or shift at once to 6-inch half pots. A neighbor tried the latter plan last year and, thanks to careful watering, had splendid success.

The soil for the last potting should consist of two parts fibrous loam, with one part dried cow manure and one part flaky leaf-mold, not too much decayed, with a generous dash of sharp sand and some fine charcoal added. Give good drainage. Be sure the corm of the plant is above the soil. Pot firmly and leave an ample space for water. A greenhouse bench where the plants can be protected from hot sun is the ideal place for them. If the pots can be plunged, just as good plants may be grown here as in coldframes, although the latter always seem a little stockier. Spray the plants each bright day and use a nicotine extract once a week to ward off attacks of mite, thrips and aphids. Keep the house well ventilated and, if possible, use movable shades, so that the plants will not become drawn.

Stevias.

Do not, on any account, in the rush of other duties overlook stevias, which are useful and easily grown winter-flowering plants. If the cuttings are still in the cutting bench, pot them off as soon as rooted and let them get established before planting out in good soil. Early in June is as early as this plant can go out in the colder states and quite a few growers who set plants out about May 20 this year had all their stock frozen, but in such cases it is not yet too late to propagate and get nice plants. Pot-grown plants require more labor, but are better in some respects than outdoor-grown plants. Give them a rich soil, full sun and plenty of water and they are bound to grow, and for bouquet work, wreaths or mixed boxes of flowers, what can take the place of stevia from Thanksgiving to February? Prepare a good sized batch, house before any frost can touch them and grow them cool.

Winter-flowering Geraniums.

Geranium plants for flowering for Thanksgiving or Christmas should now be ready for a shift into 3-inch or 4-inch pots. Keep them under glass, as they will grow better there and keep much cleaner. I have never seen any advantage in growing winter geraniums outdoors. They are liable to diseased foliage in late summer, when we get damp and hot weather, and this will not trouble them if they are under glass. Particularly is this true of the fine single varieties, the doubles seeming to be somewhat tougher in their constitution. Coldframes, where the plants can have a covering of glass during heavy rains, are also suitable for the culture of geraniums for winter blooming.

PLANT IMPORTS COMING.

With all the rush of freight that has given the Holland-America line the best year in its history, good care is being taken of plant shipments out of Rotterdam. The steamer that reached New York May 28 had a considerable quantity of stock and the cargo was of special interest because it was the first boat since May 1 that brought Belgian stock. The manifest showed the following trade items:

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

For Winter Blooming.

The time is at hand, in the south, for planting roses intended for winter blooming. The young plants set out now will make a rapid growth if properly cared for. A plentiful circulation of air is one of the main requirements. Remove all the side glass if the houses have no side ventilators, and leave it out until firing is started. This will give the plants a hardiness and vigor that will set mildew at defiance. The top ventilators and the doors should also be opened wide, and should remain so day and night, except during severe storms.

Probably the most important point in their summer culture is the keeping of a moist atmosphere in the houses. In addition to the regular morning syringing, the plants should be sprayed a few times daily and the walks should be well dampened down. It is a good plan to do all necessary watering of the beds in the late afternoon.

The sun has an extremely withering effect immediately after a thunder storm, particularly in the gulf states. Hence, after every such storm, a good spraying in the houses is necessary, to prevent burning of the young growths. Coming out with all his power immediately after a storm, the sun catches the roots inactive, and absorbs the moisture in the foliage before the roots resume their normal function, so a quick spraying is absolutely necessary.

For Summer Blooming.

Of all the varieties used for summer blooming in the south, the Cochetts, pink and white, stand out preëminently in results and satisfaction, yet are not grown nearly so extensively as they deserve to be. These varieties make extraordinary growth, with stems and foliage all that can be desired, while the blooms are of a size and substance to equal the best winter quality of other varieties. Before being cut, the flowers should be more than half developed, to insure their opening perfectly. In this state they can be shipped long distances and kept salable a long time.

These summer blooms do not require much of a house, merely a clear roof of some sort to shelter them from the elements. No sides or ends are needed. The plants do best set out in the solid ground, two feet apart, and will soon take up all this room. Their only enemy is thrips, which come in droves during early spring. This pest generally gets the bulk of the crop of spring roses grown outdoors. Close application of nicotine extract is the most effective remedy.

During the winter months the plants can be left to take care of themselves. In February or March, according to location, the plants can be cut back, mulched and started again on their summer journey. These varieties do better when allowed to grow naturally, without any attempt at tying up. L.

NEPHROLEPIS.

If you have a good stock of nephrolepis, especially the good old Boston fern, in small pots, now is a good time to plant them out in a bench from which you have cleared Memorial day crops. They are not fussy as to soil and the addition of a little well decayed manure before planting will help them. Allow ten to twelve inches each way between the plants. The plants can be grown in full sunshine, but come pale in color if long under this culture, and some shade, therefore, is an advantage. If kept in the bench until early September they will be of sufficient size for 5-inch or 6-inch pots or pans, in some cases even larger, and there is rarely any oversupply of Boston ferns.

ADIANTUMS.

Adiantums are now in active growth and should have good heat and abundance of moisture, both at the root and in the atmosphere. They are easily injured by sun and, therefore, must be shaded, but not too heavily. As the pots become well filled with roots, give them weak doses of cow manure water once a week. The idea that maidenhair ferns do not like manure water is the sheerest nonsense. Coldframes where the plants have a fair amount of head room are admirable for growing ferns of all kinds through the summer. If the pots are plunged in coal ashes there is less danger of snails attacking them than where leaves are used, but plunged they should be for best results.

A GOOD OLD FERN.

I enclose a leaf of a fern which I have grown for fifty years under the name of Polystichum angulare. I believe it is a native of Devonshire, England. I have never seen it catalogued here, though it is an excellent fern.

L. M.—N. S.

You have the correct name. Or, more specifically, the variety is Polystichum angulare proliferum, a good old fern, which brings up many pleasant memories of happy boyhood days. C. W.

ADIANTUM CALIFORNIA.

A writer in a British trade paper calls attention to "an American novelty likely to be of service to the commercial grower; I refer to Adiantum California, which is rapidly gaining favor in the States for cut purposes. It originated in California some few years ago and has remained in the hands of two growers, who have never been able to meet the demand for the cut fronds. The American fancy favors larger fronds than cuneatum usually produces, although the latter is still a favorite owing to its cheerful green color, compared with such bronzy sorts as Croweanum. A. California scores over the last named by having the same greenness as cuneatum, while its spores, even on mature fronds, are always green. It is a stronger grower than cuneatum and will yield a larger crop under the same conditions."

WILD FERN FROM TEXAS.

I am sending you by parcel post a specimen of wild fern that grows profusely in this part of Texas and resists climatic and seasonal conditions that would annihilate any other fern I know of. I should be glad to have you classify it for me. The specimen submitted is seared by the winter frosts, and it does not look attractive. At first sign of open weather in spring it puts up new fronds, as you see this has already, and the old fronds assume a wholesome green. It is easy to transplant and thrives under culture. I have noticed other species of wild fern in this section, resembling the pteris varieties and the adiantum.

J. B. E.—Tex.

The fern in question is Cheilanthes tomentosa, a pretty species and one that is found wild in various parts of the southwest section of the United States. It is well worth cultivation, and, in fact, has been cultivated to some extent.

W. H. T.

ADIANTUM FRONDS DISCOLORED.

I am sending you a maidenhair fern. Can you tell me, from the looks of this specimen, what is the matter with my plants?

A. F.—Cal.

Without some further data as to the conditions under which the adiantums are growing, it is rather a difficult matter to decide just what the trouble in this case is. The indications are in favor of the theory that the plants in question have been too wet overhead, and too cold at night, as such a discoloration of the fronds would be likely to result from such conditions.

New Haven, Conn.—The Cowan-Heller Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000.

Southbridge, Mass.—The T. Jerome Harrington greenhouses are now being conducted by D. J. Kerrigan, formerly employed on the Wells estate. Mr. Kerrigan expects to do landscape gardening and care for estates in addition to carrying on the business in cut flowers and plants.

Biddeford, Me.—T. W. A. Smith is suffering from a strained side and sundry other minor injuries as a result of being thrown from his carriage when it was hit by an automobile recently. His 2½-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, was thrown out on to the pavement, but luckily escaped unhurt.

Newburyport, Mass.—Joseph J. Comley, who recently purchased the True place near Amesbury, is contemplating extensive improvements, including a large greenhouse and the laying out of flower beds. His plans are held up on account of the lack of water, and he is trying to have the Amesbury main that ends about 1,800 feet from his place extended to the property.

Great Barrington, Conn.—The Lord & Burnham Co. has received the contract for $200,000 worth of greenhouses on the estate of William Hall Walker. The plans call for two orchid houses, each 25x30; one palm house, 36x61; a fern house, 18x26; an early grapery, 25x60; a late grapery, 25x50; an orangery, 30x65; two melon houses, 18x47; an early peach house, 25x42, and a late peach house, 25x42. There are already on the estate four greenhouses, comprising about 2,500 feet of glass.

Hartford, Conn.—A permit to erect a greenhouse and boiler house on South street has been issued to John Coombs.

Greens Farms, Conn.—Edward J. Taylor is completing a range of two houses of iron-frame construction. This replaces the old ones, originally built twenty years ago.

Hartford, Conn.—Robert F. Boehner has opened a store at 44 Park street, corner of John street. Mr. Boehner was in the florists' business for fourteen years in New York. He formerly resided at Hockanum, Conn., where he owns a large tobacco farm.

Nashua, N. H.—Although the business and property of A. Gaedeke & Co. have been sold to Fred D. Sperry, of Reading, Mass., there will be no change in the management. August Gaedeke will continue to give the business his personal direction. Mr. Gaedeke has been in the florists' business in Nashua for thirty years. The company was organized fifteen years ago and included Mr. Gaedeke, his brother, Rudolph, and E. Ray Shaw. Mr. Shaw was not connected with the operation of the concern; Rudolph Gaedeke will continue with his brother. The real estate involved in the sale consisted of fifty-two feet of frontage on Concord street, extending through to Granite street, and comprised 50,000 square feet. There is an office and a range of several houses on the land. The purchaser was head of a wholesale and retail house-furnishing concern of Boston until his retirement from active business. In addition to his financial interest in the Boston concern, he owns a large department store in Manchester and one in Claremont, N. H.

CARNATIONS CARRIED OVER.

I should like to find out with what results carnations are carried over for a second year. How should they be treated in the benches from the start of the drying off until they are ready to begin growing again? When should the process begin in order that they may be brought into crop by or before Christmas? Please answer these questions in full, so there will be nothing left undone. O. W. F., Utah.

Under proper conditions, carnations can be carried over a second year with excellent success, but unless the conditions are favorable the chances of failure are many. We have here a batch of 500 Enchantress Supreme, carried over from last season, and they have given us several more blooms per plant than the rest of the bench, which is planted with young stock of the same variety. We also have a bench of Pink Delight carried over from last year, from which the results have not been quite as good as we should expect from young stock. Two years ago we had a bench of this same variety, carried over, that excited the wonder of everyone who saw it. We cite these instances merely to show that, even with the best of care, the chances are uncertain.

Our best success has been with plants that were worked for cuttings either all or part of the first season. In such cases the plants are cut back long before the hot spring or summer weather has set in. In fact, the cutting back is so gradual that the plant does not undergo a severe check, as it must when allowed to bloom until spring and then cut back hard. The eyes on the lower part of the plant have also had more light and are in better condition to break than when a large top growth has been made.

The Enchantress Supreme already mentioned were allowed to come into bloom in the fall and were allowed to make the midwinter crop. From early in December on, we kept taking off what young shoots or breaks were suitable for cuttings and, as a result, we had practically a cut-back plant by the latter part of March, when every bud had bloomed out. After we took off the last batch of cuttings, we cleaned the plants of all dead foliage and kept the shoots headed back with the idea of producing a bushy growth. A good mulch supplied sufficient food during the summer and helped to keep the roots cool. By the middle of August we were cutting fine flowers on 15-inch stems and there was as large a crop as could be desired. They are still doing well at this writing.

This method is not practical for places that are run principally for cut blooms and where only enough cuttings are propagated to replant the benches each year. For this reason, and until a better method is found for handling the plants through the summer than is practiced now, I do not consider the carrying-over proposition a good one for the average grower.

Few growers would care to cut back any considerable part of their blooming plants as early as March or early April in order to restart them for the next season, and that is just what would have to be done to make success reasonably sure. To expect carnation plants to withstand such a check at a time when their vitality is already being sapped by the excessive heat is beyond good reason. To allow them to continue growing without any cutting back is not practical. The rank spring growth causes the space to become crowded, excluding both light and air from the lower part of the plants and thus causing decaying foliage from the syringing necessary to keep down red spider.

Pink Delight seems to be the one variety that can be carried over without being cut back early in the spring. One reason for this is that it carries its lower foliage through the season better than most varieties. Consequently the lower eyes remain plumper, and this is also helped along by the fact that the leaves are narrow and the growth more open, allowing a better circulation of air. We have cut it back, not too hard, in June and had it break finely, when the summer was not too intensely hot, and right there you have the whole thing in a nutshell. The intense summer heat is the main thing you have to reckon with. In sections that are free from this summer heat, it should be quite possible to carry over with splendid success. A. F. J. B.

LEFT-OVER SPIRÆAS.

Please advise me what to do with some spiræas that were not sold. I have both Japonica and Alexandra. Can I grow them outside and lift them in the fall for next winter? Can they be divided before being set out?

S. M.—Kan.

The spiræas would not force satisfactorily next season, but you can divide them, plant them outdoors in good soil and grow them a couple of seasons. Then you will have fine clumps for forcing, superior to any you can buy of European importation. They will, of course, flower next season outdoors and the cut flowers may come in useful. Plant them out on somewhat low ground, which does not dry out badly in summer, in order to get best results.

Monongahela, Pa.—James A. Keeney has opened a store in the Margaret apartments, opposite the entrance to the river bridge, where he is displaying a full line of cut flowers and potted plants.

BENCHING AND DISBUDDING.

I have several hundred chrysanthemums from three to five inches high, in flats. When should I bench them? Should they be pinched back? The varieties are Polly Rose, Yellow Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon and Chrysolora. Please give cultural directions for the summer. How far apart should the plants be set in the bench? What is the difference between a crown bud and a terminal? E. A. C.—Ala.

Pot singly in 3-inch pots and bench about the end of May. Allow the plants 8x10 inches. If you want good-sized flowers, grow to a single stem. If those of more moderate size are preferred, pinch back and carry two or even three blooms to a plant. Two flowers per plant would give you those of a useful size. Read the chrysanthemum department of The Review for cultural directions from time to time. Staking, tying and disbudding all require attention, while insect pests must be kept in check by spraying or fumigating.

A crown bud is the one first formed by a chrysanthemum plant. No other buds are produced with it. Below it will be found lateral growths. These, if permitted to grow, will eventually produce what are called terminal buds. These come in clusters and the largest or central bud should be retained; all the others should be removed. The last buds produced by chrysanthemums are called terminals. C. W.

HARDY FRENCH MUMS.

Will you kindly tell us something about the summer culture of the hardy French chrysanthemums? Many of them set bud so early that it would seem they would be injured by lifting in the fall, and it would seem that they would be attacked by spider if they were in a coldframe. T. N.—S. Dak.

The culture of the hardy French mums, or what are known as the early-flowering type of mums, is quite simple. It will not hurt to lift the plants if the buds are set, provided the plants are first thoroughly watered and are lifted carefully. In fact, we have lifted plants in full bloom in the fall and potted them without any bad results. If you have room, they can, of course, be grown in pots, but this method enhances the cost considerably, since they require so much closer attention. They will not be attacked by spider if syringed at frequent intervals. Planted in the field and left to grow along naturally, they make beautiful bushes without pinching and, as before stated, with ordinary care will lift in perfect condition. C. H. Totty.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market certainly felt the uplift of Memorial day in New York. There was a general demand on Saturday, May 29, which left the market about as completely bare as it has been at any week end this year. The demand for out-of-town shipments was encouraging, the supply of carnations was light and prices were in advance of last season. The local demand was fully up to expectations. Everything of quality was sold out before noon Sunday, May 30.

The cold weather of last week broke all records for May; at some places not many miles from New York, the temperature fell below freezing.

Roses are increasing in supply and improving in quality. There are few good American Beauties. The best touched $25 per hundred Saturday, May 29. Most of the flowers, however, are far below this level. The best Hadley sell higher than Beauties, and Mrs. Russell, Sunburst and Double Pink Killarney grow rapidly in favor.

White carnations sold last week at $4 to $5 per hundred, and nothing worth while in any color sold below $3. Saturday prices were firm, and the supply was limited. There will be plenty before another week passes, and at lower figures.

Orchids are at their best, and their continued low price is a surprise. Even the best Cattleya gigas did not go above $35 per hundred. Mossiae are down to $10 and $15. The supply is heavy, and many of the wholesale stores now receive them daily.

White peonies keep the price of lilies down, or they would not be selling at from $5 per hundred down, for the supply is much lower than anticipated. Many thousands of peonies have been sold in the last ten days. Valley is also in better demand and higher in price, notwithstanding the growing quantity of outdoor stock. One dollar per dozen continues top for the best gardenias and for callas also. There is a great abundance of gladioli, iris, sweet peas and pansies. The supply of lilac is about over. Now come the rambler roses and the peony flood.

Various Notes.

There have been some notable funerals and memorial services during the last week, at which a wealth of flowers was used, especially at the obsequies of Charles Frohman, Mrs. Fish, Jacob Rupert and Alfred Vanderbilt. Many of the leading florists of New York received orders by telegraph from Europe for the Frohman services. The designs were largely wreaths of orchids and roses.

The New York Florists' Supply Co. is rebuilding its premises at 103 West Twenty-eighth street, and will devote the entire four stories and basement to florists' supplies. There will be a complete refrigerating plant and every modern convenience. The entire structure will be completed in time for the fall trade.

C. C. Trepel's chain of Broadway stores already number five and, including the department and Brooklyn stores, total ten. Adam Trepel, as the purchasing agent, with headquarters on West Twenty-eighth street, is expected to save thousands of dollars yearly. The Broadway establishments are all corner

The continued cool weather has added wonderfully to the seed stores' sales, and May closed with little diminution in the demand.

Four New York retail florists are already at Newport, the summer season opening June 1. Because of the deaths of Alfred Vanderbilt and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, a brilliant season is not anticipated.

Sunday closing for all retail florists' stores is being considered by the Retailers' Association. Young & Nugent already have announced their intention to close.

Frank Manker, one of Brooklyn's oldest growers, with headquarters on Fort Hamilton avenue, has taken his sons, Philip and Frank, into partnership.

The stork brought a son May 20 to Frank Supplee, manager of Thomas Young's retail store, Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Memorial day was a record-breaker, both in weather and volume of business done. It was partly cloudy, and, as we had been having rain every day for thirteen days, it was remarkable that it did not rain. The flowers put on the graves did not wilt much and the following day were in good condition. Thousands of people went to the cemeteries and placed flowers on their lots. There was an immense number of bouquets sold that were made up of common garden flowers, roses, carnations and snapdragons. There was a decided shortage of roses and carnations.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had a big lot of carnations and roses and could have used more.

The William Blackman Floral Co. had all it could do. It had a big supply of stock of all kinds.

J. C. Elsperrmann had an excellent day and disposed of lots of stock.

Miss Nellie Goodge had a fine lot of snapdragons and outdoor stock. She had six or eight helpers and all hands were kept busy waiting on trade and making bouquets.

Karl Zeidler, on the car line to Locust Hill cemetery, gets his share of the trade. He is doing a big plant business.

Louis Fritsch was quite busy.

Theodore Kuebler sells quantities of stock in the city market. He has a fine lot of geraniums. The shipping trade with him is fine.

Royston & Fenton sold all the roses they had and could have sold many more. They have added snapdragons to their list of plants for the trade.

A BLUE GARDEN.

Unusual and Artistic.

Things out of the ordinary, although artistic, seem to be much in demand in the way of laying out gardens, according to the correspondence we have received of late from all directions, and we felt that nothing would produce a better effect than to have such matters discussed by the much read paper, The Review. This is written, therefore, in the hope that many others may take part in the discussion, by giving their opinions on how to beautify the country, and the beautification will certainly be realized if everybody does his part on his own grounds.

We, as bulb growers, would say: Have you ever seen a blue garden? It is the latest floral curiosity. Buy bulbs throwing blue flowers, make your garden, yard or room beautiful and be happy!

Let this article help you to realize your ideal of beauty and comfort in or around your residence. Blue is the color of mystery. In the universe we know several adjuncts which we call blue and in which are concealed many secrets and mysteries; for instance, "the blue deep," or ocean, and "the blue sky," containing so many things that are wonderful or interesting. It is probably for that reason that Maeterlinck, the celebrated Belgian dramatist, uses blue constantly in his fascinating stage settings, and it is said to be owing to Maeterlinck's influence that the blue garden has become the loveliest corner of many a famous European or American country estate.

A garden made up entirely of blue flowers, with a white or light colored residence in the center or in the background, produces a beautiful aspect.

Not a Rich Man's Monopoly.

The blue garden itself need not remain a hobby of the rich only, as the outlay for the bulbs, plants, tools, etc., is not extremely great, but the successful arrangement of such a garden requires some exact knowledge of bulbs, roots and plants which will produce blossoms of a really blue color. A number of such varieties we mention below, and those who would like to lay out a blue garden should buy a quantity of bulbs, roots and plants and set them out at the right time, so that a good root-growth will be made before flower stems begin to shoot up. When freezing weather comes on, the planted area should be protected with a covering of straw or leaves. Hyacinths and gladioli must be entirely protected from frost, while other bulbs or roots only want a little protection, to prevent the frost and wind from taking a direct hold of the ground. The covering should be taken off when the bulbs have thrown up shoots about two inches long, or earlier if heavy frosts are over.

Lovers of flowers, as we all ought to be, who are not in possession of a garden or back yard, may buy a small quantity of bulbs and roots to be grown in the house for winter flowering, in order to give the conservatory or the room a cheerful aspect.

Buy good sized bulbs. As a rule, the larger the bulbs the better the results,

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't asleep at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of ——. Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p.m., not a.m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

in the number or strength of the flowers. The bulbs must be heavy for their size, solid and well ripened.

Bulbs in general are sensitive to stagnant water, so put one or two inches of sand under each bulb if your ground is not sandy. Do not plant in rows or wide apart, lest you lose the beauty of the flowers.

Some Blue-Flowered Varieties.

Hyacinths—The fragrance of a bed or a windowful would delight the soul of even an oriental. There is a wide range of these exquisite blossoming bulbs, in navy-blue, sky-blue, porcelain, indigo, light and dark blue and violet, in both single and double varieties, viz.: Grand Lilas, Grand Maitre, Johan, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, Regulus, Schotel, Bloksberg, Charles Dickens, Lord Raglan and Othello. Plant hyacinths about three to four inches deep and four to five inches apart.

Tulips—In the blue and violet shades, among the best in early singles are Couleur Cardinal, La Remarquable, Moliere, Potter, President Lincoln, Van der Neer and Wouwerman; in doubles, Lac van Haarlem, Blanc Borde, Blue Flag and Rhinoceros. In the Darwin or single late-flowering tulips we can most highly recommend in the blue shades Dream, Faust, Kate Greenaway, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Nora Ware, Nymph, Rev. Ewbank, Violet Queen and William Copeland.

Crocuses come next, in varieties like Albion, Baron van Brunow, Maximilian, C. purpurea grandiflora, etc. And do not forget the Muscari botryoides, blue (grape hyacinths), Scilla Sibirica, Campanula cœrulea, chionodoxas, Babiana purpurea, Camassia esculenta and Erythronium Dens-Canis. You can also use Iris Anglica, Hispanica, Germanica and Kämpferi, in varieties like Bleu Mourant, King of the Blues, Prince of Wales, Alexander von Humboldt, Darling; I. formosa, apstralis and neglecta; Violet Queen, Uncle Tom, Atlantis, Kleber, Rossini, etc., all in the most striking blue and violet colors.

For later blue shaded flowers such gladioli as Adeline Patti, Baron J. Hulot, Blue Jay, Faust, King of the Blues, Master Wietze; also the single and double blue anemones, delphiniums, phloxes and Aconitum Fischeri will do nicely.

In this way blue or blue shaded flowers can be found in each garden from the time the snow is gone till Jack Frost comes again, when nothing is with us till spring but the blue ocean, blue sky and blue eyes.

C. Keur & Sons.

RESETTING SPRENGERI PLANTS.

Will you please tell us whether Asparagus Sprengeri plants that have been in a bed three years will give satisfactory results if taken up and reset? The plants look well, but must be changed so that the bed may be repaired.

J. A. F. & S.

Three-year-old Asparagus Sprengeri plants may be taken up and replanted, but are not likely to produce as satisfactorily as a fresh planting of young stock. It would be better to make a new bed and plant with young plants, doing this as soon as possible.

W. H. T.

CUT THE HYDRANGEAS BACK.

I have a lot of good sized hydrangea plants that did not flower this season. Should I cut them down when I plant them out or just leave them untrimmed and plunge them out in their pots?

L. M.—N. S.

Yes, cut the plants back well. They will then break strongly and come much more shapely. The pot-grown stock for early forcing is better than field-grown stock, but for late spring and summer flowering the latter is preferable.

Gloversville, N. Y.—The Peck Floral Co. has leased the store at 59 North Main street from Hiram Darling, and will take immediate possession. The quarters have been reconstructed with a view to adapting them to the company's use. The two small windows have been replaced by a large one and the center entrance by one at the side.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Edward J. Welch.

Mrs. Edward J. Welch, wife of Edward J. Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., the well-known Boston wholesale florists, who had been ill with pneumonia at her home, 96 Ashmont, in Dorchester, died May 24. Less than a week before, a son, Edward Welch, in his twenty-first year, died of pneumonia, shortly after he had entered his father's business. Mrs. Welch was ill at the time and was unable to attend the funeral of her son. Mrs. Welch was Miss Christina Carroll, of South Boston. She is survived by her husband, one son, Fred, and two daughters, Christina and Agnes. Interment was in Mount Calvary cemetery, May 27, when there was a large attendance of sorrowing relatives and friends. The floral tributes were numerous and extremely beautiful.

James Cursham.

James Cursham, who conducted a retail store at 1430 Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, for the last twenty-five years, died suddenly of heart disease, May 24, at his home over the store. He was 54 years old, and is survived by his widow.

Henry M. Humfeld.

Henry M. Humfeld, of Frankfort, Ind., died suddenly at his home, of lung trouble, May 21. Mr. Humfeld came to Frankfort from Kansas City, Mo., and was well known in this section of Indiana. He was one of five brothers, all of whom made names in the florists' business. William Henry Humfeld died June 25, 1914, at Kansas City, at the age of 59. The other three are living: Simon Humfeld, at Muncie, Ind., Chas. Humfeld, at Clay Center, Kan., and E. A. Humfeld, at Kansas City.

Robert E. Scott.

Robert E. Scott, 42 Grand street, New Britain, Conn., died May 23 at the age of 62, as the result of a general breakdown in health. Mr. Scott was the son of George W. Scott, well known as a florist in New Britain, and followed his father's trade until a few years ago. He was born in New Britain, March 31, 1853. The funeral was held at the late home, May 25, and interment was in Fairview cemetery. Surviving Mr. Scott are his widow; four children, Mrs. James F. Hattings, Miss Hanna Scott, William A. Scott and Miss Harriet E. Scott; two brothers, William Scott, of New Haven, Conn., and George W. Scott, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, and five grandchildren.

Warren S. Engard.

Warren Sibil Engard, of Philadelphia, died at a sanitarium of tubercular trouble May 29, after a long illness. He was young, only about 27 years of age. Mr. Engard was well known in the floral world. He was for some years with William Berger & Son, where he assisted in all their artistic work, winning many friends by his charming manner. Later he filled other positions, being the first salesman to offer long-stemmed Killarney in Philadelphia. For them he introduced the joke, "Do you want any poets?" When asked what he meant he would reply with a smile, "Longfellows." Ill health marred his career, his last position being with D. B. Edwards, Atlantic City, N. J. Warren Engard's funeral took place from his home at Mount Airy, Pa., June 1. He is survived by a wife and two children. Phil.

J. H. Everett.

J. H. Everett, 65 years old, senior member of the wholesale seed firm of J. H. Everett & Son, 29 West Alabama street, Atlanta, Ga., died Saturday morning, May 29, at his home, 251 Angier avenue.

John A. Carlin.

John A. Carlin, who with his brother-in-law carried on the florists' business operated under the name of his sister, Mrs. L. A. Dunsmore, at 3269 Fairview place, Denver, Colo., died from a stroke of apoplexy May 19. He had gone about his work as usual the day before. He was stricken during the night and succumbed in the morning shortly after his condition had been discovered and a physician summoned.

Mr. Carlin was 73 years old and a native of Nottingham, England. He had been a resident of Denver for thirty years. His wife died several years ago. His sister, Mrs. L. A. Dunsmore; his brother-in-law and a niece and nephew survive him.

William Reslar.

William Reslar, of Portland, Ind., was knocked from the track by a freight engine May 24 and died next day. He was 45 years old and unmarried.

Denver, Colo.—According to the terms of the will of the late Bernard Beer, head of the Colfax Avenue Floral Co., which was bought out and absorbed by the Park Floral Co. in 1908, his two sons, Llewellyn B. and Justin H. Beer, will receive $500 from their father's estate for every $500 they earn by their own efforts. To obtain any payments after the first, they must show that they have saved the first $500 received from the trustees. This is Mr. Beer's method of encouraging habits of industry and thrift in his sons. Besides the bonuses, the sons receive $100 per month from the estate and $50 additional per month when they become married. These payments and bonuses are to be paid by the trustees, John Thams, Clyde B. Stevens and Llewellyn B. Beer, until the younger son, Justin H. Beer, reaches 30, when the estate will be divided between the brothers. The estate amounts to more than $100,000.

Blue Point, N. Y.—Charles Fish is having a large greenhouse erected on his West Main street property.

Norfolk, Va.—J. W. Grandy, Jr., has secured a permit to erect a greenhouse on Forty-ninth street at a cost of $700.

East Patchogue, N. Y.—Wiley's Farm is about to erect a greenhouse, 35x150 feet, of the latest type of construction, for miscellaneous stock.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—W. H. Hall, proprietor of the Iowa Falls Greenhouse, has purchased the lot just west of the greenhouse and expects to build an addition on it.

East Setauket, N. Y.—Charles Remnant will erect greenhouses on the seven acres of land on Railroad avenue recently sold by C. W. Ryder to John W. Shutt, of Whitestone.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Ten houses, 21x134, are in course of construction here by the Dawson Produce Co., which will use them for vegetables. A No. 15 Kroeschell boiler will be installed for heating purposes.

Altoona, Pa.—Myers Bros. will erect two greenhouses, each 42x200 feet, on their land near Meadow Brook station. They will be devoted to carnations and violets. Work on the buildings will be commenced in a short time.

Iron Mountain, Mich.—Odin Eskil, son of J. J. Eskil, who has for several years conducted a 40-acre fruit and truck farm near Green Bay, has returned here to engage in the florists' and market gardening business. He has purchased several lots on Stephenson avenue, on which he will build two greenhouses, each 25x75 feet.

Central Valley, N. Y.—A greenhouse is being erected by a local builder for J. B. Ford.

Alton, Ill.—The material for the new greenhouse of the Alton Floral Co. is on the ground, and the completion of the building is looked for soon.

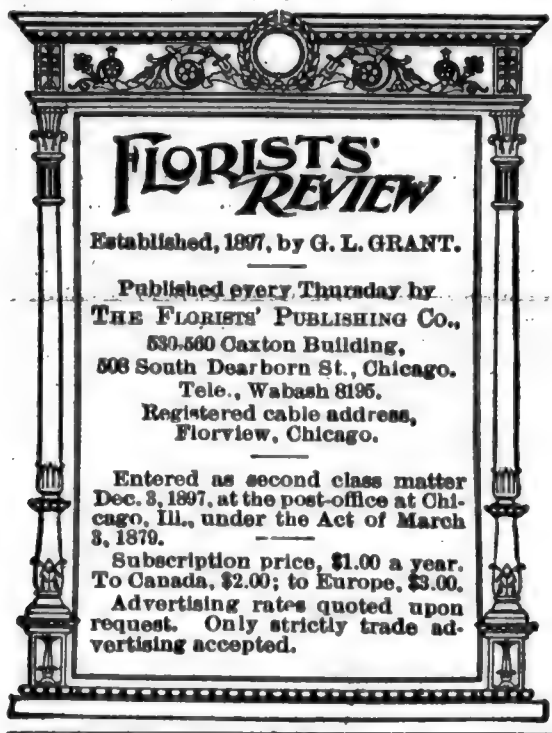

Ottawa, Ill.—The order for the ventilating machines for the two new greenhouses of Lohr Bros. has been given the John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

Minerva, O.—A. M. Stackhouse has purchased a tract of land outside the corporation limits, on the Lincoln highway, on which he expects to build some larger houses at a later date.

Utica, N. Y.—Brant Bros. have obtained a permit to erect a steel and concrete greenhouse and a boiler house on Sunset avenue, at an estimated cost of $7,000. Lord & Burnham Co. will do the work.

Big Rapids, Mich.—Walter F. Wilson, from Chicago, has moved to the E. J. Marsh farm, on the Clear Lake road, and will grow flowers principally for the Chicago market. He has 30,000 Marie Louise violets started. Materials for the construction of permanent greenhouses are on the ground.

Saginaw, Mich.—Work has been commenced on three 300-foot greenhouses at the range of Charles Frueh & Sons on Genesee avenue, just outside the city limits. When these are completed, three more will be begun. The increase is made necessary by the sale of the Hoyt street property. This firm has half an acre devoted to the experiment of growing ginseng under laths.

WITH a fairly favorable summer season there should be an unusually good supply of field-grown carnation plants for benching in July and later.

"If your competitor is taking business away from you because of successful advertising, it is YOUR lost profits which pay for HIS advertising."—Batten.

LAST week's Review recorded the marriage of an Indiana lady florist with a gentleman named Blossom. Can anybody beat that for sticking close to her work?

EACH summer American tourists spend $200,000,000 in Europe. This summer they will scatter the money nearer home. It should not hurt the flower business even a little bit.

THE stability of a business is among the first things for a florist to consider. What availeth you or I to so deal that, while we make a dollar today, our customers do not come again?

Now is the time to get busy on collections. In a few weeks the vacation season will have begun and the florist will be left, with others equally neglectful, to await the return of autumn and his customer.

THE quantity of gladiolus bulbs planted this season is beyond all precedent; neither the trade nor the public ever has planted anything like so many. While the wholesale cut flower markets may be overloaded, there is no danger that the florists who retail what they grow will fail to reap a good profit, and as for the public, it has only begun to appreciate the gladiolus.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Turner, Wm. M., Wilkesburg, Pa.

TWO YEARS.

Willson, Oliver S., Minneapolis, Minn.
Peterson, H. J., Chicago Heights, Ill.
Shrock, Otto O., Ligonier, Ind.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

Every advertiser should practice the golden rule—indeed, dealing with a perishable article, not readily returnable in case the customer is not fully satisfied, it is especially important that each seller do as he would be done by.

There probably is no line of business in which disagreements are so difficult of adjustment as is the case with plants and flowers—the non-standardized, perishable, unreturnable character of the merchandise makes it so. No man who cherishes his good name, who hopes to receive repeat orders, who hopes to profit by the valuable free advertising that passes from mouth to mouth through the trade, or who cherishes the good name of florists, as a class, will ever send out any other stock than he would be satisfied to receive were he in the buyer's position.

The man who invariably applies the golden rule will never want for customers.

A "WEATHER" BUSINESS.

The fact that ours is a business that depends on the weather seldom has been more clearly shown than by contrasting the experience of Memorial day of 1915 with the one of 1914. This year the weather was unseasonably cold over the greater part of the country, with the result that stock was rather scarce, but of good quality, and a most satisfactory if not banner business was done. Last year a heat wave swept over the eastern half of the United States the week before Memorial day, with the result that flowers were forced onto the markets in unwieldy quantities, were of soft, undependable quality and the business done, if large, was highly unsatisfactory. It was the weather, and nothing else, as other conditions then were more favorable than this year.

PAINTING OLD GUTTERS.

Will you kindly tell me whether pitch and unslaked lime are good to use on old greenhouse gutters? I do not know how to mix them.

W. B.—Ohio.

For new wooden gutters I prefer to use three coats of lead and oil paint, making the priming coat rather thin. If for old gutters which have become checked and cracked, a coat of hot pitch may be applied after removing all loose paint and putty. Care should be taken to use only enough pitch to fill the cracks, scraping off all surplus. While lime washes are sometimes applied to the gutters, after the pitch has hardened, I prefer to use two coats of paint. Coal tar is sometimes used in old gutters, but there is danger that it will injure the plants grown in the houses. T.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, June 2, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Generally fair weather may be expected. The temperature changes will be unimportant.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plain States—The weather will be generally fair throughout the period, except that local rains in the north portion are probable about Friday. The temperature will rise slowly and pass above the normal early in the period.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—Cloudy, rainy weather at the beginning of the period will give way by Friday to fair and warmer weather, which will continue until the end of the period.

For the West Gulf States—The indications are for fair weather, with temperatures slightly above the seasonal average.

NATIONAL PEONY SHOW.

The American Peony Society will hold its annual meeting at Boston this year, with its exhibition in connection with the peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The date is Saturday, June 12, and the exhibition will remain open over Sunday.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Memorial day, 1915, will be long remembered as the most profitable in the history of the trade, with the possible exception of that of 1913. The rush began as early as the middle of the week, and by May 28 developed into a scramble that duplicated that exhibited at the eleventh hour in the Mothers' day rush. The end of the week saw buyers offering fancy prices for carnations, but in most cases their demands had to go unsatisfied, as the stock was not to be had. Generally speaking, there was a great demand for everything, and in nothing was the supply more than sufficient. Under normal conditions a certain part of the public depends to a great extent on garden flowers for Memorial day purposes. This year the cold rains throughout almost the entire month of May quite effectually put these out of all consideration, and the demand turned to practically everything grown under glass.

Carnations, of course, were far short of the demand, and while a few of the early orders were filled in full, the majority of the shipping orders and nearly all of the city orders were liberally cut. Many houses were compelled to refuse all orders for carnations except from their regular customers. The quality of the stock handled was unusually good, owing to the cold weather of last month.

Roses, while by no means plentiful, were not nearly so short as anticipated. The demand, though excellent, did not even approximate that for carnations. It was sufficient, though, to cause a marked stiffening in prices. Beauties, however, proved an exception, for they experienced no advance in price and received no unusual call. Practically all roses were a little below the standard of quality.

While some things cleared more rapidly than others, practically everything moved in a most satisfactory degree. When the buyers found that they could not satisfy their desires for carnations and short-stemmed roses, they turned to peonies. These, because of their scarcity, perhaps, found an active demand and cleaned up at unusually good average prices. Easter lilies experienced the greatest Memorial day demand in their history. Valley cleared splendidly, while mignonette, snapdragon, daisies, gladioli and stocks received a stronger call than has fallen to their lot in many weeks. Sweet peas cleared as they came in, and jasmine was picked up on sight. Greens, more especially ferns, were in great demand, but, like everything else, were on the short side; for though Wisconsin ferns began to arrive May 29, they were not in sufficient quantity to relieve the tension.

Remarkable Weather.

Where April was an unusually favorable month for cut flower production—too good by far—May weather was just the opposite and held down production. The month was cold and wet. The average temperature, 54.1 degrees, was 2.4 degrees below the monthly normal, and it was remarkable in the fact that it was 2.2 degrees below the mean for the previous month of April. Never before within the history of the local weather office did the May temperature average lower than that of the previous April. The total rainfall, 7.04 inches, was the heaviest May rainfall since 1883 and was 3.67 inches above the seasonal normal. This large amount of precipitation served to offset the deficiencies of the previous months, so that the total amount for the first five months of 1915 is now close to the normal. The percentage of sunshine for the month was naturally low, forty-five, being nineteen per cent below the May average.

Business in May.

May in this market seemed like old times. If it did not make up for the bad April it went a long way toward it. May was the best month this market has had in more than a year; not the largest, perhaps, in money value of sales, although it may even have been that, but the best for tone and all-around general satisfaction for growers and wholesalers, and even the retailers would rather have a stiff market on a brisk demand than a weak one with little business. May, of course, was better than last year—it would not have to be anything great to beat the poor showing of the fifth month of 1914—and it was considerably better than May, 1913, a good one. May, on the whole, was close to December, in some houses considerably ahead. And when May, with its moderate prices, equals the month that includes Christmas, with its best prices of the year, it's going some.

The Prospect.

Only rash men care to predict the course of the cut flower market, the unexpected so often happens, but the indications June 1 are that the arrival of warm, bright weather will bring another heavy crop of roses. There will be carnations enough in a few days and a large crop quite soon. Local peonies will flood the market in another week, depending, of course, on the weather. The prospect is that there will be plenty of good stock, with prices affording excellent values and every inducement to push the business.

Ladies Plan Organization.

The ladies in the florists' business in Chicago probably will have an organization of their own before many weeks have passed. The plan is to form a social club along the lines of the Ladies' S. A. F., or the local organizations of the women of the trade at St. Louis, Rochester and other cities except that it is intended to limit membership to those of the sex who are actually engaged or employed in the business, rather than to take in the wives of florists.

The idea had its inception with the Atlas block quartette, Miss O. A. Tonner, wholesale florist; Miss Marguerite K. McNulty, bookkeeper for Peter Reinberg; Miss Nettie Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., Inc., and Miss O'Neil, bookkeeper for George Reinberg.

Orange, Cal. The trip will take nearly all summer.

Bassett & Washburn are giving only half the space to Killarney this year that they did in 1914. Mr. Washburn thinks this variety has about run its race. They will give Hadley and Killarney Brilliant another trial. The number of Russell and Ophelia plants is being greatly increased.

The Northwestern railroad has issued and distributed a neatly printed 8-page folder containing the itinerary, rates and full information regarding the special train it is hoped to run from Chicago to San Francisco for the S. A. F. convention. It is stated that 125 full fares will be necessary to secure the train and all those who plan to go are urged to communicate either with H. A. Gross, general agent for the Northwestern at Chicago, or with Guy W. French, chairman of the Chicago Florists' Club's committee, at Union Grove, Wis.

The next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be June 10. In contrast to the meetings of the last few months, there will be no special effort put forth to entertain, as it will be necessary to devote quite the entire evening to business. There are the plans for the fall flower show to be developed. A report is expected from the show committee, which is composed of George Asmus, Arnold Ringier and A. Henderson. Then all arrangements for the July picnic are to be consummated. William J. Keimel, president of the club, says this should be the best attended in the history of the club, since the membership is now far in excess of that of any former year.

Fred Stielow, of Niles Center, a member of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is adding Mrs. Charles Russell to his list of rose varieties. He is putting in 10,000 plants.

George Reinberg will drop American Beauty. Ophelia, Sunburst and Richmond have taken its place in his greenhouses.

The E. C. Amling Co. reports that the new houses of Meyer & Dramm Co., Elmhurst, will be used for Hoosier Beauty and George Elgar roses, two novelties for next season.

According to H. B. Kennicott, there is every indication that the local crop of peonies will be normal in quantity as well as quality.

F. M. Johnson and Edward Galavan, of the A. L. Randall Co., left June 2 on a scouting expedition that may take them "Way Down East." They are traveling by automobile. A. L. Randall harvested seventy-five bushels, nearly 2,000,000, bulbets of Gladiolus America on his Michigan farm last season and is planting glads there again in quantity this season.

Edward Clody, 3924 North Clark street, reports a most satisfactory Memorial day trade. After exhausting the supply in his greenhouses, he was compelled to send to the market three times May 30.

The arrival of gladioli from Florida, from Texas and from indoors, all on the same day, is reported by A. T. Pyfer & Co.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has as yet rendered no decision in the cases of Peter Reinberg, George Reinberg and other growers whose coal goes to Summerdale station. The commission ordered the Northwestern railroad to reduce the freight on West Virginia coal from $2.30 per ton to $2.10 and claims were filed for a refund of 20 cents per ton overcharge from March 1, 1913, to March 1, 1914, when the new rate went into effect. The evidence was heard months ago and a decision is expected any day now.

John T. Muir's administration as president of River Forest, into which office he was inaugurated May 10, has been attracting much attention because of the open forum held each Saturday evening to get a popular expression on public affairs. The forum put an end to the office of village manager, with its salary of $1,800 per year.

According to Philip C. Schupp, J. A. Budlong has dropped the Shawyer, Hadley and Aaron Ward roses, and will grow Russell and Ophelia much more heavily, because of the great demand for them.

William J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill., says they are throwing out all Hadley rose plants, as the variety has not proved good property for them. Bulgarie will suffer a like fate in the near future. To balance matters, they will increase their Aaron Ward roses by 3,500 plants, making 11,000 in all; also Killarney Brilliant will be increased by 3,000 plants, making a total of 11,000 for that variety.

By way of broadening their activities, Joseph Ziska & Sons have begun to carry a line of wooden easels. They are not imported, but are of the "made in America" brand, and should prove all the more popular on that account at this time.

Simpson's, Florist, 3656 Ogden avenue, has a most appropriate window display for June. A Lilliputian wedding procession, consisting of a bride, groom, bridesmaid and staff bearer, all arranged in the conventional manner, is shown perambulating down a green lane with a profusion of apple blossoms on all sides.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Blumenfeld, 782 Cramer street, Milwaukee, Wis., announce the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn, to William Lubliner, of Chicago. Mr. Lubliner, who is the proprietor of one of Chicago's well known loop establishments, is receiving the felicitations of his friends in the trade.

As the warm weather threatens, Allie J. Zech, of Zech & Mann, is compelled in spite of himself to begin planning the annual fishing trip to the Wisconsin lakes.

H. H. Wilkerson, of the Retail Florists' Co., was on a business trip last week through the central part of the state.

From Huntingburg, away down in the southwestern corner of Indiana, Peter Morgen is shipping excellent summer Beauties to the Chicago market.

David Roy, of A. Henderson & Co., has returned after a week's trip to the Lake Geneva district of Wisconsin.

J. P. Kellen, 2339 Greenleaf avenue, has placed an order with Kroeschell Bros. Co., for one of its new model No. 13 boilers.

A large shipment of baskets from Germany has just arrived at the warehouse of the Raedlein Basket Co., so that it seems the war blockade is not effective.

Buchbinder Bros. sent a crew of men to Davenport, Ia., last week to install the refrigerator and fixtures for Forber & Bird, of that city.

Visitors.

Gustave Raasch, of Kankakee, visited friends on the market last week.

W. DeForest Ludwig, of Pittsburgh, spent Memorial day in Chicago before starting on the last lap of a 9,000-mile trip that has taken him three months, including the Pacific coast from San Diego to Seattle.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, has been here for a week, on his monthly trip.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

This was especially the case in carnations, stocks and sweet peas. The demand for these easily took the lead and the supply was far short of the call, in consequence of which there was a slight stiffening in prices. Business for Memorial day exceeded that of any previous year. A majority of the stores kept open Sunday, but, with the exception of the late cuts, there were few flowers to be had at any price. Potted plants, especially geraniums, sold well, several thousand being handled here.

Various Notes.

Joseph E. Koppelman has brought suit against the Adams Express Co., in the Seventh District court, to recover damages on the alleged improper handling of freight.

Augustus P. Gray, gardener on the estate of Charles Paull at Bristol, R. I., died suddenly May 26, while unhitching a horse on the premises. Death was due to heart disease. Mr. Gray was 42 years of age, a native of Bristol and leaves a widow and several children.

TOLEDO, O.

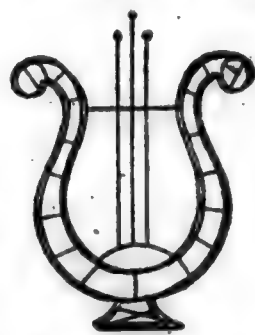

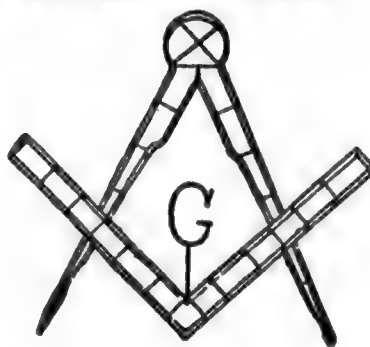

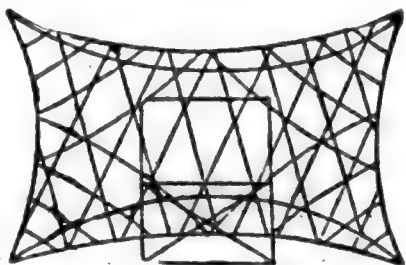

The Market.

Cool weather and abundant showers of rain made Memorial week the worst in many years. The weather up to May 30 was most unsatisfactory, and handicapped the florists in planting flower beds and graves in cemeteries. On the night of May 27 the temperature dropped to 38 degrees, and people were somewhat alarmed as to what should be done in regard to planting for Memorial day.

May 30 and 31 came a change in the weather, which meant dollars and many of them to the local florists. Early Memorial day the sun shone brightly, and the flower shops were kept exceedingly busy from then until noon on Monday. At that time every florist in the city was completely sold out of cut flowers and bedding plants. The supply of cut flowers for Memorial day was rather short, because of the cloudy weather. Peonies, stocks, snapdragons and gladioli were in the lead. Carnations were in fine shape, but the limited supply of these was soon consumed. Roses were in their prime and sold well. Candytuft and colored daisies were in great demand for the smaller bouquets used mostly for the medium-priced cemetery trade. Baskets filled with mignonette, forget-me-nots, sweet peas and other dainty little flowers sold fast, and a good profit was realized.

Bedding plants of all kinds were sold out early in the week, and florists were much gratified to walk through the greenhouses and gaze at the empty benches. Galax and magnolia wreaths and a large number of metal wreaths helped to make up the deficiency in profit caused by inclement weather the fore part of the week.

Memorial week business as a whole, regardless of the unfavorable weather, was better this year than ever before. People are becoming more educated in the flower line every year, as florists are advertising in the newspapers and street cars and on the billboards.

Various Notes.

Krueger Bros. remark that never before in all their years of business were they entirely sold out of such a large stock of geraniums and other bedding plants ten days before Memorial day.

Emil Kuhnke sold his entire stock of bedding plants a week before Memorial day and had to cancel many orders for large quantities from out of town.

S. N. Peck had an enormous sale of artificial wreaths, and is well pleased with the sale of bedding plants and cut flowers.

Schramm Bros. report a great increase in their sales, especially due, they remark, to the sale of tastefully arranged baskets of forget-me-nots, sweet peas, roses and mignonette. A half-page in the newspapers advertising these special baskets for Memorial day brought in astounding results, which were most gratifying to Frank Schramm, the originator of the idea.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman was busy with orders for wreaths and bouquets, and was entirely sold out of cut flowers early Monday morning.

Miss Helen Patten had orders for more than 100 galax wreaths for the more aristocratic trade for use in Woodlawn and Forest cemeteries. Miss Patten is noted as Toledo's expert wreath maker, and she always remarks that she owes her fame to the galax leaf.

Much regret was voiced at a recent meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club, when it was officially announced that Emil Kuhnke was about to leave the florists' trade and retire from active business. Mr. Kuhnke started in business for himself some twenty

WASHINGTON, D. C.

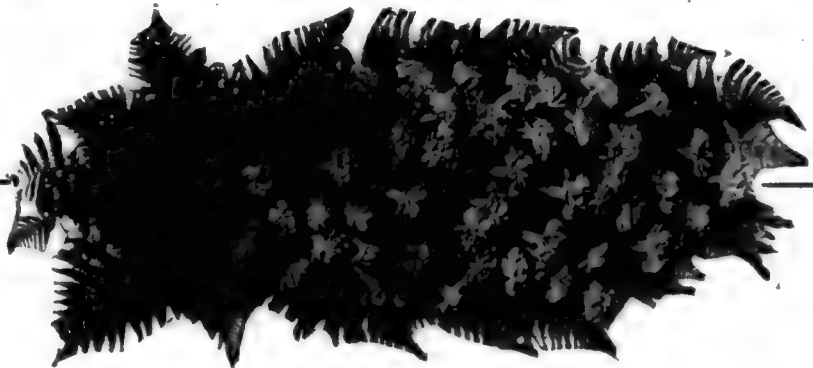

The Market.

The bad weather last week had a serious effect upon Memorial day business, and had not the business extended over three days some of the growers and dealers might have suffered a loss. Flowers were in good supply, but the continued rains kept the people from the cemeteries. Peonies played a prominent part in the sales of the week.

Tausendschon ramblers have just come in. Cattleya gigas of exceptionally fine quality from the north brought $7.50 per dozen without trouble, and the supply was cleaned up as soon as it arrived. The local crop has not yet come in. Calla lilies are nearing the end of their season, and there is little demand for Easter lilies because of the large amount of other flowers to be had for funeral work. Gladioli meet with good sale, although they are gradually being supplanted by peonies. Some excellent spiraea is to be had. The cool weather has been of great help to carnations, and they have been holding their own. White Killarney roses have been in good demand all through the month. The school business this year has been heavier than during recent years, and, coupled with the usual amount of funeral work, has kept the stores going in fine shape. Collections are slow, however, and prove a problem to many florists.

The arrival of a shipment of 400 palms and 100 aspidistras from Belgium created considerable astonishment among the trade, as it had not been thought that many more plants would come through. They were consigned to F. H. Kramer, Inc., and came on the steamer Ryndam.

The Market.

The cut flower business for Memorial day was most satisfactory. The phenomenally wet weather retarded and improved flowers to an extent that upset calculations. About one-half the quantity of flowers of a year ago brought as much money—that was the general opinion. It is probable that the total business was much larger here than last year. The limit to business lay in the supply, which compelled the refusal of orders. Nearly everyone misjudged the market and sold some stock too low; when unable to supply it themselves, they were obliged to buy at a higher figure.

Peonies were the principal flowers. The white variety, P. festiva maxima, has been so largely planted that it was more plentiful early in the week than the pink varieties. By the time the holiday arrived all were sold at prices ranging from 4 to 6 cents; some especially fine stock at 8 and even 10 cents. The rain of May 29 and 30 held back several orders until the morning of May 31, when business was unusually brisk for a holiday. The quantity of peonies sold, while large, was not nearly so large as it would have been with clear weather instead of cold rain. The expedients resorted to, in order to open the peonies, were varied. One wholesale house decorated its front pavement, which, as it chanced, was on the sunny side of the street. Another stood its peonies up in the office and lighted all the gas jets. Still another filled its floor space over night and ran the heater. Somehow they were opened and sold.

Carnations were hardly so plentiful as the market required, but there was not the expected scarcity. They brought 3, 4 and 5 cents. Peonies and carnations were the principal flowers; after them everything sold, roses, sweet peas and cornflowers probably best, at no special increase in prices, although the market was firm. The sweet peas, mostly indoor grown, developed more strength than expected. Some quality stock brought from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, although 40 cents to 75 cents was the general price. Outdoor flowers, such as snowballs, mock oranges and irises sold better than for many years past.

The spring plant market was seriously affected by the cold weather of the last ten days. Generally speaking, all the stock in bloom has sold, but it has not been possible to get so much of it in bloom as usual with so much dark weather. It is hoped that the usual fall in price after Memorial day will be postponed this season, as it is believed that good weather will bring excellent business.

The cut flower market was active June 1 and 2. Valley, sweet peas, pink roses and peonies were in brisk demand.

The Possibilities of Memorial Day.

I had a little chat with George S. Hampton May 29. It is always a pleasure to listen to Mr. Hampton. He has ideas that he expresses in words clearly. I will try to give his thought just as he gave it to me:

"A great mistake is made in many parts of the country by those who sell geraniums for Memorial day to the exclusion of everything else. It is a business error. Geraniums are grown in great numbers, at considerable cost, and sold, say, for 25 cents at the most, to people who would readily pay from six to ten times that amount for a magnolia or other wreath and be better satisfied. The profit on a 25-cent geranium and a 2-cent flag must compare unfavorably with the profit on a wreath at $1.50, while the labor in handling the latter is less. You have no idea how the business in decorating graves with wreaths has grown. I know one florist who retails 3,000 magnolia wreaths at from $1.50 up, nothing less. They are sometimes sold plain; oftentimes decorated with flowers. Usually the flowers are dried; sometimes they are natural. Here in our own city the geranium is still in the ascendant, but the department stores, with keen business acumen, are buying magnolia wreaths heavily. I simply feel that it is poor salesmanship to sell 25 cents' worth where the customer would be better satisfied with the worth of $1.50."

A Coal Fact.

There is a coal salesman in this city whom I admire for his pluck. A few years ago he called at the time when there was a strike in the coal mines. He asked for a trial order for coal. When asked how soon delivery could be made, he didn't know. When asked the price, he couldn't tell. This was sublime, to be able cheerfully to go where told, to ask for an order for coal that couldn't be quoted, or delivered on request. So this salesman was asked to return when times were better. He did so and has kept on coming ever since.

When he called the other day it was to say that he is now a special agent. His duties are to find out the requirements of each place where a mechanical stoker is employed and advise what kind of coals should be burned to produce the best results; a need that has come into existence with the advent of the forced draught. Three nights' work each week during last winter was devoted to acquiring the knowledge necessary for this work. The chance came when a customer wanted to know about the B. T. U., and no one else could tell him.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

often call for our greatest efforts in designing. A wedding is pretty when the work is well done; when the bouquet-holders are of soft-colored, delicate lace; when the baskets are well proportioned and finished in good taste; when the gauze chiffon harmonizes with the flowers and frocks; when there are novel or unusual features cleverly brought out, such as shepherds' crooks, directoire staffs or arm baskets—these and many other little touches make a wedding pretty.

florists also made wreaths for use on the graves of old soldiers and others. Some who have greenhouses of their own and who grew thousands of bedding plants for the trade found a ready sale at good prices. During the preceding two weeks, there had been considerable rainy, damp weather, and this caused the leaves of the geraniums to turn a little yellow, but three or four days of sunshine immediately before Memorial day brought the plants back into good trim. Carnations are still high-priced; local florists have to pay 3 and 4 cents each at wholesale in the New York markets. Cut roses are still selling well; Beauties and Tafts are especially popular. Both greenhouse and outdoor valley is plentiful and still sells in good quantities. Lilacs are getting past their prime and, although some good flowers are still coming into ular. Potted fuchsias are more plentiful than they have been heretofore this season. Peonies are plentiful, of good quality and of medium price. Hydrangeas continue plentiful and good. The French varieties are most in demand.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger made many wreaths for the decoration of graves on Memorial day.

C. J. Connolly, of 320 Bank street, has several weddings for which he is to furnish flowers.

The loss to florists by the rulings of some boards of education, or principals of schools, that flowers shall not be presented to members of the graduating classes, or, if presented, shall not be given to the graduates until after the exercises are over, is illustrated by the remarks of a Newark florist, who said that before flowers were forbidden to be publicly presented to graduates, one of the other florists of town always sent to a particular school a whole wagon load of flowers, while he, a smaller florist, had all that a man could carry. Last year, after the rule had been made that flowers must not be presented until the exercises were over, one small boy was able to carry all of the flowers sent by both of these florists for presentation to members of the graduating class.

There has been an unusually big demand for seed in the land cultivation work of the Lot and Yard Improvement Association of Newark. W. J. Coleman is the agriculturist in charge of this work. Judges will be named to award prizes for the best flowers and vegetables grown on the vacant lots. The Essex County Florists' Club has donated $25 for prizes for the best flowering plants grown on the lots.

Henry A. Strobell has had considerable funeral work lately. He has orders for flowers for a number of weddings during June. R. B. M.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The weather, which at the beginning of the week was cold and disagreeable, did not help business in any way. A frost on Wednesday night, May 26, did much damage, both to florists and fruit growers. Warmer and brighter weather has come and a good, brisk Memorial day trade has cheered the storekeepers. In the last three days much work has been called for in porch boxes and bedding stock. The cut flower trade has been good, but little outdoor stock has arrived, on account of the cold season. Carnations, which had been scarce, are arriving in larger quantities, but are still insufficient to supply the demands. They are not extra large and their stems are brittle.

A fair supply of peonies in red, pink and white helped out wonderfully and the quality was good. There was a nice supply of Easter lilies, which sold quickly. The variety of roses was large, including the new rose, Stanley, which seems to please the public immensely. Fine Ward, Sunburst, Ophelia, Hadley and Kaiserin sold well. Daisies were plentiful. Baby gladioli were plentiful, but the demand was not strong. A few later varieties of gladioli were on the market and sold readily. Lily of the valley was good and there was a lot of outdoor stock on hand. Blue lupines came in useful. Yellow and blue iris, snowballs, etc., were quite acceptable for cemetery bouquets. Snapdragons sold well. Sweet peas were plentiful and of fair quality.

Various Notes.

A good delegation of the Ontario Horticultural Society, of St. Catharines and London, Ont., arrived on a late train Saturday, May 22. On Sunday they were met at Highland park by Assistant Superintendent John Dunbar and also by Mayor Edgerton, of this city. The mayor, in his address of welcome, spoke of our "City Beautiful" and briefly told of the plans of the Chamber of Commerce for the beautifying of the streets and residences. The Horticultural Society was then taken down to the beautiful lilacs, which are numerous in variety. The other parks were also visited and a happy and educational time was spent.

Mr. Gorenson, who several years ago was employed by H. E. Wilson, helped through the Memorial day rush at the old stand. He has been suffering from rheumatism and, acting on his physician's advice, came east.

Beautiful window displays for Memorial day were noticed in several stores. J. B. Keller Sons had a large brown magnolia wreath, with cypas tied with white ribbon and with the stars and stripes as a background. H. E. Wilson showed a 4-foot G. A. R. badge of immortelles, a large green magnolia wreath with cypas and lavender ribbon on an easel, over which was draped the flag, and some small magnolia

Memorial day conditions were the worst in many years in regard to the quantity of stock available. There was a mad scramble for stock, and orders were cut right and left in order to give everyone something. Orders were filled, but not satisfactorily by a long way. Growers had absolutely no help from the sun this year, and forced the stock as best they could with heat. The crop was so much smaller than was anticipated that the orders taken in advance far exceeded the supply and late orders could not be taken care of at all. The quality of the stock was good, considering the unfavorable conditions under which the growing was done. The demand seemed to be exceptionally large, but that may be only an illusion, as so many orders were turned down that business seemed to be exceptionally good.

Carnations were in great demand, but other stock did not suffer on this account, as the supply of carnations was exhausted so long before the final day that roses and later all other stock was cleaned up as fast as it was brought to the market. Peonies had a fine sale and were disposed of in enormous quantities. The supply of these was greater, in comparison, than that of other stock, and the trade eagerly turned to them when roses and carnations were not to be procured. Sweet peas were in good demand, and sold well. There was some extra fine stock on the market, and it was picked up rapidly.

Prices, of course, were much higher than last year. When advance orders were placed, there was some argument as to what the stock was worth, but as Memorial day drew nearer, price came to be a second consideration; the main question was to get sufficient stock to supply the public. The public did not take kindly to the idea of paying $1.25 per dozen for carnations. They thought it was purely a hold-up game, as during the glut some time before Mothers' day they had been able to buy them for 25 to 50 cents per dozen. Bargain hunters soon came to the conclusion, however, that the so-called hold-up was universal, and then paid the price asked without a murmur.

It is only natural that stock will now become more plentiful and there will probably not be a shortage again until sometime next fall.

Various Notes.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. has a telegraph window display, made up of instruments, telegraph orders and shipping tags. The display is attracting a great deal of attention.

The M. A. McKenney Co. has been exceptionally busy during the last week. This firm has had a fine casket cover, as well as much other funeral work. They also have had several decorations, which have kept the force on the jump all the time.

B. O. Burbank, of Iron Mountain, Mich., was a visitor Sunday and Monday, May 23 and 24. H. J. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Memorial day trade was only fair this year. The continuous rain of the last two weeks put a damper on the planting business. Memorial day business was spread out over three days, and had weather conditions been good, the volume should have been better than heretofore.

Outdoor stock was plentiful, peonies being more than equal to the demand. Feverfew, candytuft, daisies and other such stock were also more than equal to the demand. Stock did not bring the prices that were commanded last year.

Memorial day business has dropped off considerably since the great 500-mile automobile race has been staged, as the city is crowded with visitors attending the races. H. L. W.

THE NEXT A. C. S. CONVENTION.

What It Means to St. Louis Growers.

The St. Louis Florists' Club sent J. F. Ammann, secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, to Buffalo to invite the American Carnation Society to hold its next meeting beside the Father of Waters. In reporting the success of his mission Mr. Ammann told the club:

"It is up to us to make good in 1916. This will be the first time the Carnation Society will meet west of the Mississippi river, since its organization twenty-four years ago. The matter of a meeting and exhibition place and proper tables, decorations, etc., is of vital importance; yet all these, though essential, are of no use without plenty of flowers, and well grown flowers, for exhibition. So it is up to you carnation growers of the Mississippi valley, and in fact all growers of the middle west who contribute to this market, to help make good at this exhibition. We can reasonably expect quite a nice lot of stock from the neighboring states, Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, but the growers of this immediate vicinity must show their colors and come to the front. Never mind about the size of your place. It is not always the big fellow that captures the prize. Go after quality; that counts.

The Retailers' Opportunity.

"Now just a word to the retailers. I would that every retailer in St. Louis could have viewed that magnificent display of carnations, arranged in so many different effects, at Buffalo. I do really think this is the greatest advertising feature any show can put up, and I sincerely hope our retailers will cooperate in making this meeting here a grand success, from a retail and advertising standpoint. The public admires all the beautiful flowers, but it admires all the more the artist's ability in using them to get the best effects.

"Now just a word about the spirit brought about by these meetings. Gentlemen, if at Buffalo you had seen, as I saw, our kind friend, J. A. Valentine, of Denver, Colo., shaking hands with our newly elected director, C. S. Strout, from Maine, you would thus have seen the hand of fellowship stretched nearly across the continent and would have felt that this is not a bad world after all. The meeting of old friends, with the making of new ones, is only one great good that such meetings bring about. However, were that the only thing, would it not be worth while?

"Let us of the middle west unite for the best there is in us, to make the A. C. S. meeting of 1916 the banner meeting of that society, both from a standpoint of exhibition and new membership, and stand here in St. Louis, January next, extending the hand of fellowship to our fellow craftsmen of the east, west, north and south, bidding them welcome to our city, and in a meager way returning at least some of the hospitality so generously bestowed upon us by them so many times in the past."

Indianapolis, Ind.—The contestants for the prize of a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition and the crown of May queen of the carnival were presented with bouquets by Bertermann Bros. Co. upon the occasion of the crowning of the winner Friday evening, May 21.

Carl Jacobs, Albion, Mich.

FOR SALE—An up-to-date florist's establishment, in growing section within 12 miles of New York City, containing 6 1/4 acres of land, and the following greenhouses:

1 house, 100 by 12 feet, even span, Lord & Burnham, galvanized iron construction, 16 by 24-inch glass.

1 house, 110 by 22, even span, Hitchings, galvanized iron, 16 by 24-inch glass.

1 house, 150 by 23, sash house.

All the above recently constructed, and fully stocked with carnations, mums and dahlias, with the latest and best sorts.

2 dwelling houses, all modern improvements, gas and electricity.

This is an opportunity for some one looking to locate near New York, in a good florist and nursery business.

Address all communications to No. 471, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

FOR SALE

My business, consisting of about nine acres of land, partly in the city limits, partly over line; including ten greenhouses covering about 100x210 feet, nearly all Moninger material and Garland gutters, in best repair; large packing room and boiler shed, 39x110 feet; six-room house, 26x30 feet; barn, 28x36 feet; boiler shed, house and barn, all cement blocks, new, built within last three years; large and heavy brick stack, built three years; steam boilers insured by Hartford Co.; city water with 4-inch branch to curb, 1 1/2-inch meter, can be increased to 4-inch; fire hydrant in front of place; electric light in house and shed; sewer in street; five connections to curb, one catch basin in property; all paid for; narrow gauge elevated track to unload coal from railroad; adjoining property mostly platted and building up fast; retail trade developing fast; wholesale trade unlimited; best shipping point in U. S.

Reasons for selling, health failing, and have sufficient means to live.

Place heavily stocked for spring sales, or will transfer place with necessary stock to carry on the business.

One horse, seven years old; all wagons in best condition; over 100 hotbed sash; about 50,000 pots; electric pot washing machine, and all tools and supplies and good will for practically the amount of the tax duplicate. This is not a dead business, but needs a live man. If you have a reasonable amount of cash and mean business, write or come and see me.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—

During the SIX MONTHS from March 4 to September 4 I have received from other Florists, by mail, telegraph or cable, orders to the amount of $513.25 as a result of my advertisement in the Retailers' department of The Review. With the allowance to senders the record for SIX MONTHS is:

Value of orders received-----	$513.25
Less 20% allowed senders-----	102.60
Net value of orders for SIX MONTHS--	410.65

It should be noted that this showing covers the DULL SUMMER MONTHS, when any addition to a Florists' business is decidedly welcome.

Retail Florists not advertising in The Review should profit by this letter.

Respectfully,

F. M. Weber

The Market.

There was no special activity in cut flower trade until May 27, and little advance in prices, but May 27 to 29 saw a really brisk market, in which practically everything cleaned up. Conditions were in marked contrast to a year ago, when a terrific heat wave just in advance of Memorial day ruined business. It is rare that the weather near Memorial day is so cool as we have just had. Hard frosts were reported from many places, with snow in parts of New England. This militated against a heavy crop of greenhouse flowers. There was a good supply of roses and all cleaned up well. Those most in favor were short and medium lengths at $3 to $5 per hundred. There was no advance in long-stemmed stock; in fact, Beauties and other fancies went slowly. The best demand was for red roses, pink coming next in favor. Carnations were in short supply and sold at $5 and $6 per hundred, some fancies making $8. Many growers kept a large part of their pick at home for the local trade.

There was a big crop of yellow marguerites, which sold at from 75 cents to $4 per hundred, medium stock at $2 being in best demand. Sweet peas sold remarkably well, select flowers making $2. Spiraea Japonica and Queen Alexandra, ten weeks' stocks, double feverfew and candytuft all had a great sale, everything cleaning up. Few tulips and narcissi were seen, but there was a good crop of Spanish iris and gladioli, all of which sold readily. Only Pennsylvania peonies were to be had, at an average price of $8 per hundred.

Antirrhinums advanced in price, making $5 to $8 per hundred. There was only a moderate call for valley. There was a large outdoor supply, which averaged better in quality than the forced article. Longiflorum lilies made $8 per hundred, candidums $4 to $5. No one seemed to want gardenias, of which few are coming in, and cattleyas were neglected. Asparagus and smilax sold remarkably well.

Bedding plants, such as myosotis, pansies, daisies, geraniums, etc., were in strong demand in spite of the cold weather. Geraniums are already practically sold out and hardly any grower has enough for the increasing demand. Hydrangeas and rambler roses sold best, among the larger flowering plants, for cemetery use. Taken all in all, this was far and away the best Memorial day Boston ever had.

Artificial wreaths were sold in thousands, the sale being far greater than a year ago. With the totally inadequate supply of natural flowers, it would have been impossible for Boston to half fill the immense demand for cemetery designs without using artificial material, and, however much we may regret the prominence given to artificial wreaths, so long as thousands of buyers prefer them, owing to the sharp advance in natural flowers, their sale will go on.

Business since Memorial day has continued fair. Roses and carnations have receded sharply in price. A good many stocks, candytuft and other flowers which flowered too late are coming in, but no one wants them. Gladioli, such as America and Mrs. F. King, are good and have sold quite well. Business in bedding plants continues remarkably good.

ten successive days in the daily paper having the largest circulation, using larger ads than a year ago. He says the results were better than last year, when he disposed of 2,700 artificial wreaths. He also did a great business in cut flowers and bedding plants at his stores on Tremont street and in the Hotel Bismarck.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., had a heavy cut of America and Mrs. F. King gladioli for Memorial day, in addition to carnations.

While there was a shortage of greenhouse flowers on the market for Memorial day, an unusually fine assortment of outdoor flowers was available. Deutzia Lemoinei was the only cut shrub arriving in quantity and it sold well. Lilacs were still in quite good condition; so was Cornus florida, Spiraea Van Houttei, exochordas, etc. German irises were in fine bloom. There were also many aquilegias, single pyrethrums, Hemerocallis flava and valley in abundance. Where they got a little shade, Narcissus poeticus and N. alba plena odorata were perfectly fresh. With the writer, thousands of Darwin and cottage tulips were at their best; but hardly a flower of these could be seen in any store, yet such flowers would have brought splendid prices this year.

F. W. Fletcher & Co., of Auburndale, will go into the raising of antirrhinum seed of certain named varieties in quantity and anticipate a large sale for the coming season, owing to the uncertainties of European seed supplies. They had a fine cut of marguerites and snapdragons for Memorial day.

W. J. Patterson, of Wollaston, had a good crop of deutzias, stocks, candytuft and outdoor cornflowers for Memorial day.

Edward Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., has the whole-hearted sympathy of the entire trade in the further heavy bereavement which befell him May 24 in the death of his wife, reported in this week's obituary column.

cut of spiraeas, deutzias and outdoor valley for Memorial day.

At Galvin's May 29 some large specimen nasturtiums trained on wire frames were an attractive window feature. No artificial wreaths were to be noted here, but a large business in natural flowers was done.

Recent visitors included Anthony Waterer and John McIntosh, representing Hosea Waterer, Philadelphia.

W. W. Tailby, of Wellesley, had some indoor-grown Victoria, Double Von Sion and poeticus narcissi, May 29 and 31, the only ones to be seen in the market;
also a large cut of stocks.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, had 25,000 roses for Memorial day and they were soon cleaned out.

John Barr, of South Natick, has been at Peterboro, N. H., for nearly a month laying out new gardens for Mrs. B. P.
Cheney.

Albert Batley & Son, of Maynard, had such large local calls for Memorial day bouquets that they had nothing to spare for the wholesale market but some double feverfew.

Henry Penn conducted the most extensive Memorial day advertising campaign of any local firm and the enormous business done justified the expenditure. They had a largely increased force to cope with the orders. For several days wagon loads of wreath boxes left hourly for the express offices. Loose flowers here put up in boxes were sold in preference to bouquets, and baskets had a great sale.

Patrick Welch did a fine Memorial day business. Particularly fine here were the Beauty roses, peonies, gladioli and yellow marguerites.

James Wheeler, of Natick, had nearly 100,000 yellow marguerites for Memorial day.

Darwin tulips this season and they sold well. His tomato houses are coming along in fine shape and promise a great crop.

Although more bedding geraniums than ever were grown here this season, the demand is far in excess of the supply. Scarlet remains the favorite color, but there is a largely increased call for pink at present.

Another of the ever popular ladies' nights of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held June 15. Regular business will be shortened and there will be, as usual, a fine entertainment and collation, to be followed by dancing. Tickets are necessary for admission and can now be had from all the club's officers.

Wax Bros. report Memorial day business as much larger than a year ago.

There will be prize exhibitions at Horticultural hall June 5 and 6; June 12 and 13, peonies; June 19 and 20, roses and strawberries. All promise to be large shows.

J. Newman & Son, of Tremont street, had an increased call for both artificial wreaths and cut flowers last week.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, had heavier retail orders for Memorial day than ever before and had, in consequence, to reduce his shipments to the wholesale market.

Welch Bros. Co. was busy as never before for Memorial day and had small surplus of either cut flowers or wreaths.

W. N. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

According to reports from all parts of the city, Memorial day business was good, but no records were broken for volume of trade. Saturday and Sunday, May 29 and 30, a large number of shipping orders were sent out to nearby towns, and Monday, May 31, the local trade called for plants and cheap cut stock. There was no scarcity of stock in the wholesale markets at any time last week, and prices were more reasonable than at any other of the big flower days. Peonies seemed to have a big call. The best were cleaned up early each day. Next in demand came gladioli. The supply of these was large, so that they did not clean up so well. Roses and carnations are in abundance, with a slight increase in price. They had a good demand. Sweet peas are holding up well. The supply was large. Cape jasmines are arriving daily from Texas. These came in handy for design work. The best were sold at 50 cents per dozen at a good profit. Candidum lilies have made their appearance and bring from $4 to $6 per hundred spikes. There was a large supply of coreopsis, hardy garden pinks and daisies, and the demand for them was good. Common and fancy ferns, smilax and asparagus shared well in the demand.

Various Notes.

The members of the St. Louis Florists' Club will celebrate the twenty-ninth anniversary of the club June 10, in Odd Fellows' hall, with a smoker and interesting talks. The trustees will arrange for this meeting, and special notices will be sent to all members. As the busy season will then be at an end, the largest attended meeting of the year is looked for by the officers.

William Ellison and his son, Arthur, formerly of the Ellison Floral Co., are now in the employ of Mullanphy, Florist, at Seventh and Locust streets. Otto Sander, who was in business here some time ago, is also with this firm.

It rained almost continuously last week, and the cloudy weather, together with the cold, damp nights, mildewed the rose stock badly, which made it hard for the wholesalers to dispose of the blooms at a good price.

Charles Wors and his son, Joseph, are out on the country hills picking dagger ferns and wild maidenhair, as the old stock of ferns is becoming somewhat scarce.

Charles Young, manager of the cut flower department of C. Young & Sons Co., reports a busy shipping trade in cut flowers and plants for Memorial kept busy with orders for this day.

Miss M. S. Newman, at Spring and Olive streets, is having a big run of fashionable business in receptions, weddings and dinners. A number of large weddings are booked for this month.

George H. Angermueller had a number of good-sized shipping orders of Memorial day supplies the early part of last week. The local demand, too, was quite large.

Henry Emunds, the Belleville florist, says he has a big stock of his new yellow canna, Queen Helen, worked up.
He has a great many orders to fill for this fine canna.

George Pring, who has charge of the big orchid houses at the Missouri Botanical Garden, will put in all his spare time again this summer bowling for a local cricket club.

The trustees of the Florists' Club will this week make a tour of the pleasure grounds and select a place for the annual picnic. They will report the place they select, together with the date, at the club meeting June 10, for the approval of the members.

The east side branch of Grimm & Gorly had an attractive window display during the Elks' convention last week. A life-sized elk made of fiber, the work of Marion Uhl Schmidt, was much admired by all who saw it.

Wm. Winter, of Kirkwood, has opened a cut flower stand in the new Market Gardeners' building, at Vandeventer and Laclede avenues, which opened a week ago. As large crowds visit the building daily, the stand should prove a success.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was a caller here last week. He says he is looking forward to the next meeting of the American Carnation Society, to be held in St. Louis, January 26 and 27, 1916.

John Young, son of William C.
Young, was badly hurt last week, when an automobile ran into him while he was riding a motorcycle. The accident took place near the greenhouses, on Waterman avenue.

The pretty Memorial day window displays of Grimm & Gorly, Mullanphy, Young and the Riessen Floral Co. attracted a great deal of attention. All report good business for that day.

Francis M. Call, founder of the Christian Publishing Co., died last week. Mr. Call was well known in local trade circles, as the old St. Louis Carnation Co. was run by his son, F. B.
Call, and his son-in-law, James Dun-ford. The funeral took place May 29.

There were a number of suburban florists in the wholesale district last week. Among them were E. W. Guy,
H. Emunds, A. G. Fehr, W. J. Pilcher,
A. H. Ahner, Phil Goebel, W. A. Rowe,
Hugo Werner, Wm. Edwards, John Connon, E. Denker, Hugo Gross and
Wm. Winter. J. J. B.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business for Memorial day was better than expected. Cut flowers were plentiful, considering the cloudy weather of the preceding three weeks. Roses and carnations were in fine shape and the cut was heavier than expected.
Peonies, daisies and other outdoor flowers were plentiful, but did not exceed the demand. Peonies had the lead, while roses and carnations stood second.
Prices of all cut flowers for Memorial day were below the prices of last year.

Pot plants did not sell so well this year as expected. Some retail places had pans of three to ten plants of bedding stock all in bloom, but these did not move as fast as had been hoped.

floored with expensive moss-green tile. There is a balcony, halfway back in the store, for fancy baskets. The office will be under the balcony. The skylight in the ceiling is almost hidden and yet the store has plenty of light and air. An elevator is placed in the back of the store, for the purpose of conveying stock from the driveway or the basement to the store. The general color effect of the store is English buff, white enamel and mahogany. Arnold Ringier, of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, sent Mr. Murray a horseshoe in gold leaf for his new store and Mr. Murray placed the horseshoe over the door, inside.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a fine lot of hydrangeas, fuchsias, etc., for Memorial day and they sold fairly well. Business was a great deal better in cut flowers than in pot plants. The sales, on the whole, were up to expectations.

Henry Kusik & Co. had sold out entirely by Monday morning at 8 o'clock and telephoned different growers for more stock.

T. J. Noll & Co. report business the best they ever had and they could have sold a great deal more stock if it had been available. They had to turn down orders. Out-of-town trade was exceptionally heavy.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. received a fine lot of cut flowers from the firm's greenhouses and was able to fill all orders. Out-of-town business increased considerably.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports the busiest Memorial day in the company's experience. Out-of-town business was especially good.

A. F. Barbe's place was like a beehive. He had a large quantity of stock on hand to meet the demand, both in cut flowers and pot plants.

Miss J. E. Murray reports a heavy business. She was surprised at the number of magnolia wreaths that were sold.

Arthur Newell reports a fine week. He was busy with funeral work in the first part of the week and with

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION:

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., June 22 to 24, 1915.

THERE is not likely to be any shortage of cold storage longiflorums this season.

THE John H. Allen Seed Co., of Sheboygan, Wis., has increased its capital stock from $200,000 to $230,000.

TODAY it looks as though the war in Europe will have far more effect on the 1916 season seed supply than it has had this year.

J. M. CLARK, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, will go to Michigan June 10 to inspect radish crops. Mr. Clark will be gone about three weeks.

MOST of the seed houses have been experiencing the usual run of fill-in orders, but since the freeze in Michigan and northern Wisconsin, these should be considerably augmented.

ACCORDING to the latest reports from Holland, a good crop of hyacinth bulbs is expected, with the quantity of tulips below the average and narcissi and gladioli considerably less than last year.

It has been reported that a large proportion of the radish stock seed crop in the northern part of the southern peninsula of Michigan has been cut to the ground by a heavy frost. If it develops that this crop is actually ruined, the same must be necessarily true of the pea crop in the same latitude.

To commemorate the fortieth anniversary of Luther Burbank's coming to California, June 5 will be celebrated as Luther Burbank day at the Panama-Pacific exposition under the auspices of the Luther Burbank Co., of San Francisco, which will distribute free 50,000 packets of seed of recent Burbank creations.

THE reports from England indicate that the Holland bulb salesmen are having a good deal harder time there than they experienced in America. The way the American market was depressed while customers of long standing held bulbs for which they had been charged regular rates was as nothing to what was done to the English market under like conditions.

ALTHOUGH, according to the figures of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the imports of bulbs, bulbous roots and corms cultivated for their flowers or foliage, for the year ending June 30, 1914, were less than three-quarters of those of the previous year, their value was about fifteen per cent more. For the government's fiscal years 1912, 1913 and 1914 the imports of these lines were, in number, respectively 215,159,000, 288,646,000

1915 IS EXPOSITION AND CONVENTION YEAR IN CALIFORNIA

WE urge that you plan to visit California this season. Seedsmen who are interested in beans will find the seed bean farms at Carpinteria and Lompoc, where we produce large quantities of seed beans for seedsmen who are particular about quality, especially interesting during the summer season. We shall be glad to have you call on us at Carpinteria, the place where many of the leading varieties of Lima Beans were originated, several of them on our seed farms. We make a study of growing seed beans.

THERE is a large demand, which is constantly increasing, for canners' varieties of corn.

ENCOURAGED by the offer of better prices, Holland farmers have undertaken an unusually large acreage of spinach for seed this season.

THE government pure food bureau has decided that the name Lima must not be applied to beans that merely resemble Limas but which, in fact, are not Limas.

GRENELL WILL IS FILED.

Dispatches from Watertown, N. Y., name Miss Isabel M. Swett, manager of the W. H. Grenell establishment at Saginaw, Mich., as one of the beneficiaries under the will of Mr. Grenell, who died May 19 at Pierrepont Manor, N. Y. Miss Swett, the dispatches said, was bequeathed $5,000 in lumber company bonds as a reward for her faithful service as manager of the Saginaw headquarters.

The remainder of the estate, valued at about $150,000, was willed to a daughter, Mrs. Ella Huggins. The will was filed for probate May 25 in the surrogate's court at Watertown.

It was Mr. Grenell's often expressed wish that his grandson, William Grenell Huggins, now a lad in school, be educated to carry on the seed business now handed down to the boy's mother.

RAIN REDUCES COAST CROPS.

From the beginning of the rainy season in California, which started in November, there has been exceptionally large precipitation this season. The rainfall was so heavy that it caused some anxiety among the seed growers of the Santa Clara valley and elsewhere in the state. Now, however, the anxiety has turned to alarm, for there has been no let-up during May, which is ordinarily an exceedingly dry month. The average precipitation for May in the seed growing districts is considerably less than one inch, but this year nearly three inches has fallen during the month on some of the seed fields.

The following statistics compiled for The Review show how much heavier the precipitation has been this year than it is normally. The season of 1913-14 was, as will be seen, an unusually wet season, but the rainfall at Santa Clara and San Jose has been even heavier this year. At Hollister and Gilroy, although the precipitation is far above normal, it was, up to the beginning of May, behind last year's. The figures for May, 1915, are not yet available, but the Weather Bureau station at San Jose reports a fall of 2.66 inches up to May 24, and the rain has been heavy at other points as well.

The normal rainfall at San Jose during the months from November to April, inclusive, is 13.61 inches; in 1913-14 it was 18.82 inches, and in 1914-15, 19.52. At Santa Clara the normal fall for this period is 14.45; in 1913-14 the precipitation was 18.86, in 1914-15, 23.60. These figures show how much heavier the rain has been at these places this

With the lucky florist who had a bench of my famous Silver Pink Snapdragon Seedlings at his command for Memorial Day. We had a great show and received many words of praise and congratulations from visiting florists and from retail customers. Though we cut armfuls of S. P. blooms we did not have enough, and turned away many inquiries at wholesale.

Four other leading varieties that have cropped at their regular season gave practically no yield for this important flower day—a fact that is greatly advancing the popularity of our Silver Pink Seedlings, which can be so timed as to get blooms when you need them.

Now is the time to sow seed for fall crop. Stop hustling long enough to send your order. Price of seed of our original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seedling plants of same, at $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. Plants of Nelrose, Garnet and Yellow, at $5.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Remember, we grow snapdragons, and can supply your every need.

Mildew has appeared among the onions to such an extent as to cause some growers to predict already that the yield of seed will be exceedingly light. Hope will rise again, however, if the weather man puts the brake on his rain machine immediately; otherwise the outlook is gloomy.

In the lettuce fields, rot has set in. The same trouble is reported to have appeared in the beet fields. Up to this writing no other lines have been reported affected, though each rainy day brings added danger.

UNFORTUNATELY.

In The Review of May 13 is quoted the Minnesota law recently enacted in regard to the creation and enforcement of a lien against crops to secure payment for the seed therefor. Perhaps some of the Minnesota seedsmen may get the impression that this applies to all seeds. Unfortunately, it only applies to seed grain contracts, and not to all seeds. Curtis Nye Smith.

SPINACH IN TEXAS.

Texas is the state of big things, including big stories. Here is the prize spinach story:

"The winter and spring spinach crop upon the 1,500-acre farm which Del Walker and associates established in the valley of the Colorado river, near Austin, Tex., will aggregate approximately 215 carloads. Up to this time 160 carloads of 'greens' have been shipped, and there are about fifty-five carloads still in the field. The shipping season began December 30, and will end early in May. Each car contains 1,000 barrels of spinach, and the average price obtained per car is about $800. At this rate the total amount of money that will be realized from the season's crop will be about $172,000. Besides the enormous quantity of 'greens' which will have been shipped by the end of

SOUTHERN CORN LEAF-BEETLE.

Within the last fortnight serious invasions of the corn leaf-beetle have occurred. In many of the fields attacked it has been necessary to replant. The beetles can be killed, according to the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, by use of a poisoned bait composed of twenty-five pounds of wheat bran, one pound of Paris green, one gallon of low-grade molasses, the juice of three oranges, and sufficient water added to bring the mixture to a stiff dough. A heaping teaspoonful of this mixture is scattered about each hill of corn where the beetles are at work.

This pest has become of considerable importance in the last few years and is found in the southern half of the United States. It extends as far north as Cleaning up all rubbish in the corn fields early in the fall and delaying the planting of corn in the spring are two methods of lessening the damage from the southern corn leaf-beetle.

The beetle is a small, dark-bronze insect about three-sixteenths of an inch long and about one-third as wide, usually more or less covered with soil. They hibernate under piles of corn husks, fodder and shocks, etc., to emerge again in the spring to lay their eggs. When the beetles emerge, they attack

LOOKING AHEAD

All wars are followed by most prosperous times. The success of a merchant is measured largely by his ability to discount the future. The greater the war the more prosperous the constructive period. Fortunes have been made at such times by the men who were ready when the time came. Florists, by the very nature of their business, must figure ahead—and in this respect now is the time to get ready for the boom. Of course, a good many of you will not take this advice—times are too bad—but a few will, and they will get the advantage. We can quote you favorable prices now on Japan bulbs, and later on in the season our prices on other bulbs will be worth waiting for. We don't care to speculate on bulb prices—but we will sell on a small margin, DUTY PAID. And remember prices f. o. b. New York are safer than prices in Europe these times—many a florist will be stung on freights this year if he is not careful. The Holland-America Line is reported to have made more than 60% net profit on their entire capital stock last year—and as our laws are not effective for the regulation of rates, it is the duty of every American citizen, when he can, to buy his goods f. o. b. America, thus compelling the foreigners to pay this exorbitant freight—then perhaps a move will be made for reduced rates. Buy your lily bulbs now. Wait for our prices on other bulbs later.

young cocklebur and volunteer corn, since the crop is not ready for them at that time. As soon as they begin to feed upon the corn plant, evidence of their presence is afforded by the ragged appearance of the plant, and especially the notched edges of the leaves. Bulletin number 221 of the Department of Agriculture, "The Southern Corn Leaf-Beetle," treats fully of the insect.

A NEW TOMATO ROT.

Many carloads of Florida tomatoes have been injured during the last few months by a "black rot" or "black speck" disease which has been more prevalent this season than heretofore, although known to have occurred in that state for three or four years. The Department of Agriculture has published a technical study of this trouble, extending over three years. It finds that the disease, which will be called the Phoma rot, is new and not to be confused with other tomato rots. The fungus occurs in the fields, causing black specks on the leaves, stems and fruit. The fruit spots enlarge and become quite black, with pin-point-like pustules filled with spores. An important point is that the fungus seems to be unable to attack unmutated fruit. Some injury, either by insects, bruises or natural cracks, must be present to permit infection.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Los Angeles, Cal.—Capt. F. Edward Gray, of the Ingleside Floral Co., has been spending considerable time at San Diego, where his company has done some exceedingly skillful planting on the exposition grounds. He says the exposition is "the prettiest thing on earth" and urges all florists who visit the coast this season to take it in.

CALIFORNIA NARCISSUS GROWER.

J. S. Joseph, who is shown in the accompanying illustration in his narcissus field at San Leandro, Cal., sends not only this stock to the markets of Oakland and San Francisco, but also daffodils and other varieties of bulbous flowers. He has eleven acres of land devoted to this line of stock.

MARK CALIFORNIA PACKAGES.

Inasmuch as California has established terminal inspection of plants and plant products, all packages containing them mailed to California postoffices must be plainly marked, so that the proper procedure, described recently in these columns at the time of the passage of the federal bill, can be followed. Failure to mark such packages is punishable by a fine of not more than $100.

The plants and plant products subject to terminal inspection in the state of California are described as follows:

"All florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits and other seeds of fruit and ornamental trees or shrubs, and other plants and plant products for propagation, except vegetable and flower seeds, bedding plants, and other herbaceous plants and roots; provided, that this list of plants shall not apply to plants shipped under the certificate of the United States Department of Agriculture for propagation in the plant introduction and field station of the department at Chico, Cal."

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Wholesalers report a far better demand for all classes of stock, especially such stock as will ship long distances. The Memorial day demand increases here every year and there is no doubt that the present season marks the high place for this holiday. The outdoor roses are getting past their best, giving the indoor growers a chance, but carnations are still a drug on the market. Sweet peas are much improved and a few early dahlias are seen. Many fine gladioli and lilies are being sent in, as well as the popular blue delphiniums and other decorative material.

Various Notes.

F. B. Howlett, who for many years has represented the Monroe Nursery, owned by I. E. Ilgenfritz & Sons, at Monroe, Mich., has been visiting friends in this city and environment. He declares himself delighted with the country hereabouts and may consider locating here permanently.

J. S. Joseph in His Narcissus Field at San Leandro, Cal.

C. E. Shaw, well known locally as an experienced horticulturist, has taken up a government reservation near Acton and built a residence on it. He came to the city this week with a magnificent bunch of the red Mariposa lily, Calochortus Kennedyi.

Howard & Smith's sweet pea show was a great success, both in the flowers shown and in the patronage extended by the public. Fred Howard is certainly to be congratulated on his own fine crosses and those purchased from growers in Europe and elsewhere.

The H. N. Gage Co. has closed its doors as a wholesale concern and intends to go into the growing end entirely, at Montebello. Mr. Gage's company was probably the oldest wholesaler in town.

A most attractive little show was held in Glendale May 27, under the auspices of a ladies' club. A fine lot of flowers and other produce was shown, despite the lateness of the season. C. H. Woolsey and Kelly & McIlroy were local members of the trade who exhibited. From Los Angeles, Howard & Smith showed fine sweet peas and the Morris & Snow Seed Co. had a pretty exhibit. H. W. Turner and H. R. Richards, of Los Angeles, and F. Carruthers, of Glendale, were judges.

H. W. Turner is busy throwing out and replanting roses and he says that at the pace he drives them it is not wise to leave the plants in too long. He reports an excellent season, with the demand picking up again since the outdoor crop of roses has passed its best.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Last week's expectations of more liberal supplies for Memorial day were not disappointed; a few days of warm weather brought an abundance of most outdoor flowers. The shipping business, however, was decidedly heavy, causing an actual scarcity in some lines, despite the heavier crops, and prices in general were fairly high.

Callas, of which the supply is large, have been among the most important items in the shipping trade, while they are little used by the local trade. Shipments have gone out as far as Nebraska. A good deal of iris also has been shipped, besides great quantities of the cheaper outdoor stock. A flood of marguerites, stocks, gypsophilas, straw daisies, mignonette and marigolds has been coming in, but the daily offerings are readily absorbed. Though the supply of sweet peas has taken a sudden jump, prices are high, and a few buyers lately have been snapping up the bulk of the offerings. Carnations also are firmly held. Dwarf gladioli are plentiful, but the white varieties are eagerly taken up at rather stiff prices. A good deal of static is coming in, finding about the usual demand. The large yellow and blue native lupines are appearing and are something of a novelty to eastern visitors. Liliun giganteum does fairly well, with ample supplies. A good many small lots of oriental poppies are seen and they take well with the trade. Only a few peonies have appeared so far.

Cecile Brunner roses continue tremendously popular locally, and also figure prominently in the shipping trade. A few fine small moss roses have come in. Outdoor roses are plentiful and fine. Ulrich Brunner is taking the lead in popularity over all other large varieties at present. Aaron Ward is also strong. The call for white roses is spasmodic, being rather heavy at the moment. Orchids find satisfactory sale. Cattleyas are plentiful and as fine as ever, and phalaenopsis is popular. Some beautiful odontoglossums are also appearing. Among potted plants, rambler roses are still in evidence and there is an abundance of large bougainvilleas in full bloom.

Various Notes.

The announcement has just been issued of the grand national fall flower show, to be held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the department of horticulture of the Panama-Pacific exposition, in the Palace of Horticulture, October 21 to 26. Those in immediate charge will be: H. Plath, manager; John R. Fotheringham, assistant manager, and T. Taylor, secretary. It is expected that this will be the largest and finest flower show ever staged on the Pacific coast. A large number of medals and cash prizes have been donated by the Panama-Pacific Exposition Co., in addition to a number of important premiums given by prominent firms. Premiums are offered in 112 numbers. Chrysanthemums will be the most important flowers shown, but provision is made for the entry of cut roses, carnations, lily of the valley, lilies, herbaceous perennials, annuals, dahlias, tuberous begonias, orchids, palms, ferns, table decorations, bouquets, etc.

The international jury of awards for exhibits at the exposition has been at work for the last two weeks. The members of the jury in the division of arboriculture and floriculture are: Geo. C. Roeding, of Fresno, Cal., chairman; A. Van Vliet, of the Netherlands commission to the exposition, vice-chairman; Peter Bisset, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.; Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J.; R. Oda, of the Japanese commission to the exposition, and James Buchanan, of Cuba. The members of the seasonal jury, judging the exhibits from week to week up to August 1, are H. Plath, E. James and J. R. Fotheringham.

Within the last few weeks Dreer's collection of aquatics in the Palace of Horticulture at the exposition have been coming on finely, and the water lilies are just beginning to bloom.

the exposition is now blossoming finely and he is maintaining a display of cut roses in the Palace of Horticulture. The international competitive exhibit of roses will soon be ready, as some are beginning to blossom well. The Netherlands exhibit has replaced all bulbs with tuberous begonias, which are expected to make as fine a showing as did the tulips this spring. Another striking feature of the gardens, now in bloom, is the collection of new hybrid delphiniums by Newell F. Vanderbilt, of San Rafael, Cal. The exhibits of sweet peas, which showed few blossoms up to a week ago, have been brought out finely by the hot weather of the last few days, and the gladiolus and carnation exhibits will be in full bloom probably in another week. Sutton & Sons, the English seedsmen, have a large exhibit of annuals now in full bloom in the gardens, and have also completed the installation of their exhibit in the Palace of Horticulture. Another large exhibit recently installed in the building is that of the Luther Burbank Co.

Charles Stoppenbeck, on Polk street near Sutter, is showing some handsome baskets of baby moss roses this week. As he is one of the first of the season to offer such stock, they are receiving considerable attention.

The E. W. McLellan Co. reports a heavy Memorial day shipping business, principally in outdoor stock of many descriptions.

Geo. H. Evans, of the Jordan Park Floral Co., is down from his Sonoma county ranch for a while. He is now figuring on planting some flowers in addition to vegetables, and hopes to bring in something a little better than the ordinary in the way of bulbous stock for his store during the coming season.

Luke J. Uzick, who was formerly a decorator for A. O. Stein, has joined the force of Joseph's, on Grant avenue.

There is a rumor out, but unconfirmed, of a new flower shop to be started near Stockton and O'Farrell streets, where there are two or three vacant store rooms.

Albert O. Stein is still getting large decorative jobs nearly every day, either at the exposition or at some of the larger halls about town, but principally in connection with exposition functions. May 26 he carried out a big decoration in Ulrich Brunner roses for an entertainment given by the foreign commissioners to the exposition to the state commissioners. Other decorations were for the opening of the Argentina and New Jersey buildings, for a reception and a ball for the bankers' convention and for a large affair of the national exposition commission. Mr. Stein has just received a large shipment of fine Italian vases, etc., for use in decorations.

J. W. Wolters, a Los Angeles florist, passed through San Francisco a few days ago on a trip to the Hawaiian islands.

Women's clubs at Sacramento, Cal., have been offering prizes for the best home gardens, vacant lots, etc., between now and next fall. This is causing an active interest in plants, seeds, etc., and is helping the trade to an appreciable degree.

The various local sub-committees of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society have been holding frequent meetings during the last few weeks, and while Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

no definite statement is given out as yet, it is expected that a good deal of definite progress will be shown at next week's meeting of the society. The meeting for bowling practice, May 21, was well attended and there is a fair prospect that an effective team will be organized. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Heavy rains the first half of last week injured outdoor flowers, and some varieties were rendered practically useless. The florists were unable to meet the demand for carnations for Memorial day. Wholesalers report unusually heavy orders from out of town. The principal flowers available were carnations, roses, snapdragons, stocks, sweet peas and lilies; outdoor-grown peonies, roses, delphiniums, campanulas, heperis, poppies, cornflowers, iris and pinks. Funeral work has been good, and counter trade holds up quite well. The seedsmen report a sharp falling-off in business, such as is usual in June. The season is over for the nurserymen, and planting out and propagating are now being done.

Various Notes.

Miss Sybil Baker has been elected queen of the rose festival. She has twelve maids of honor, and each is given an official name after a variety of rose.

A. B. Molloy, of Sherwood, was a recent visitor. For several years he has grown onions under contract for California seed growers. His onions were shipped and the seed grown there. This year the former buyers are trying to raise their own bulbs, but Mr. Molloy hopes to renew his contract for next year.

Wm. Schaumann, formerly of Portland, who has been engaged in the nursery and landscape business for the last two years at Vancouver, B. C., has returned to this city.

Guy M. Pilkington recently made a business trip to Spokane. Conditions there appeared quite favorable to him. He says his trip resulted satisfactorily.

H. T. Fleishauer, of Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, was in town recently. He says their business is about equally divided between the growing of asters for seed and for cut flowers. He reports a good business so far this year.

The Tonseth Floral Co. held a big quantity of peonies in cold storage for Memorial day, which came out in good condition. S. W. W.

ASHES IN CONCRETE.

Please let me know whether ashes from a furnace would do as well as gravel and sand for making concrete for walls. I have used it for walks and it answers well for that, but I do not know how it would do for walls. Of course, I would reinforce the concrete with iron pipes. L. M.—N. S.

I would certainly use sand and gravel in preference to ashes for the wall. C. W.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

NURSERYMEN in Tennessee in general report that things cleaned up more closely than they had any expectation of and that there was little of value to go to the brush heap. In fact, there was a real shortage in some lines.

THE Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen and the California Association of Nurserymen will hold their joint convention at San Francisco August 12 to 14. August 16 has been designated as Nurserymen's day at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

E. P. BRYAN, of the Bound Brook Nurseries, Bound Brook, N. J., reports that there has been a good sale of ornamental trees and shrubs this spring. There has also been a large demand for peach trees. The demand for apple trees has not been quite so large as it often is in the spring.

ACCORDING to the figures of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, imports of nursery stock for the year ending June 30, 1914, showed an increase of over ten per cent over the previous year. The value of the imports for the fiscal years 1912, 1913 and 1914 are, respectively, $1,251,365, $1,379,913 and $1,514,669.

MORE than 400 motor cars were parked near the peony farm of the Wild Bros. Nursery Co., at Sarcoxie, Mo., on a recent Sunday. Fifty acres of peonies in bloom attracted visitors by the hundred. The necessity of gathering the peony and the strawberry crops at the same time keeps the large force of this company on the jump.

It seems a general thing this year that surplus stock is being used for advertising purposes instead of for making bonfires. Nurserymen are coming to understand that the recipients of the stock, no matter in which of many various ways it is distributed, are not those who would otherwise be customers, but perhaps may become such. They see that they are not only not losing any profits this year, but maybe paving the way for additional ones another season.

W. H. FORRISTEL, manager of the Bellevue Avenue Nursery Co., Plainfield, N. J., who was obliged to sell the nurseries a year ago last January because of ill health, has so far recovered by a complete rest from business cares for more than a year that he has repurchased the nurseries and is doing business as usual at the place which he has occupied since 1892, with the exception of the period of enforced absence during which he has been recovering his health.

THE Cherry Hill nurseries of T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., at West Newbury, Mass., were the subject of a special article in the Newburyport News for May 14. The nurseries now contain 400 acres and were established eighty-three years ago by George Thurlow, the father of Thomas C. Thurlow. The present members of the company are George C. Thurlow, president; Winthrop H. Thurlow, treasurer; their mother, Mrs. Sarah Thurlow; a sister, Susan, and a brother, Edward, who is a clergyman and now in China.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

NEW YORK AMENDS LAW.

In an amendment to the agricultural law of 1909 passed by the last New York legislature, provision is made for the recovery of damages for fruit trees which prove untrue to name as specified on the label. Such recovery may be made in civil action by the purchaser at any time before the third bearing year. In an action to recover such damages, the burden of proof that the buyer agreed to a contract exempting the seller from liability rests on the seller.

In selling lots of twenty-five trees or more, the nurseryman must accompany the shipment with an itemized list, including much detailed information if the buyer makes a written request for it. The buyer must notify the seller within five days of receipt of any discrepancy between the list and the labels.

In short, the law encumbers the sale of fruit trees with some red tape. This makes more work for the nurseryman, but at the same time, if he adheres to the formalities of the law, it will serve to protect him from possible damage suits. The amended section, No. 264, of the law now reads as follows:

Damages accruing from sale of trees. Nothing contained in section 263 or any other section of this chapter shall be construed to deprive a purchaser of any fruit-bearing tree of his remedy at law in a civil action to recover damages sustained by reason of such trees proving untrue to name as specified on the label. Such damages may be recovered in a civil action by the purchaser of such fruit-bearing trees or by his personal representative or assignee at any time prior to the third bearing year, provided the purchaser notifies the seller as soon as he has reason to believe that such trees are not true to name. In any action to recover dam-

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Memorial day business was good. The bulk of the demand went to peonies and cheaper flowers and the better grades of stock moved out a little slowly. This is especially true of roses. Practically all peony offerings cleaned up. Lilies were plentiful. Offerings in other lines were up to the standard, as far as quantity is concerned, of the last few weeks. Good carnations sold well, but the pickled ones hardly found a market at any price. Shipping business was good.

It is expected that this week, being commencement week in the local public high schools, will be a good one as far as the call for the better grades of stock is concerned. Red, yellow, pink and white roses, American Beauties and cornflowers will undoubtedly have the bulk of the demand.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell had a large lot of jasmines for Memorial day. They were the first in the market from the south. The last few weeks have been busy ones for George Fern, the decorator.

He has used a considerable quantity of smilax.

E. G. Gillett reports a satisfactory Memorial day business.

L. H. Kyrk had a fine lot of delphiniums from George Klotter for Memorial day.

P. J. Olinger had a fine lot of Richmond for commencement day.

A. Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., has been shipping some fine Radiance roses to this market. C. H. H.

New London, Conn.—George E. Fisher, manager of the local store of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., has been called to Westminster, Vt., by the death of his grandmother.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

John Dieckmann, Elm Grove, W. Va., has given considerable space and time to the growing of fine tomatoes, for which he finds a ready market. He is cutting some good carnations and roses.

George Greiner, Bridgeport, O., will stop growing flowers after the present season, and devote his whole time to vegetables.

Albert Lash, Warwood, Wheeling, W. Va., is the proud father of a fine, big baby boy.

George F. Smith, Wheeling, W. Va., had one of the best plant seasons he can remember, having cleaned up everything completely.

W. F. Zane & Son, Wheeling, are busy with funeral work and have had a good plant trade.

Frank Seibert, Wheeling, will go to the exposition soon after the present busy season and spend several weeks in the west.

John Hellstern, Wheeling, is one of the busiest men with plants and bedding work.

Arthur Langhans, Wheeling, is getting ready for several large decorations of artificial flowers, which he works out in such manner as to attract admiration to their richness and beauty.

Misses Forbes & Donahey, Wheeling, have had several large orders for dinner parties. They also are having an abundance of design work.

Charles R. O'Beirne, Martins Ferry, O., has added a flower section to his confectionery store. He reports business better than he expected.

Albert Kehrer & Sons, Martins Ferry, O., have had a successful season with plants. They are having their residence raised beyond reach of high water.

The J. W. Dudley Sons Co., Parkersburg, W. Va., made a strong display of artificial wreaths for Memorial day, for which they found a ready sale.

The Marietta Floral Co., Marietta, O., has a good cut of roses and carnations. They have been quite busy with funeral work.

Norvel Kiger, Marietta, had a nice display of plants for Memorial day.

GERANIUMS

Don't plant your culls, left over from the bedding season, to make stock for next season. Your Geraniums are an important item and the best stock procurable is none too good. We have a fine lot of young plants, propagated especially for this purpose. Have the following varieties, at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000:

S. A. Nutt, crimson; Marvel, dark red; Decorator, orange-scarlet; A. Ricard, orange-scarlet; Beaute de Poitevine, salmon.

We will soon begin delivering young Poinsettias. Write us if you need some. $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

BOUNDBROOK, N. J.

George Schmidt, the Somerville florist, has established a branch store at 422 Main street, in this city. The new store has been quite successful thus far.

Business is reported good in the greenhouse department of the Boundbrook Nurseries, this year's trade exceeding last year's. The stock of 10,000 geraniums was mostly sold out by Memorial day. There are 8,000 mums under cultivation and 6,000 carnations. Work has just begun on planting for the next season.

A new greenhouse, 48x500, is being built at the range of Thos. Young, Jr., for Beauty roses. The building is being erected by Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth, N. J., and is of the newest pattern, with wide spacing between the rafters. One of the features of the greenhouse not usually found is a passageway or corridor through the center from side to side, dividing the greenhouse practically into two greenhouses, each 250 feet long. The passageway is principally to prevent drafts. As this greenhouse is near Mr. Young's residence, it is a little more decorative than usual, having an elaborate hood over the entrance nearest the house and hoods over the side entrances. Mr. Young has never made a specialty of roses before, but is known throughout the east for his high-grade orchids and gardenias.

Ludwig Wild, who makes a specialty of growing gardenias, has just finished planting his new crop. The last gardenia crop was fine. Mr. Wild also grows many sweet peas, which bore a medium crop last season.

Charles Zvolanek, specialist in sweet peas, is putting new sidings in his greenhouses. As a between-season crop, Mr. Zvolanek has planted a large number of asters in one of his greenhouses. He has also planted a large number of chrysanthemums. R. B. M.

Colfax, Ill.—Nat Ricketts has sold his residence and greenhouses to J. D. Grizzle, who recently came here from Glasgow, Ky., as the work is getting too heavy for his years. He will assist Mr. Grizzle until fall.

Improved Whitmani and Whitmani Compacta, $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000 250 at 1000 rate

The Improved Whitmani is a more graceful and a little lighter frond. It is more compact, truer to the type and shows very little reverting. This variety is a great improvement over the old Whitmani.

ASCHMANN BROS., Second and Bristol Sts., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The veteran, Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, accompanied by H. Faust, of Merion, Pa., was among the week-enders at Atlantic City during my recent visit. Mr. Craig commented on the great changes made at this famous resort and added, taking in a big draught of ozone, that the old ocean is just as invigorating as ever.

W. C. Hart, East Walden, N. Y., was unable to attend the recent meeting of dahlia growers in New York city. He has one of the largest farms in the Empire State, devoted almost exclusively to this popular flower.

F. X. Dienst, Middletown, N. Y., says last week's was the best Memorial business in his experience of a quarter of a century. Everything that had a bloom on it sold. He ran strong on pelargoniums and ivy-leaved geraniums as leaders.

H. B. Wisner, Middletown, sold out clean. He had a big run on cut flowers.

Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., made a fine display in their handsome store during Memorial week and had a satisfactory business, as usual.

William Williams, Kingston, ran short of flowering plants. He could use twice his amount of glass. This will come later.

Henry Hansen, Catskill, N. Y., had good Memorial business, which was interrupted by a tragedy, when an assistant, Henry Lang, committed suicide, presumably while temporarily insane.

Frank J. Weiss, Port Jervis, N. Y., finds business so good as to warrant the purchase of additional land. He will install a new model No. 24 Kroe-schell boiler as soon as the spring rush is over. Located near the cemetery, on what was virtually a ruin, he has built up, by grim determination, a flourishing business in a short time.

The Tripp Floral Co., Walton, N. Y., reports satisfactory results from its advertisement in The Review. Boilers are heavy things to move; they have one left to dispose of. Improvements will be carried out during the summer.

Bowman & Co. have acquired the Holtslander greenhouses, at Liberty, N. Y. Paul Johanssen is in charge and reports good sales. W. M.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

We will introduce the above new fern on August 1st, 1915. In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

LEGISLATION IN MICHIGAN.

During its recent session the Michigan legislature had up for consideration a bill (S. B. 234) that would have required the inspection of many greenhouse boilers now uninspected, and the employment of licensed engineers in many greenhouse establishments in the place of the present firemen. The bill passed the Senate but did not get out of committee in the House, largely because of opposition by thrasher engine interests. The bill no doubt will come up again at the next session, when florists should be heard. It is not so bad a bill as some that have been offered, as it follows quite closely the code of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

THE COAL MARKET.

Readers who are satiated with war news, columns and columns of war news of the most startling character, are not likely to be electrified or even mildly inspired by such monotonous reports of continued dullness as are now coming from the coal market. A Chicago coal reporter, oppressed with the difficulty of his task in manufacturing news out of such colorless materials, prefaces his weekly letter thus: "A week is a mighty short time in these days of dullness to note any big change in one section of the coal market. As a matter of fact, the essential features of the Chicago market this week are almost precisely the same as they were a week ago."

And yet the public ought to be deeply if not excitedly interested in the present situation in coal, for the circumstances and the prospects are in some respects unprecedented and are largely due to this selfsame war which is so engrossing some people's thoughts. Florists and other users of smokeless coal ought especially to give the matter close attention—such attention as will result in the right course of action, as the market in smokeless shows real symptoms of a change in conditions.

Says the Chicago writer already quoted: "Smokeless coal of all sizes continues to gain in strength. Two weeks ago the smokeless operators were given the hope of selling coal in foreign markets by the withdrawal of English coal from large selling zones. Last week they had some inquiries and, this fact becoming known, inland buyers began to think of placing contracts. This last week the foreign prospects

TO THE MAN WHO NEEDS A BOILER

THE CUSTOMERS' INTEREST FIRST—is the basis of the Kroeschell standard, and this principle makes the Kroeschell policy the most liberal of all in the greenhouse boiler business.

The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. We make every type of boiler that is used, from the smallest house heater to the largest water tube steam boiler (600 horsepower). For the above reason we can furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

It is the Kroeschell principle to supply only that type of boiler which is best suited to the conditions, and under no circumstances do we take any other stand.

WHEN YOU BUY—GET A KROESCHELL
"THE BOILER OF GENUINE EFFICIENCY"

The Kroeschell

is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

13,468,320 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years.

The Kroeschell

has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell with the same piping and with less fuel.

The Kroeschell is sold direct from factory to users. This eliminates the unnecessary middle-man's profit.

Every Boiler Made at Our Works is of the Highest Standard

MATERIAL—governed by Kroeschell specifications—the best that money and brains can produce. WORKMANSHIP—the kind that is an inspiration to all other boiler makers. BOILER EFFICIENCY—determined by actual tests under working conditions. BOILER RATINGS—honest and true blue—guaranteed actual working capacities.

Probably you have wondered why the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler is not sold by any of the greenhouse construction companies. In justice to all concerned we feel it is our duty to state that the Kroeschell Boiler is never sold by any one but—The KROESCHELL BROS. CO.—We have no agents, and as our prices are based on sales direct from factory to user, we do not quote anyone dealing in boilers special resale prices. Our stand in this matter has brought out a lot of competition; nevertheless the great efficiency of the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler cannot be disputed and in spite of the keen competition the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler is heating more glass than any other make.

Get the Kroeschell First

In 1911 I purchased a No. 1 Kroeschell boiler to heat our uptown plant and can truthfully say that this boiler has given entire satisfaction, as it does the work so easily.

At our other place we had a large cast iron sectional boiler; two years ago we cracked two (2) sections and but for the mild weather would have lost everything before we could make repairs. That experience was enough for me to show me that the cast iron boiler man has the best of it when I went to him for new sections, as they could only be gotten from him and he made the price to suit himself. So this year (1913) I thought I would take no more chances, so we just installed a No. 5 Kroeschell. I can get better results with the Kroeschell than with any other boiler I have ever fired. I believe if the Kroeschell were better known amongst the growers generally they would use no other.

have developed still more definitely and the inland buyers, including those in Chicago, are beginning to be uneasy. Thus contracts which were delayed while the retailers haggled over prices are now being closed and the market has developed to a point where it can almost be said that, barring some untold developments, prices for this year are established. Spot business has been light."

USING FOUR 4-INCH FLOWS.

Please let us know how many 2-inch returns will be needed to keep my greenhouse, 35x95, at a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is as low as 20 degrees below zero. The house is seven feet high to the eaves and is exposed on all sides. We shall use four lines of 4-inch boiler tubes as flows. There are five benches. Would you advise the use of any pipes on the outside walls? The aisles will be a little narrow for the use of piping, unless we cut down the width of the benches a few inches to provide more room.
H. E. & C. W. K.—Ia.

To heat a house 35x95, with 7-foot walls, to 50 degrees when the temperature is 20 degrees below zero outside, I would use twelve 2-inch return pipes in addition to the four 4-inch boiler flues used as flows. One flow pipe

It will probably be best to have the other flow pipes on the purlin posts, or suspended from about the middle of the sashbars, and the returns may be under the benches, or in the walks if beds are used. In case the boiler is below the level of the greenhouse floor, the flow pipes may be under the benches also.

The Market.

During the cool week that has just passed, business continued to hold out well. The temperature fell at times during the week as low as 38 degrees, causing a few growers to be somewhat anxious about the stock planted outdoors. In the cut flower market the best business was done on Friday, May 28, in connection with Memorial day. The peony crop was about in its glory at this time and the peonies were cleaned up at prices ranging from $1.50 to $5 per hundred. Carnations and roses also were in good demand. Lots of weigelas and other outdoor stock were also offered in the markets. Plant sales were good; almost everything in the flowering line was bought. There seems to be a scarcity of geraniums among some of the growers this season, judging from the many inquiries being made for plants of blooming size.

The retail stores nearly all report a satisfactory Memorial day business and a good many say trade was a considerable improvement on the corresponding period of last year, not only at Memorial day, but throughout the spring.

Various Notes.

George Cook had a heavy cut of peonies on Saturday, May 29, and quickly disposed of all of them at his stall in the Lexington market.

A. Spath, Jr., & Son are busy building and repairing at their place near Roland Park. They are erecting a new house, 30x80, and a storage building, 16x35, and are also extending and repairing their other houses. They are replacing all walls formerly of wood with concrete and iron.

Chas. H. Cook has purchased a new Ford touring car. Having converted his first one into a delivery car, he found he had to have another for pleasure use.

Max A. Fierstein, of the Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia, and Charles S. Ford, representing A. Herrmann, New York, were callers during the week.

M. Wells featured red, white and blue wrapped fiber chenille wreaths for his Memorial day trade.

G. A. Lotze, Jr., is cutting outdoor sweet peas at his place near Glenburnie.

The police force is attempting to keep the street fakers off the streets in the shopping district. The fakers claim that as long as they hold the permission of the abutting property owners they are privileged to occupy a part of the curb, while the police claim that they blockade the streets and obstruct traffic. The Market.

The weather is getting somewhat warm and stock is beginning to show the effects of it. Roses and carnations are becoming small and soft and are bothered with mildew and thrips. Sweet peas are going off crop and their quality is inferior. Gladioli are here and are fine. Peonies this year were the best ever known, but the season is drawing to a close.

Trade is extraordinarily good, owing to the fact that this is commencement season. School and college closings begin here about May 1 and continue until the middle of June. Exclusive of the big holidays, this is the best season of the year. Wedding work is not quite so good as usual at this season, but the prospects are that it will be good during the month of June. Funeral work has been so heavy that at times it has been difficult to supply the stock.

Various Notes.

Tom Joy, of Nashville, was in Knoxville May 18 and paid all the local florists a visit.

Mr. Kimmell, of Nashville, was here May 19 and 20 and bought planting stock to be used in his new place.

H. M. Stetzer, of Morristown, spent several days in Knoxville last week.

The farmers' convention was held at the university farm during the week beginning May 17 and was largely attended by farmers from all over the state.

John Dailey, Jr., brother of A. H. Dailey, died May 24. Members of the craft hereby wish to extend their deepest sympathy.

C. W. Crouch has been doing an excellent business during the last month. He has been shipping 3,000 or 4,000 peonies daily to Chicago and Philadelphia, and has also had an excellent plant trade.

A. H. Dailey is doing a good business in bedding plants. Cut flowers are plentiful and the demand is great.

A. J. McNutt is cutting some fine gladioli and roses, which are cleaned up daily.

Mrs. R. H. Ryno is doing a great bedding plant business. Wedding work is also heavy, with cut flowers rather scarce.

The month of May has been a record-breaker for C. L. Baum. Funeral flowers and bouquets for school commencements have been in great demand. Good stock is at a premium.

The Market.

The weather last week was quite cool and there were several frosty nights, which did considerable damage to tender herbaceous plants and seedlings that had been set out early. Trade has been fair, but everything points to a big Memorial day business. Carnations are of good quality, but are somewhat scarce and therefore high in price. Darwin tulips are plentiful. Lilacs, peonies, Narcissus poeticus, swainsonas, forget-me-nots, outdoor valley, cornflowers and daisies are all abundant. A great many magnolia and galax wreaths were sold. Geraniums, spiræas, ramblers, forget-me-nots, dracænas and Boston ferns were sold in large quantities. Roses are somewhat high in price. These were not in great demand, as they are not lasting for cemetery use. Harrisii lilies are plentiful once more, but callas are out of season. Sweet peas are excellent and the demand is strong. Outdoor valley is good this year. Baby gladioli, yellow and white marguerites, bachelor's buttons, gardenias and orchids are all abundant.

Since Memorial day was celebrated, in a way, on three days, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the volume of business done was greater than ever before.

Various Notes.

May 27, Miss Edna Goehring entertained a number of the friends of Miss Edith Christy, who is to be married the latter part of June. The greenhouse and store forces of S. A. Anderson were well represented. Everyone had a wonderful time, and Miss Goehring made a most hospitable hostess.

During the night of May 26, damage to the extent of $3,000 was done at Forest Lawn cemetery, when the plants in several hundred vases were partly destroyed by a heavy frost. Some of the plants can be used in refilling the urns, but the majority are an entire loss. The Wm. Scott Co., Newlands & Co. and S. A. Anderson lost heavily.

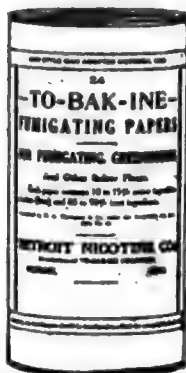

Nearly all of the downtown stores had attractive Memorial day window displays. The branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son had a fine display of wreaths. Laurel, galax and magnolia wreaths were used, with a large American flag as a background. Stroh's Quality Shop also had an attractive window.

Recent visitors were S. D. Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., and J. Berg, of Lion & Co., both of New York.

The Colonial Flower Shop had the order for the Warner-Cohn wedding, which called for an original scheme of white snapdragons, forget-me-nots and Sweetheart roses. The latter were used in formal designs.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Palmer attended the graduation exercises of the Mt. Vernon seminary, at Washington, D. C.,

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

There has been a heavy trade here in bedding plants, especially geraniums, which have been cleaned up in fine shape. All that showed color were sold out early and many that were out of bloom were also disposed of. By all reports, more geraniums were sold here than ever before. Other bedding plants, such as salvias, petunias, vincas, etc., also found a ready sale. Porch and window boxes have been in great demand and have used up an enormous quantity of stock; they are getting more popular every year. Ferns have found a ready sale and large numbers are used on porches and in window boxes. There has been a good demand for palms for the summer months.

The supply of cut flowers has been heavy, with the demand about up to the standard, except for Memorial day, when trade was a little lighter than usual, as there was an enormous quantity of peonies on the market and there were several wagons loaded with them standing near the cemetery gates; there was also a good deal of other outdoor stock, all of which had a tendency to cut down the sale of indoor flowers. Funeral work has been heavy of late and used up a lot of stock.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens reports a heavy Memorial day business, which cleaned up everything in the way of blooming plants.

Underwood Bros. have had a busy time in the spring rush, besides having a great deal of funeral work.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has about got through with the usual spring rush and the number of window boxes was far ahead of last year.

The Livingston Seed Co. has had some extra fancy sweet peas, which have found a ready sale. The firm's business has been good and has cleaned up a lot of stock. J. M.

Wichita, Kan.—The Riverside park greenhouse has been completed, and Superintendent Engels is now busy moving the plants from the old quarters to the new. The greenhouse is 20x80 feet.

GROW*How to apply
RADIUM BRAND
Fertilizer (RAF) in June

Plants are living things and need food while they are growing. June is a splendid time to apply that ideal plant food, Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.). Top dress your lawn with it, dig it in around your flowers, vegetables, shrubbery, etc. Feed the plants that they may have strength and vitality, and they will come through the summer strong and beautiful. One pound will fertilize 50 square feet, or a plot 10x5 feet.

contains Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash and Radium Element. Radium has an influence described by scientists as very similar in its effects upon vegetation to the ultra-violet rays of the sun, and as applied to growing things is the most important discovery of the century.

How to Get Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.)

Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.) meets a need among thousands of people who grow things in a small way, and want a concentrated plant food in handy form. Your dealer probably has it; if not, we will send, prepaid, any of the following. East of the Mississippi River. Beyond, add 5c lb.

What They Say:

Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held at Fireman's hall, Wednesday, May 26. There was a large attendance of members, and final preparations for the show June 11 were made. A. M. Robertson, of Jericho, L. I., was elected to active membership.

There was a good exhibition of flowers and vegetables. Messrs. Hothersall, Gibson and Beaton were appointed judges and reported as follows: Monthly prize: Asparagus, Chas. E. Moyses; lilac, Arthur Patten; peonies, Jas. Duckham. Vase of lupines, honorable mention, Alfred Walker; seedling melon, certificate of merit, Jos. Robinson; vase of sweet peas, honorable mention, Frank Kyle; dish of spinach, honorable mention, Alfred Walker.

Mr. Robinson's seedling melon, Royal Sovereign x Northwood, attracted a great deal of attention and when the judges and a number of the members tasted it, it was unanimously declared a distinct new variety.

Miss Elizabeth S. Hoyt offered a prize of $5 for the best vase of delphiniums at the coming show; A. R. Kennedy, for Kennedy & Hunter, offered a prize of $10 to be used as the society saw fit.

Mr. Moyses gave a talk on asparagus; Mr. Walker spoke on the culture of Dictamnus albus; Mr. Robinson gave the history of his seedling melon; Harry Lee, of Westbury, gave a little talk on the doings in Westbury, and John Sorsick closed the evening with one of his humorous talks.

A. R. Kennedy, Sec'y.

Elmira, N. Y.—J. Edwin Morrow has completed his greenhouse at the southwest corner of Church and Grove streets. In addition to conducting a cut flower and potted plant business, Mr. Morrow expects to grow vegetables.

Des Moines, Ia.—May 31 to June 5 is flower box week in this city. Pledges were secured in advance from business men, stating that they would install window or electrolier boxes, hanging baskets, or some other form of floral decorations during the week. The florists were leaders in getting out their displays, to set the example for those who would be their customers.

ROSE SOCIETY AT ARLINGTON FARM

Fifty members of the American Rose Society braved the rain and mud June 2 to inspect the test garden at Arlington farm on the occasion of its dedication. Four hundred varieties of rose bushes, the gifts of members of the society, were formally presented to the federal government.

IN spite of the fact that, as Robert Pyle said, the ceremony turned out to be more of a christening than a dedication, a party of over fifty braved the wet weather in order to attend the American Rose Society's trip of inspection to the Washington rose test garden, at Arlington farm, the experiment station of the Department of Agriculture, about ten miles from the national capital across the line into Virginia. On this tract of two acres, set aside for the garden two years ago by the federal government, have been planted over 400 rose bushes furnished by members of the society.

The visitors gathered at 1 o'clock at the store of Gude Bros. Co. and took automobiles to Arlington. The continued rains had made conditions such that thorough inspection was impossible, and the automobile ride about the city had to be foregone for the same reason. Before returning, however, the party visited Arlington cemetery, the soldiers' burying ground.

The Meeting.

Upon reconvening at the hall, the members of the party were welcomed by William F. Gude on behalf of the florists of the city. Wallace R. Pierson, retiring president of the society, told of the inception of test gardens by the organization with the planting of the rose bushes at Elizabeth park, at Hartford, Conn., at the invitation of Alex. Cummings, Jr., then superintendent of that park. He spoke of the work of the Washington test garden committee and surrendered the gavel to Chairman Robert Pyle, in acknowledgment of his committee's efforts in planning the meeting. When Mr. Pyle had taken the chair, Commissioner Louis Brownlow welcomed the guests on behalf of the District of Columbia.

In response to the speech of President Pierson formally presenting to the national government the rose bushes planted in the garden, Dr. William Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, spoke in place of the Secretary of Agriculture. Following him, F. L. Mulford explained the general plan of the garden and the features to be developed. In regard to the latter, he said:

"On the left as we went in, the first five beds all the way across will be devoted to tea and hybrid tea roses. Some of you got over to the sixth bed, and it is there the purpose to develop Wichuraiana hybrids. We have not as yet worked out a scheme that is entirely satisfactory to us. Some of you may have noticed what we are doing with the moss roses. On the fences all around are the climbing roses of the various types, and on each side the hybrids have been grouped. On the other side we grouped many of the other varieties. Just inside and, in fact, on both sides, we propose using the climbing tea. You may have noticed on the fence two heights of posts. On the taller ones we have endeavored to plant the tallest and most vigorous growing, and on the inside of the posts we have planted some of the same kind and will eventually throw them over the wall and get the effect of the roses over the walks just where the tall posts are and at the corners. It is also hoped eventually to cover the entrance with some formal design, with a light framework which will be covered with roses. Other embellishments are in mind, and we propose to erect a simple structure and also cover it with roses. We are going to use the Dr. Van Fleet.

More Roses Wanted.

"I want to appeal to the members of the American Rose Society to use more strenuous efforts to provide additional roses, which we should have in the garden. This year we have only increased the number of roses by about 100. I feel strongly we should have 300 or 400 more at this stage of development. We should have a large number of varieties here, and we can only get them by the members each feeling a personal responsibility to provide these and spreading the idea that others should provide them. We want roses, the rare varieties and the more common kinds.

"The test of the new varieties is an important feature, and, of course, that means that the new varieties must be provided in order to have them to test. We have had two shipments and are testing them in the garden now, but it ought to be the natural thing to have every new rose come to the garden to be tested. We need frequent visits from the members of the society to check up the roses as we have them entered. As you probably remember, the American Rose Society has agreed to label the roses, and an important part of its task, we consider, is the checking up of the names as we have them in the garden."

L. C. Corbett, of the Department of Agriculture, told of laying out the farm in 1901 and of plans for its future development. Dr. Van Fleet, the rose expert of the department, also spoke. David Fairchild related the activities of a representative of the department who has been gathering roses in northern China for production in this country. George Field, the Washington grower, Secretary Benjamin Hammond, Dr. A. Patten, representing the Brookland Rose Society, and Peter Bisset, of the Department of Agriculture, addressed the meeting. Wm. F. Gude called attention to the work of Representative C. C. Carlin, of Virginia, whose efforts had obtained so good a situation for the garden and improvements in the roads to it.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent among the roses at Twin Oaks, the present home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell and former residence of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, donor of the Hubbard gold medal of the American Rose Society. After an inspection of the grounds and greenhouses, the party was served with tea in the conservatory.

NEW YORK SHOW.

The June exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York and the American Rose Society was held in the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, June 5 and 6. The continued cold weather just before the exhibition retarded the peonies and roses and the display of these flowers was, therefore, relatively small. There was an excellent display of the flowers of shrubs and trees and of herbaceous plants, including a large representation of irises. The display of flowers of shrubs and trees by A. Lahodny, gardener for T. A. Havemeyer, was of especial excellence, containing many unusual things. A large display was made by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., including a collection of irises, another of flowers of herbaceous plants and one of rhododendron flowers. A group of plants containing fine specimens of pelargoniums, calceolarias, spiræas and fuchsias, exhibited by Mrs. F. A. Constable, attracted much attention. Following is a list of the awards:

Collection of flowers of shrubs and trees—A. Lahodny, gardener for T. A. Havemeyer, first; James Linane, gardener for G. D. Barron, second.
Collection of flowers of herbaceous plants—Geo. N. Sullivan, gardener for Mrs. W. C. Nichols, first; E. Wilson, gardener for Mrs. L. S. Chanler, second.

Twenty-four vases cut orchids, open to all—Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., first; J. P. Mossman, gardener for Clement Moore, second.

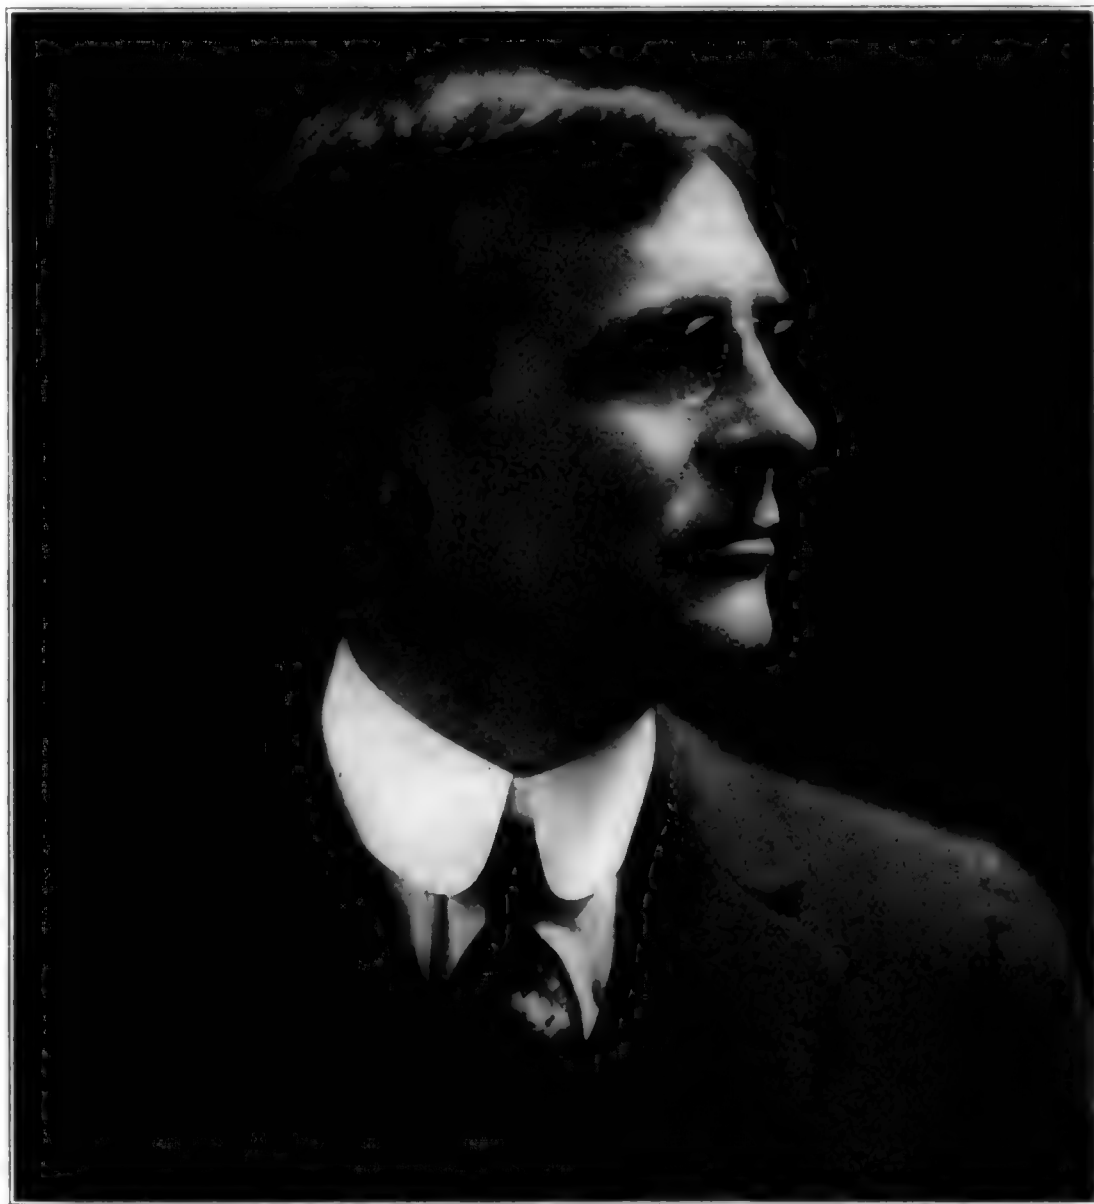

Twelve vases cut orchids, non-commercial class—A. J. Manda, gardener for Mrs. Harold I. Pratt, first.

Three white peonies—A. Lahodny, first.
Three light pink peonies—A. Lahodny, first.
Three rose peonies—A. Lahodny, first.
Three crimson peonies—A. Lahodny, first.
Collection of single peonies—A. Lahodny, first.

Twelve vases hybrid tea roses, outdoor grown—J. Woodcock, gardener for Gen. E. A. McAlpin, first.

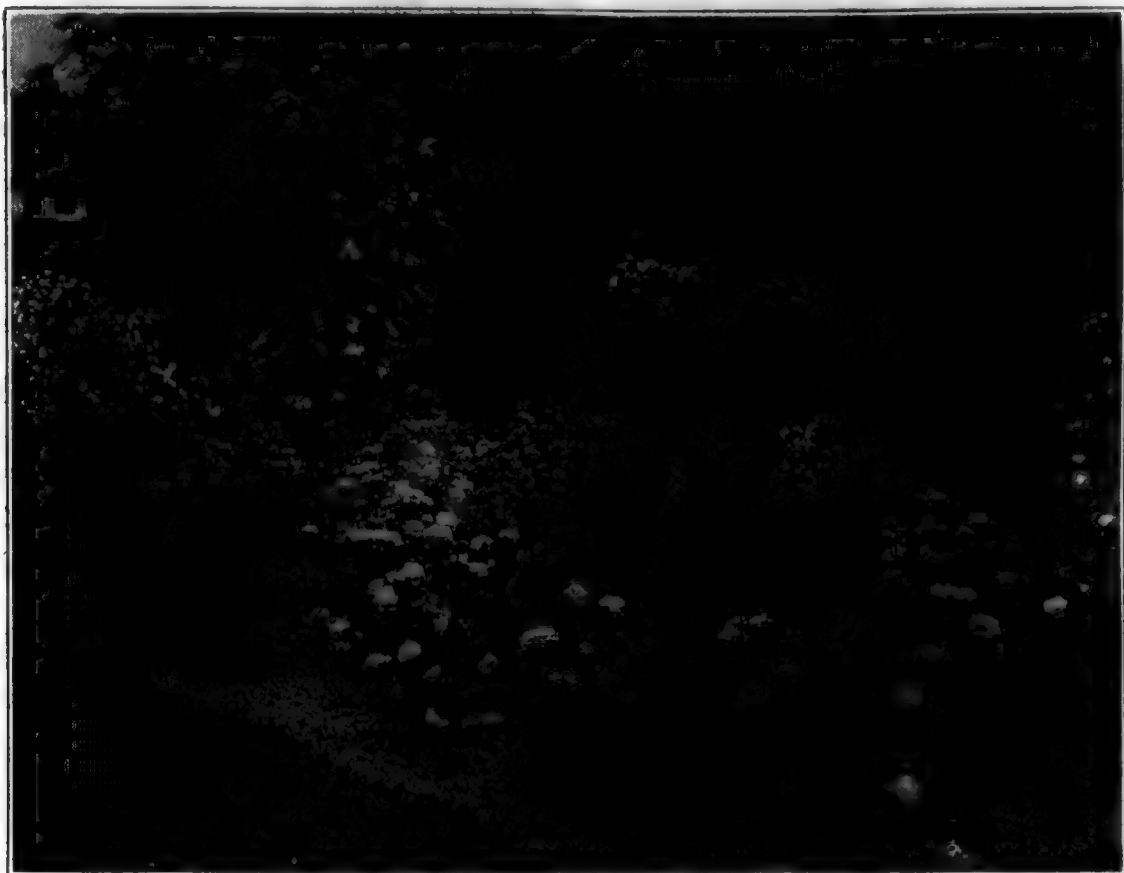

Vase hybrid tea roses, outdoor grown—J. Woodcock, first; Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., second.

The following special prizes were also awarded: Mrs. F. A. Constable, for a collection of flowers of herbaceous plants, cash; J. A. Manda, for new Swainsona Mrs. Jos. Manda, certificate of merit; Bobbink & Atkins, for collection of irises, silver medal, for collection of flowers of herbaceous plants, silver medal, for collection of

CLEVELAND PLANNING BIG SHOW.

In the autumn Cleveland will be the Mecca of many live growers, both commercial and private, together with the retailers and wholesalers who are desirous of securing new ideas that will be a benefit to them. The magnet in the Sixth City November 10 to 14 will be the largest trade flower show of the year. Live committees have been put in charge of this event and are developing it so that it will be, according to George Bate, chairman on publicity, the only show of national importance to be held this fall.

"We wish to extend an early invitation to growers and dealers throughout the east and central west, or in fact throughout the entire United States and Canada, to come to Cleveland during the time of the Cleveland flower show," says H. P. Knoble, general chairman of the show committee. "Because of the fact that Cleveland can be reached so easily from all directions by traveling only one night, we are anticipating a large attendance of the trade. We are working to produce a show that will make their visit to Cleveland a beneficial one for them. Judging by the personal expressions I have received from some of the leading men in the east and from Chicago, we are confident that the Cleveland flower show will be a real one."

The Clevelanders have the ambitious idea of organizing personally conducted trips from Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Boston, each party to travel on a special train. The details of this movement are to be announced later as the plans develop.

HYDRANGEAS PALE COLORED.

I have some Hydrangea Otaksa in 5-inch and 8-inch pots. They are in fine condition. I gave them liquid sheep manure alternately with soot water about once a week during the winter. The blossoms do not take on enough of the pink shade, turning mostly to white. Is there anything I can do to give them more of a pinkish shade, or should I have given them different treatment? W. B.—Mich.

If you will use chemical foods, such as Clay's fertilizer or Bon Arbor, they will be less likely to cause the flowers of your pink hydrangeas to turn pale colored than the liquid manure. The soot is all right. Also, to hold the color better, they must have some shade as the flower heads develop. While H. Otaksa, when it comes a good pink color, is quite desirable, it lacks the rich pink color of Radiance and one or two others of the newer French hydrangeas. These latter, however, are a little softer than Otaksa and not well adapted for use outdoors. By the way, you should stop feeding your hydrangeas as soon as the heads show color, or you will fade the color out badly. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

The propagation of poinsettias must now be pushed along in earnest. There is still ample time to secure cuttings for dwarf plants for pans, but if sizable bracts are needed, earlier propagation is necessary. Cuttings rubbed off with a heel are the best. If allowed to grow long and cutting below a leaf joint is necessary, the chances of damping off are increased. Never allow cuttings to wilt. The best plan is to let them lie in clear, cold water for an hour before placing in the cutting bench. If the sand is not too fine and water passes readily through it, there is not much danger of damping off. A majority of florists discontinue the use of fire heat after this date, but we have had an exceptionally cool season of late and a little fire heat, which will warm the sand somewhat, will greatly aid the work of propagation.

Primulas.

Plants of Primula obconica and P. Sinensis are now making good growth and the early batch is in 4-inch pots in a coldframe. Here they will remain until September, lath shades being used to protect them from bright sun, with the sashes tilted top and bottom, and removed entirely on sunless days and at night. Dampness and rain are harmful, but light showers are beneficial while plants are uncovered. A spraying once a day during hot weather is helpful.

Sow seeds of P. malacoides between now and July, and the plants will be of ample size. Earlier sown seeds make plants of too unwieldy size. P. malacoides has become immensely popular. At the New York show last March it was far more largely exhibited than all others of the genus combined. It is far the most graceful and decorative of greenhouse primroses and every florist who retails his output should grow some. It germinates readily and is a quick grower. Never give it a warm house; the cooler it can be grown short of actual freezing, the better will be its quality, but to be ready for Christmas a little more warmth after the end of October is necessary.

Annals.

The earliest sown annuals are now quite well advanced. Now is a suitable time to make additional sowings of such useful varieties as candytuft, alyssum, Gypsophila elegans, larkspurs, Mexican poppies, or hunnemannia; Shirley poppies, lupines, clarkias, etc. Be sure the ground is well pulverized before seed sowing and once the little seedlings are above ground it is astonishing how much dry weather they will withstand if the soil is kept constantly stirred.

Antirrhinums.

Those who want antirrhinums to flower in early fall must bench the stock from July 20 to August 10, the earlier date being preferable. That time will soon be here, and it is necessary to keep the little plants moving along, no matter whether rooted cuttings or seedlings are used. Cuttings should have been potted off into 2½-inch pots before now and, if the seedlings are in flats, they will be fit to pot within twenty days, as the growth is rapid now. From cuttings we are assured of stock absolutely true to color, but my experience has been that seedlings have greater vigor, prove more disease resistant, and give decidedly better results taken the season through. We are sometimes told that antirrhinums do not come true from seed. Everything, of course, depends upon the class of seeds bought. If they are bought from a really first-class firm specializing in these flowers—we have not, as yet, many of these specialists in America, but they are coming—not over five per cent will come false to color. Having had occasion to use many thousands for bedding as well as growing under glass, I have always had a small percentage of rogues, and if we want our present good forcing snapdragons to maintain their vigor for more than a few years, propagation from seeds and not from cuttings is necessary.

Sometimes snapdragons sell poorly; at other times, splendidly. Averaging the season through they pay well. Few growers realize how long plants will profitably bloom under glass. Raised benches have a decided advantage for winter flowering and not over five inches of soil is needed. Plants set out by August 1 will give their first cut early in October and will continue to flower profitably as late as the middle of July, although usually they are thrown out a few days earlier than this to make room for the new crop.

If there is any excess of seedlings or cuttings coming along, try them bedded out or even in nursery rows. They are not yet half appreciated as bedding plants. Mark the seedling varieties carefully and note what a small proportion fail to come true to color if your seed has been carefully bought. It need hardly be restated that pink shades have far the greatest sale. White comes next, then yellow. Other shades are little called for.

CO-OPERATE ON WINDOW BOXES.

Through coöperation with the Greater Dayton Association, an organization for the improvement of the city of Dayton, O., the florists of that municipality are doing a remarkable business in selling and planting window boxes. The association recently sent out folders to each one of its 6,000 members, urging the planting of window boxes and giving a few suggestions as to their installation and care. Forming a part of the folder was a detachable mailing card, which the member was asked to use to notify the association of the number of lineal feet of flower boxes he had put out. On the folder was a list of the florists coöperating with the Greater Dayton Association. They are: The Advance Floral Co., John Boehner, Edgemont Floral Co., the Heiss Co., George W. Frisch & Sons, the Miami Floral Co., H. H. Ritter, M. D. Schmidt & Son, Mrs. L. D. Johnson and J. F. Young.

SWEET PEAS DYING.

Can you tell me the cause of my sweet peas dying off at the top of the ground? I thought I could get rid of pests by not growing the peas for a few years, so I started this year in a new location. I planted them in February and they were doing well until about two weeks ago. I am afraid I shall lose them all if I do not find a remedy. I am trying tobacco water, which I have used before. I have also tried lime, but without success. I am enclosing one of the plants. I think that wireworms are perhaps the cause of the trouble. D. E. W.—Ind.

Trenches for sweet peas should be prepared in the fall. The cultural columns of The Review contain directions for this work at the proper season. How deep did you cover your seed when sowing it? Some catalogues and books still advise covering the seed half an inch deep and filling in the trench to the depth of three, four or even six inches as the plants grow. If you treated yours thus, the culture is to blame and not the wireworms. More sweet peas are ruined annually by this filling up process than are injured by any soil pests, and the wonder is that people will still recommend it. The burying of the stems, no matter how carefully done, is bound to cause stem-rot to set in, especially after a heavy fall of rain followed by strong heat.

Cover the seed two and one-half to three inches and do not cover any more. Sow the seed thinly, or thin out well. In order to have the best sweet peas, the plants should stand four inches apart in the rows. Sweet peas are naturally bushy in habit, as you can easily prove by giving them the suggested space, and if they are properly thinned they will fill the row just as thickly with haulm as if the plants were left crowded.

If wireworms, cutworms or other soil pests are really at fault, lime your ground well in the fall. Meantime you can get rid of them best by getting some liquid, such as carbon bisulphide, boring holes four to five inches deep and twelve to fifteen inches apart, pouring a small teaspoonful of the liquid into each hole and immediately filling the hole. Or you can use Vaporite, working it into the soil, or water with Vermine, one part to 200 parts of water. This destroys grubs, worms, ants and other soil pests. C. W.

BUDS TURNING YELLOW.

Enclosed please find some of my sweet pea blossoms. You will see that they turn yellow while in bud and drop off. They are planted out in sandy soil, well fertilized with cow manure. If you can tell me what is causing this I shall appreciate it, as I expect to have a large crop this season if all goes well. W. J.—Tex.

It is not at all unusual for some of the earliest buds to act in this way. Occasionally this will continue for two or three weeks, but eventually your plants will grow out of it. The plants will be helped much if you can give them an occasional watering, while a mulch of old manure, grass, partly decayed leaves or any similar material will help to keep the roots cool and moist. C. W.

WEDDING WORK FROM DETROIT.

At a time when they are most busily engaged in making wedding bouquets florists will be interested in samples of the handiwork of one of the leading firms of the trade, the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, which Albert Pochelon runs in the time that he can spare from his duties as secretary of the F. T. D. The bouquets shown in the illustration were the bride's and bridesmaid's in one of Detroit's smartest weddings of the present season.

TULIPS FLOWER UNEVENLY.

I have a tulip bed on the east side of the house, containing about 250 bulbs. The whole outer border has just come up, while the second last row of the same variety is all in bloom. Three-fourths of two rows on the north side of the bed are up and just beginning to show buds, while there are parts of the rest of the bed that have been in bloom for ten days. They were all good bulbs and I can see no reason for so great a difference in the time of flowering. They were all planted the same depth and at the same time. What can be done to have them come in more evenly? The soil is a good loam, mixed with a little cow manure. F. & F.—Wis.

This is not an unusual occurrence. The frost will stay in certain parts of the bed longer than in others. I should judge that the bed has a certain amount of shade from a building or trees. If fully in the open, the bulbs would flower practically all together. C. W.

ILLINOIS BOILER BILL BEATEN.

The bill for licensing engineers operating boilers carrying more than ten pounds pressure or heating plants of more than 5,000 feet of radiation in the state of Illinois was lost in the lower house of the legislature June 8, obtaining only sixty votes. Lee O'Neil Browne, who introduced the bill, thereupon secured postponement of consideration pending the announcement of the vote, a parliamentary "stall," which is not likely to affect the greenhouse men's victory.

Since the bill was brought to the attention of Illinois growers in The Review of May 13, florists throughout the state have been bending their efforts toward its defeat, and their victory is a matter for congratulation, since it removes the threatened danger of an added expense that could not have well been borne by numbers of small greenhouse men.

ANOTHER BAD BILL.

There is pending in the legislature in Illinois a bill which, if it becomes a law, will throw the insecticide business of the state into the hands of the drug trade, taking it away from seedsmen, supply houses and florists. It is a lengthy document, and much of the meaning is obscured in the mass of text, but Section 39 provides that "it shall be unlawful for any person not a registered pharmacist to conduct a shop or store for the purpose of retailing, compounding or dispensing drugs, medicines and poisons." The principal insecticides, nicotine and Paris green, are poisons.

Section 48 provides that "no person shall sell at retail any drug, medicine or poison without affixing to the box, bottle, vessel or package containing same a label bearing the name of the article distinctly shown, with the name and place of business of the registered pharmacist through whom the article was obtained."

It may be true that the bill was not drawn with the idea of interfering with the present channels of trade in the insecticide line, but if it becomes a law it is only a question of time when the restrictions thereby placed on the sale of "poisons" will be interpreted to apply to insecticides; one or two accidents with nicotine extracts will call attention to the trade, with the result of handing the business over to outsiders without in any way adding to the safeguards.

Springfield, O.—As vice-president of the Commercial Club, Allen McGregor was one of the party that escorted the trainload of Cleveland boosters from Dayton to this city on their recent expedition.

EXTRA CARE NEEDED INDOORS.

This has been a queer spring. April was abnormally warm; May was unseasonably cool. This fact accounts for the blooming plants being in better condition than usual at this date. The blooms are as good as they were six weeks ago, and unless June proves unusually hot, like April, a good cut should be had all through this month. At this time we have the advantage of unusually good quality, and a little extra care should hold them up nicely. The sun is strong now and the spring growth is made, so that all our attention will be paid to maturing the present crop of blooms, and a fairly heavy shade will prove only beneficial. The pink varieties have taken on their warm weather hue, and bleaching is not nearly so noticeable as it was earlier in the spring. What a fine thing Enchantress Supreme is, with its fine color, which seems practically the same now as it was in the winter! There certainly is no place for the old Enchantress where this variety once gets a foothold. More syringing will be found necessary, to keep down red spider, but this can be reduced considerably by spraying once each week with salt water. Carnations do not seem to relish water on the foliage, as do some other plants, perhaps because the growth at this time of the year is crowded and does not dry out readily, causing stagnation among the lower foliage. I almost believe that if it were possible to keep down red spider without syringing, the carnation would be better off without a drop of water on the foliage at any time after the plants become established.

You will, of course, look closely after the disbudding. If there is one time when disbudding closely pays, it is during this period, when the quality naturally deteriorates. A natural desire for tidiness will prompt you to keep down the weeds, even if it were of no benefit to the plants. Perhaps a little loose manure along the edge of the beds will help prevent drying out.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARE OF PLANTS IN FIELD.

Now that the bedding season is over, you will have more time to give to your young carnation plants in the field. If they were planted and cultivated at least once before the bedding out started, they will no doubt be in good condition, without having suffered for want of attention during the last three weeks. In Indiana, May was quite cool, and the growth of weeds as well as of crops has been slow, but now that warmer weather has set in, one can see both coming on rapidly. You will have to get busy with the cultivator and the hoe, to keep the soil free from weeds and in proper condition to hold the moisture that is in it. During the last ten days we have had an abnormal supply of rain. It was needed badly, as a rather dry May caused the soil to dry out. With careful and consistent cultivating, it will be possible to produce excellent stock, even should the future rainfall be deficient. Make a practice of going through with the cultivator once every week, even should there be no rain, and if it rains, cultivate just as soon after as the soil is in working condition. Do this after every rain, even should that be twice a week or oftener, but be careful not to work the soil while it is wet. The idea is to keep a layer of pulverized soil on top all the time, to conserve the moisture below.

If the plants were all topped before, or at planting time, many of the shoots will need heading back again now. Go over them every week if possible, heading back such as have begun to run up. In that way you will have, by benching time, plants with shoots in every stage of growth, and that means a steady crop of blooms next winter. By going over them often, you will also avoid a waste of energy, as you will be able to top each shoot at the time it is ready and it will not be necessary to take off two weeks' growth that the plants should not have been allowed to make. Do not top the shoots before they are ready. I have seen growers pull out the heart when it should have been left a week. Frequently in such cases the heart does not come out, but just the young leaves around it, and the heart keeps on growing just as though nothing had been taken away. That is a waste of work and certainly no benefit to the plant.

When heading back a shoot, it is well to cut below the first upper joint.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The following new carnations have been registered with the American Carnation Society:

By Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, N. Y.—Peace, Prosperity x Winsor; color, white; size, three and one-half to four inches; habit, like Winsor; vigorous grower; long, stiff stems; can be planted closely.

By Joseph Sakswich, New Hyde Park, N. Y.—Olive Whitman, Beacon x Victory; color, scarlet; size, three to four inches; as free and early as Beacon, as strong and sturdy as Victory in late spring.

By S. Knudsen, Boulder, Colo.—Victory, unnamed seedling; color, dark scarlet; size, three and one-half inches; a fast grower, but not grassy; habit resembles Cardinal, but stronger; color does not fade in strong sunlight.

By Wm. A. Dawson, Willimantic, Conn.—Red Wing, unnamed seedling x White Perfection; color, scarlet; size, three to three and one-half inches; strong, robust grower; very free bloomer, without surplus grass; almost a non-splitter; stems long and strong; a fine keeper and shipper.

AT THE EXPOSITION.

Among the things in which florists attending the approaching S. A. F. convention will be interested at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, at San Francisco, is the Water Temple Fine Arts Palace, shown in the illustration on this page. It is worth mentioning that the standard acacias at the base of the temple are twenty feet high.

A NEW WISCONSIN RANGE.

The trade interests in southeastern Wisconsin are developing at a handsome rate and the best part of it seems to be that the increase in the demand for stock is taking care of the greater output after a fashion that probably will encourage the investment of additional capital.

One of the newest of the Wisconsin establishments is that in the town of Cudahy, just south of Milwaukee, started last summer by Patrick Cudahy, one of the famous Cudahy brothers and the owner of the Cudahy packing plant in Milwaukee. It is another instance of a financier taking up greenhouses as an investment proposition. For many years people of wealth have valued greenhouses as fine things for country estates and the fact that shrewd business men of the type of Mr. Cudahy are taking up greenhouses commercially is a good indication that the greenhouse business in the United States has come to be one of the country's standard industries.

The Cudahy establishment consists of four iron-frame houses, each 58x320 feet. The service building is 58x75 feet, with walls eighteen feet high. The front of the building, facing the street, has several openings for unloading coal, and the coal pit is concrete on one side and boarded inside and outside on two sides. In front of the building is a concrete drive, so that wagons can drive right up to the windows and unload the fuel. The service building contains two boilers, of 125 horsepower each. The boilers are partitioned off from the rest of the building, which contains a large office, packing room and a pump room with a double set of boiler feed and vacuum pumps.

Each house in the range contains nine 4-foot benches. In the house next to the service building are five benches of Beauties, two benches of Russell and two benches of Richmond. This house was planted June 13, 1914. The second house contains two benches of Bulgarie, one bench of Sunburst, one bench of Shawyer, one bench of Killarney, two benches of Killarney Brilliant and two benches of Ward. This house was planted July 3, 1914. The third house contains Killarney and White Killarney and was planted August 1, 1914. The fourth house is devoted entirely to carnations and was planted August 17, 1914. About the middle of December this range averaged a shipment of about 10,000 roses per week, cut from approximately 30,000 plants. The American Beauties, of which there are 4,600 plants, produced well during December, giving an average cut of about 1,000 flowers per week, of which approximately sixty per cent were long-stemmed. The output is all shipped to the commission house of Gust Rusch & Co., in Milwaukee.

It is a policy of the manager, G. W. Scott, who was formerly with O. C. Barber, at Barberton, O., to arrange his stock so that he has blooms coming all the time; he does not crop any of his stock. Mr. Scott is of the opinion that this method improves the condition of the plants and allows him to get a more even price, and he also thinks there is an advantage in that the roots are always kept active, especially the first year.

The growers say they have had exceptional results with Bulgarie and Russell and that they have had little trouble with Bulgarie coming blind. Mr. Scott is an advocate of wide houses. In regard to this he says: "I think our success is due in great part to our large, wide houses, which are so airy that the atmosphere feels just as sweet and pure as it does in the open; this is getting near to natural conditions."

The houses were built by the John C. Moninger Co., which also installed the vacuum heating system. Mr. Scott, who enjoys taking trade visitors through the place, has the following to say regarding this part of the range: "I was afraid there would be a great variation in the temperature from one end to the other end of the houses, because of the length of the heating coils, these being 320 feet long, but I find that my fears were unfounded, as we are able to preserve an even temperature. This, I think, is due partly to the large volume of air in such houses, and its ability to resist winds and outside conditions. I also think this large volume of air is partly responsible for the fact that we suffer little from insect pests, such as thrips or aphids, or from fungous disease. Throughout the winter we had practically no black spot or mildew and as proof of this we grew Shawyer, the most easy victim of mildew, in the same houses with five other varieties. From what I have been able to observe, these large houses take less fuel than it would to heat smaller houses covering an equal area. Being within about 300 feet of the lake, on a high bluff, we get all of the wind that is stirring, so naturally you would expect us to burn a little more fuel than plants that are sheltered. The type of the houses is excellent for this location and we find the soil in Cudahy exactly the thing wanted for roses and carnations."

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Market.

Memorial day practically closes the flower season in Utah for June, July and August; in September it begins again, and by October it has pretty good headway. Memorial day is much honored in Utah; every grave is decorated with some kind of flower. This year it was celebrated two days, and everybody bought double the usual quantity of flowers and spread them on the graves Sunday and Monday.

Never before has there been so much rain for this particular time of the season. Two weeks previous to Memorial day it rained, and not until May 30 did it clear up. The sun came out scorching hot, and it was clear until June 1. Then it clouded up, and we are getting more rain. This rain benefited the rose growers, as the previous hot, dry weather had brought the crop out a little early; but the cloudy weather checked it, and the rose crop came on just about right. Carnations were scarce and a little sunshine would have helped them, but as it was, nobody had carnations enough. Regardless of color, carnations sold at $4 per hundred straight through.

Roses sold exceptionally well this Memorial day, and the growers could not begin to meet the demand. Cladioli came on just right; there was a large cut of them and they sold readily at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, gladioli, peonies and everything else were entirely sold out up to June 1. Everybody sold all his stock of flowers, and nobody had enough. Telegrams came in from all over this intermountain country, but the orders could not be filled. The rain ruined almost all of the outdoor stock.

Various Notes.

The Huddart Floral Co. reports good Memorial day business, but says that they did not have enough flowers. They had the decoration for a recent wedding, at which all the guests were given small bouquets to pin on.

E. A. Lambourne says Memorial day business was splendid, and there is now a large call for American Beauties and long-stemmed roses for graduation exercises.

The Porter-Walton Co. reports having done an extra heavy business for Memorial day, mostly out-of-town work.

W. W. King found business quite satisfactory—his sales being mostly out of town.

Chas. Soter says he is well pleased with the large business that he has had the last year and that the sales for Memorial day were good.

Louis B. Westholder, of Evanston, Wyo., came through here just before Memorial day and visited the various stores and growers.

Elizabeth Huth, of Ogden, was confined to her bed with sickness shortly before Memorial day, but was able to be around by the big day and reports having done a good business.

John F. Dumke, Jr., of the Ogden Floral Co., says that his carnation crop came on just right. He only regrets that he did not have more of them.

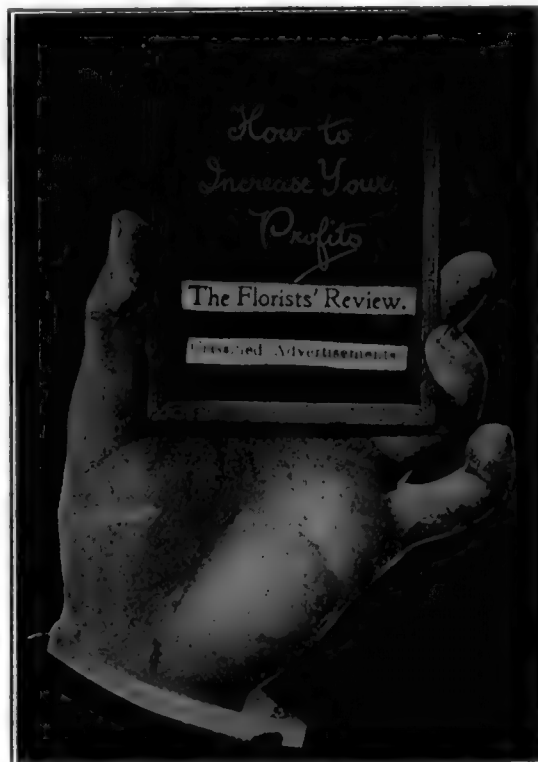

The Miller Floral Co., of Farmington, reports the best Memorial day business since they started in business. The demand for carnations was much beyond their capacity, and the cut of 50,000 roses was cleaned up nicely. They have now put on an extra force of help and are busy replanting their rose houses. In replanting roses this year, they are reducing Killarney to a considerable extent and replacing them with Killarney Brilliant and Helen Taft. They are planting good quantities of Ophelia and Hadley, and trying a few Hoosier Beauty. They say that Hoosier Beauty and Hadley are so much alike that one of them will eventually replace the other.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Trade has been good during the last week. The school commencements called for large quantities of flowers. Numerous June weddings, with a little funeral work, have kept the florists fairly busy.

Stock is plentiful. Carnations are enough to go around, and the quality is good, considering the time of the year. Beauties and other roses are plentiful. Daisies, gladioli, snapdragons, peonies and Canterbury bells are among the seasonable flowers available.

Various Notes.

Herman Junge reports business satisfactory at his place. This firm has been cutting some first-class roses of late.

John Elsner expects to supply the city with gladioli soon, as he has planted about 50,000 bulbs of this flower.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting large quantities of fine gladioli.

Walter Bertermann's automobile was stolen by joy-riders last week and was found in Irvington after having been driven about twenty-four hours.

Clarence Thomas, with the Hill Floral Co., was quite busy last week with flowers for commencements. This firm furnished most of the flowers for the Tudor Hall commencement.

C. R. Greene, with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., is looking for a country residence. He thinks that the early morning country air will be beneficial to his health.

The Pahud Floral Co. reports a quite satisfactory bedding business this year, having cleaned up most of the stock by Memorial day.

Adolph Baur has his Indianapolis ball team in training already. He says that the Indianapolis team is going to wipe the northern Indiana team off the map at the State Florists' Association meeting at Winona next month. H. L. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

M. P. Champlin voiced the general opinion of the craft in Schenectady, N. Y., that ideal Memorial day weather conduced to a highly satisfactory business. A check just received from Canada prompted Mr. Champlin to remark that his small ad in The Review is among his most profitable investments.

Fred Goldring, Slingerlands, N. Y., says the automobile is largely responsible for his fine retail trade, which is steadily increasing. He has a good shipping connection among the many retailers in nearby towns.

Sam Goldring, one of the best growers in Albany county, is manager for G. H. Person, Catskill, N. Y., and is keeping up his reputation at that delightful mountain resort.

Alfred Goldring, Cobleskill, N. Y., the youngest member in the trio of Gold-ringers, successful productions of and through Mother Earth, reports one of the best seasons in his experience. "Alf" is a striking illustration of the undaunted pioneer who locates in a country town and by persistent and patient efforts finally educates the public up to his ideals, and by delivering the goods obtains their confidence and patronage in return. A. H. Collett is a worthy assistant.

John Strong, Oneonta, N. Y., reports 6 degrees of frost on the night of May 26, making the plants look, and the craft feel, pretty sick the next day. Speaking of frost, through an accident the carnation house experienced a zero temperature one night during the winter and the plants were frozen solid, but were gradually thawed out by constant use of the hose. "Never had a better crop later on," was the verdict.

C. S. Derrick, Cooperstown, N. Y., was many years a professor in pedagogy, but admits he is again a student—a most successful one, judging by his trim range of glass and the way he conducts his business. W. M.

Winona, Minn.—The West End Greenhouse, owned by Edward Kirchner & Son, has been sold to George W. Hartner and Joseph Orłowski, who have been with the Owatonna Nursery & Floral Co., at Owatonna, Minn., for the last fifteen years. After having conducted the greenhouse for twenty-five years, Edward Kirchner will retire July 1, when the new owners will take possession. A tract of land has been secured on the outskirts of town for growing perennials and shrubs, and plans are being made for a downtown store. The business will be conducted by the new owners under the name of the Winona Floral Co. Mr. Kirchner will move to a newly erected bungalow.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Peonies are late in this locality. P. festiva maxima is just coming into color and a few early pink varieties are being cut. In quality and quantity, the crop is away ahead of any recent years. Carnations, roses and sweet peas were in extra demand last week, owing to the shortage of peonies. Business is normal. The bedding plant men are away behind in their work because of the cold, wet weather of the last few weeks.

Various Notes.

Joseph Marks, of the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., called on the trade last week. It was his first visit here for some years. Mr. Marks has many good friends here and was kept busy renewing old acquaintances.

Knoble Bros. have charge of the marketing of Seither's large peony crop. The fields are located on Bosworth road, a few miles southwest of the city. An inspection last week found everything in excellent shape for harvesting the largest crop in their history. The stock has all been disbudded in the field. Clumps are planted 4x6 feet and are as strong and vigorous as any ever seen by the writer. They plan to place about 50,000 in cold storage during the next ten days.

A sporting event of special interest has been scheduled for Cleveland during the progress of our fall flower and trade show, November 10 to 14. A bowling match has been arranged by the local Florists' Club, between the florists' bowling teams of Buffalo and Rochester. Always keen rivals for first honors, these two teams will bowl on neutral alleys here for a $50 silver cup, donated by the Cleveland Florists' Club.

F. A. F.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

We are now at the height of the spring rush and more attention is being given to outdoor work than to cut flowers, although there is the usual June business in this line as well. No great amount of planting was done before Memorial day, due to the cool weather and wet ground. In the last few days the public has been ordering largely and in many cases the greenhouse establishments already are sold out. Business appears to be better than usual.

Good ferns are quite scarce and other plants are being used in their place in the window boxes.

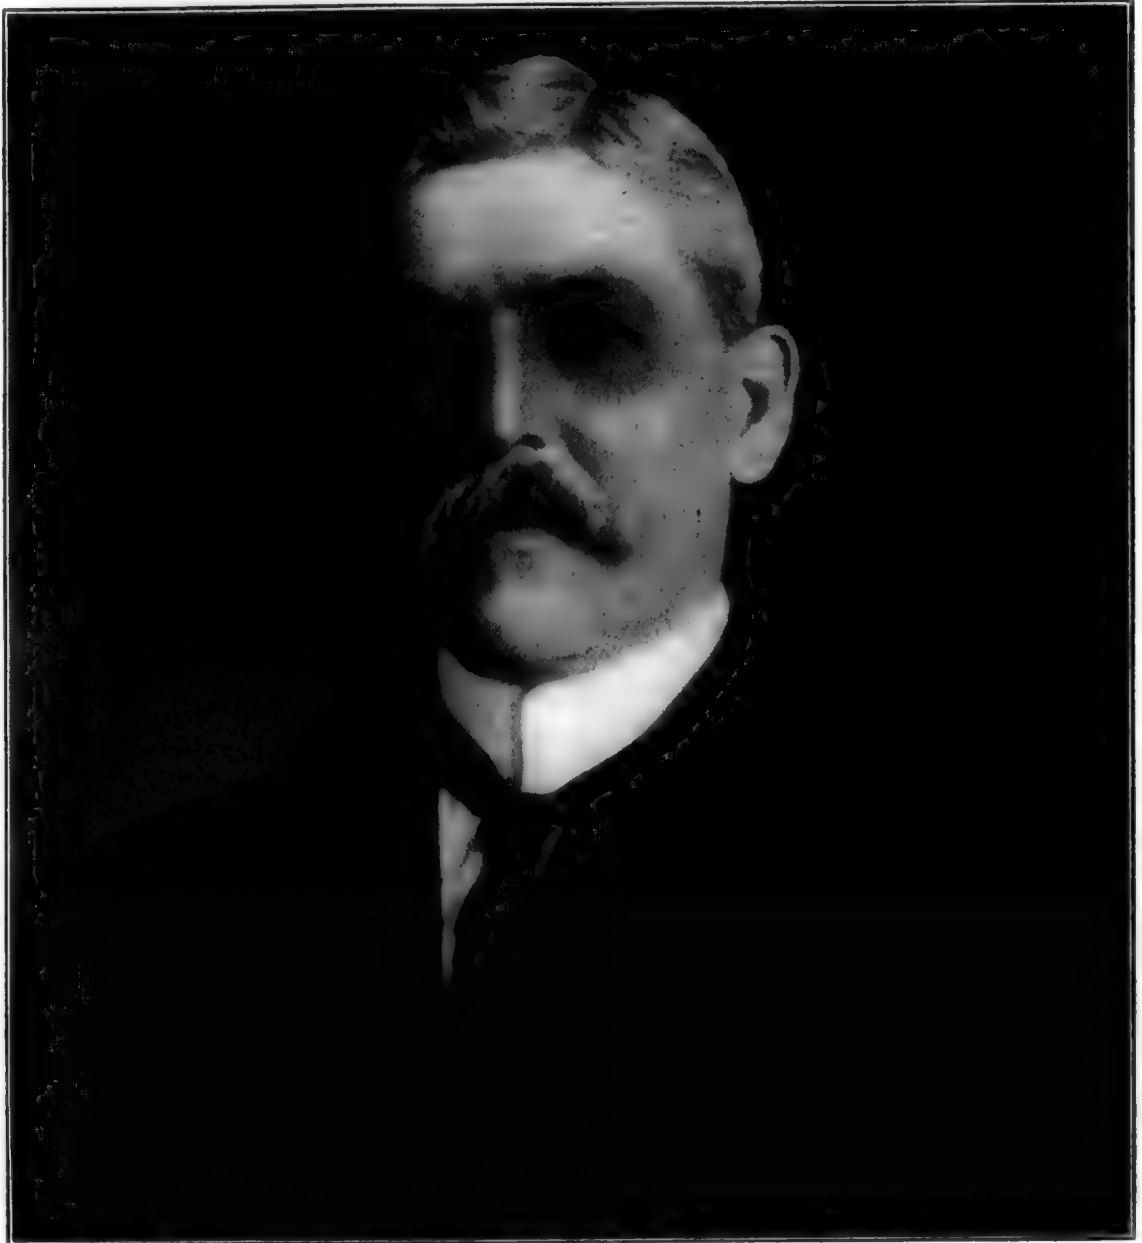

Several nurserymen are sold out of many varieties of shrubs. The hard winter killed much stock in the residence districts, forcing replanting. This, of course, helps business, although many of the nurserymen lost quite a bit of stock themselves.

Club Meeting.

At the June club meeting it was decided to abandon for this year the flower show planned to be held at the West hotel. On behalf of the committee C. F. Rice reported that the facilities were not adequate and asked that judgment of the committee be concurred in, which action followed after some discussion.

WILLIAM W. GAMMAGE.

IF YOU have heard W. W. Gammage spout on the glories of Canada—and if you haven't it means you do not attend trade conventions the way you should—you may be surprised to learn that the patriotic expounder of the duties, destinies and delights of the Dominion is a native of Connecticut—he was born in the little town of Towland just fifty-two years ago May 31. But he was only 5 years of age when the family removed to London, where in the course of time "our hero," as the lady novelists say, became the sole proprietor of the largest florists' business in western Ontario. Mr. Gammage has for many years been active in the trade societies and a regular attendant at conventions, where his ringing oratory ever has heralded the progress of his adopted land.

with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., made application for membership. Mr. Anderson was present and spoke of his liking for Minneapolis, and of the beautiful surroundings of the city, especially the park system.

It was announced that the club's baseball team is in good working order, having already played two games, and is open for engagements. Address John Rovick, care of Rice Bros.

H. Rosacker extended an invitation to visit his new greenhouses in August and have a picnic there. Mr. Rosacker has built four large houses, 28x260 feet, two for carnations and two for roses; also two narrow houses 260 feet long for potted plants, in addition to his present houses. These are the modern type of greenhouses and are well worth seeing. Mr. Rosacker is noted in Minneapolis for the flowers he grows, always having good stock. We all expect some extra fine roses from him, although he has never grown roses before.

The first Tuesday in September the club will have its regular meeting, at the greenhouses of the Minneapolis Floral Co. July and August regular meetings will be dispensed with.

Various Notes.

L. S. Donaldson Co. will tear down the greenhouses on Portland avenue in the near future, to make room for the street that is to go through the block. The large rose houses and also one of the large pot plant houses will be torn down in the process.

The Wessling Greenhouse reports that business has exceeded previous records.

Thomas Hall was forced to double his same houses with five other varieties. From what I have been able to observe, these large houses take less fuel than it would to heat smaller houses covering an equal area. Being within about 300 feet of the lake, on a high bluff, we get all of the wind that is stirring, so naturally you would expect us to burn a little more fuel than plants that are sheltered. The type of the houses is excellent for this location and we find the soil in Cudahy exactly the thing wanted for roses and carnations."

Roses sold exceptionally well this Memorial day, and the growers could not begin to meet the demand. Gladioli came on just right; there was a large cut of them and they sold readily at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, gladioli, peonies and everything else were entirely sold out up to June 1. Everybody sold all his stock of flowers, and nobody had enough. Telegrams came in from all over this intermountain country, but the orders could not be filled. The rain ruined almost all of the outdoor stock.

Various Notes.

The Huddart Floral Co. reports good Memorial day business, but says that they did not have enough flowers. They had the decoration for a recent wedding, at which all the guests were given small bouquets to pin on.

E. A. Lambourne says Memorial day business was splendid, and there is now a large call for American Beauties and long stemmed roses for graduation exercises.

The Porter-Walton Co. reports having done an extra heavy business for Memorial day, mostly out-of-town work.

W. W. King found business quite satisfactory—his sales being mostly out of town.

Chas. Soter says he is well pleased with the large business that he has had the last year and that the sales for Memorial day were good.

Louis B. Westholder, of Evanston, Wyo., came through here just before Memorial day and visited the various stores and growers.

Elizabeth Huth, of Ogden, was confined to her bed with sickness shortly before Memorial day, but was able to be around by the big day and reports having done a good business.

John F. Dumke, Jr., of the Ogden Floral Co., says that his carnation crop came on just right. He only regrets that he did not have more of them.

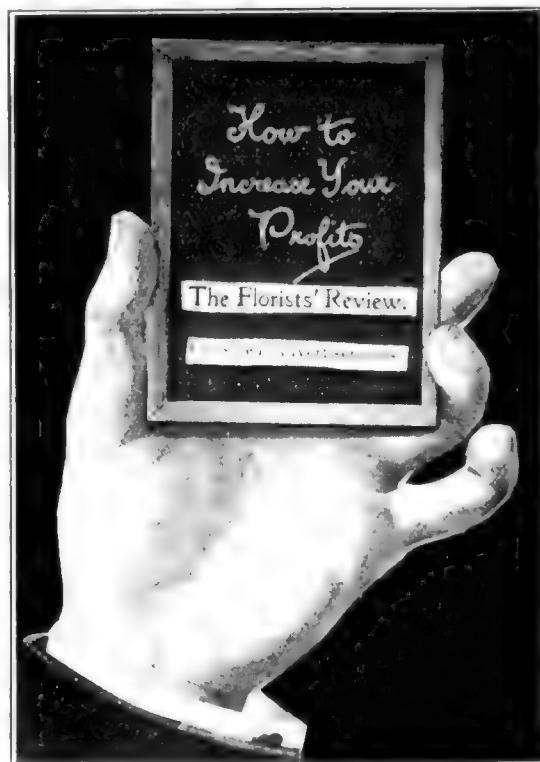

The Miller Floral Co., of Farmington, reports the best Memorial day business since they started in business. The demand for carnations was much beyond their capacity, and the cut of 50,000 roses was cleaned up nicely. They have now put on an extra force of help and are busy replanting their rose houses. In replanting roses this year, they are reducing Killarney to a considerable extent and replacing them with Killarney Brilliant and Helen Taft. They are planting good quantities of Ophelia and Hadley, and trying a few Hoosier Beauty. They say that Hoosier Beauty and Hadley are so much alike that one of them will eventually replace the other.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Trade has been good during the last week. The school commencements called for large quantities of flowers. Numerous June weddings, with a little funeral work, have kept the florists fairly busy.

Stock is plentiful. Carnations are enough to go around, and the quality is good, considering the time of the year. Beauties and other roses are plentiful. Daisies, gladioli, snapdragons, peonies and Canterbury bells are among the seasonable flowers available.

Various Notes.

Herman Junge reports business satisfactory at his place. This firm has been cutting some first class roses of late.

John Elsner expects to supply the city with gladioli soon, as he has planted about 50,000 bulbs of this flower.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting large quantities of fine gladioli.

Walter Bertermann's automobile was stolen by joy-riders last week and was found in Irvington after having been driven about twenty-four hours.

Clarence Thomas, with the Hill Floral Co., was quite busy last week with flowers for commencements. This firm furnished most of the flowers for the Tudor Hall commencement.

C. R. Greene, with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., is looking for a country residence. He thinks that the early morning country air will be beneficial to his health.

The Pahud Floral Co. reports a quite satisfactory bedding business this year, having cleaned up most of the stock by Memorial day.

Adolph Baur has his Indianapolis ball team in training already. He says that the Indianapolis team is going to wipe the northern Indiana team off the map at the State Florists' Association meeting at Winona next month. H. L. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

M. P. Champlin voiced the general opinion of the craft in Schenectady, N. Y., that ideal Memorial day weather conduced to a highly satisfactory business. A check just received from Canada prompted Mr. Champlin to remark that his small ad in The Review is among his most profitable investments.

Fred Goldring, Slingerlands, N. Y., says the automobile is largely responsible for his fine retail trade, which is steadily increasing. He has a good shipping connection among the many retailers in nearby towns.

Sam Goldring, one of the best growers in Albany county, is manager for G. H. Person, Catskill, N. Y., and is keeping up his reputation at that delightful mountain resort.

Alfred Goldring, Cobleskill, N. Y., the youngest member in the trio of Gold-ringers, successful productions of and through Mother Earth, reports one of the best seasons in his experience. "Alf" is a striking illustration of the undaunted pioneer who locates in a country town and by persistent and patient efforts finally educates the public up to his ideals, and by delivering the goods obtains their confidence and patronage in return. A. H. Collett is a worthy assistant.

John Strong, Oneonta, N. Y., reports 6 degrees of frost on the night of May 26, making the plants look, and the craft feel, pretty sick the next day. Speaking of frost, through an accident the carnation house experienced a zero temperature one night during the winter and the plants were frozen solid, but were gradually thawed out by constant use of the hose. "Never had a better crop later on," was the verdict.

C. S. Derrick, Cooperstown, N. Y., was many years a professor in pedagogy, but admits he is again a student—a most successful one, judging by his trim range of glass and the way he conducts his business. W. M.

Winona, Minn.—The West End Greenhouse, owned by Edward Kirchner & Son, has been sold to George W. Hartner and Joseph Orlovski, who have been with the Owatonna Nursery & Floral Co., at Owatonna, Minn., for the last fifteen years. After having conducted the greenhouse for twenty-five years, Edward Kirchner will retire July 1, when the new owners will take possession. A tract of land has been secured on the outskirts of town for growing perennials and shrubs, and plans are being made for a downtown store. The business will be conducted by the new owners under the name of the Winona Floral Co. Mr. Kirchner will move to a newly erected bungalow.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Peonies are late in this locality. P. festiva maxima is just coming into color and a few early pink varieties are being cut. In quality and quantity, the crop is away ahead of any recent years. Carnations, roses and sweet peas were in extra demand last week, owing to the shortage of peonies. Business is normal. The bedding plant men are away behind in their work because of the cold, wet weather of the last few weeks.

Various Notes.

Joseph Marks, of the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., called on the trade last week. It was his first visit here for some years. Mr. Marks has many good friends here and was kept busy renewing old acquaintances.

Knoble Bros. have charge of the marketing of Seither's large peony crop. The fields are located on Bosworth road, a few miles southwest of the city. An inspection last week found everything in excellent shape for harvesting the largest crop in their history. The stock has all been disbudded in the field. Clumps are planted 4x6 feet and are as strong and vigorous as any ever seen by the writer. They plan to place about 50,000 in cold storage during the next ten days.

A sporting event of special interest has been scheduled for Cleveland during the progress of our fall flower and trade show, November 10 to 14. A bowling match has been arranged by the local Florists' Club, between the florists' bowling teams of Buffalo and Rochester. Always keen rivals for first honors, these two teams will bowl on neutral alleys here for a $50 silver cup, donated by the Cleveland Florists' Club.

F. A. F.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

We are now at the height of the spring rush and more attention is being given to outdoor work than to cut flowers, although there is the usual June business in this line as well. No great amount of planting was done before Memorial day, due to the cool weather and wet ground. In the last few days the public has been ordering largely and in many cases the greenhouse establishments already are sold out. Business appears to be better than usual.

Good ferns are quite scarce and other plants are being used in their place in the window boxes.

Several nurserymen are sold out of many varieties of shrubs. The hard winter killed much stock in the residence districts, forcing replanting. This, of course, helps business, although many of the nurserymen lost quite a bit of stock themselves.

Club Meeting.

At the June club meeting it was decided to abandon for this year the flower show planned to be held at the West hotel. On behalf of the committee C. F. Rice reported that the facilities were not adequate and asked that judgment of the committee be concurred in, which action followed after some discussion.

C. G. Anderson, the new manager of the Minneapolis Floral Co., formerly

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

WILLIAM W. GAMMAGE.

IF YOU have heard W. W. Gammage spout on the glories of Canada—and if you haven't it means you do not attend trade conventions the way you should—you may be surprised to learn that the patriotic expounder of the duties, destinies and delights of the Dominion is a native of Connecticut—he was born in the little town of Towland just fifty-two years ago May 31. But he was only 5 years of age when the family removed to London, where in the course of time "our hero," as the lady novelists say, became the sole proprietor of the largest florists' business in western Ontario. Mr. Gammage has for many years been active in the trade societies and a regular attendant at conventions, where his ringing oratory ever has heralded the progress of his adopted land.

with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., made application for membership. Mr. Anderson was present and spoke of his liking for Minneapolis, and of the beautiful surroundings of the city, especially the park system.

It was announced that the club's baseball team is in good working order, having already played two games, and is open for engagements. Address John Rovick, care of Rice Bros.

H. Rosacker extended an invitation to visit his new greenhouses in August and have a picnic there. Mr. Rosacker has built four large houses, 28x260 feet, two for carnations and two for roses; also two narrow houses 260 feet long for potted plants, in addition to his present houses. These are the modern type of greenhouses and are well worth seeing. Mr. Rosacker is noted in Minneapolis for the flowers he grows, always having good stock. We all expect some extra fine roses from him, although he has never grown roses before.

The first Tuesday in September the club will have its regular meeting, at the greenhouses of the Minneapolis Floral Co. July and August regular meetings will be dispensed with.

Various Notes.

L. S. Donaldson Co. will tear down the greenhouses on Portland avenue in the near future, to make room for the street that is to go through the block. The large rose houses and also one of the large pot plant houses will be torn down in the process.

The Wessling Greenhouse reports that business has exceeded previous records.

Thomas Hall was forced to double his force for the last week in May, due to the rush of business.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is putting in the summer roses.

Perl Bros. have been working day and night in their new place, with landscape work. C. B. L.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had more or less rain for thirty-one successive days, but June 6 and 7 were delightful and it is hoped that we will now have more seasonable weather. Reports from western Pennsylvania and Ohio speak of frozen crops, such as grapes, tomatoes and tender plants. Memorial day was not up to former years in many respects, as it rained continually, which interfered greatly with the plant trade. But there has been a scarcity of blooming plants, the dark weather keeping the geraniums, etc., from coming into bloom. The cut flower business was not affected so much. Carnations were scarce and the local peonies were about three days late. However, there were enough of both to supply all demands. Many of the retailers complained of the falling off in transient sales, which were below the average, but all seemed to clean up well. The market last week was good.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting June 1, at the Fort Pitt hotel. There was a good attendance. Fred Burki described his trip to the fair and the coast cities. He covered the ground fully, and as he is a man who does not miss much, there was more than one who felt he would like to take the trip with the S. A. F. delegation.

John Jones, foreman at Schenley park, had a number of plants on exhibition to show the results of the different fertilizers with and without radio-active earth. Of course those plants grown with radio-active earth were the better. Mr. Jones is enthusiastic about the subject and gave an interesting talk.

James Moore, foreman of the Phipps conservatory, on the north side, had an exhibit of plants grown with the ordinary commercial fertilizers, which were so good it caused quite a discussion. Mr. Jones, however, says what he sees he knows and that radio-active earth will surely come into its own.

Fred Burki exhibited eschscholzas, or yellow California poppies. Pyrethrums, Barberton daisies and other novelties were shown by Carl Beckert. Some handsome orchid plants, cattleyas and dendrobiums were shown by Dr. Schaffers, who always has something good to show us. Neil McCallum had a collection of outdoor flowers, but the best part of his exhibit was the description and talk that went with it.

The Elliott Nursery.

A recent visit to the Elliott Nursery Co., of Springdale, was a treat, even in the rain. Acres of irises, in wonderful colorings, were in bloom. The peonies were not quite ready, but the thousands of varieties of herbaceous plants in bloom is a sight one can only see by going to Springdale. A visit to the office, with its numerous desks and typewriters, was an evidence of the wonderful strides this concern has made in a short time. From here we went to see Mr. Elliott's home and its surroundings, the fine specimen trees and the great hedge of shrubbery of all kinds. One can only look and wonder at the great banks of rhododendrons, ten feet in height and a mass of bloom in all the colors of the rainbow. After seeing all of the wonderful things in the garden, we reluctantly went into the house, and even then we did not get away from the garden, for Mr. Elliott's sons were all there and all are enthusiasts, so we had gardening with our dinner and, if possible, it made it taste better. After dinner, Mr. Elliott showed lantern slides of some of the finest gardens in Europe. The pictures were collected during his visit to the Robinson and other notable English gardens. He also showed many of the finest American gardens. We were sorry when the time came to start for home.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will start soon on an automobile trip through the New England states, when he expects to add to his collection of pictures of American gardens.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams recently had a pretty window display of specimen pandanus plants and Pæonia festiva maxima, with an abundance of black and white ribbons, which made it quite striking.

Randolph & McClements had another wedding in Youngstown, O., last week. This firm still is busy filling window and porch boxes.

J. R. Mellon, of the east side, has a bed of hardy azaleas about seventy-five feet long. The plants are almost ten feet in height. It is undoubtedly the most striking mass of color ever seen in this vicinity—even the policeman says he is glad it is not near the street, as it would undoubtedly stop the traffic.

DeForest Ludwig arrived home June 4 from his trip to the San Francisco fair and Pacific coast cities.

Clarke.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business in the cut flower and decorating lines was good last week, and there were plenty of cut flowers to meet all demands. Weddings are plentiful this month, and palms and decorative plants are in demand, as everyone seems busy in this line of work. Roses are plentiful and of good quality, considering the time of year. The prices are low. Gladioli were in somewhat heavy supply for the demand last week. Carnations have suddenly become small, and the demand is also small. The florists who have been doing bedding work are not satisfied with the way bedding stock is selling, as it is moving slowly. This may be due to the bad weather we have been having, and the growers feel satisfied that the stock will sell before the month of June is over.

Various Notes.

T. J. Noll & Co had a fine week. They received some of the largest consignments of the year of roses, and found a ready market for them. Mr. Noll says he is well satisfied with the increase in business, and also says he is having less trouble in getting stock consigned to him.

W. J. Barnes was busy last week with decorations for weddings and other occasions, and he reports business satisfactory in all lines.

Peter Martin's range is located on a slope, and when it rained his houses became so damp from water running into them that many fine blooms on the geraniums were ruined. He was unable to start a fire, as his boiler room was also flooded.

J. Austin has a great many geraniums still on hand, but feels confident that he will be able to dispose of them. He also has some good small begonias and cyclamens.

Stevens & Larkin are sending in a large quantity of carnations. Next year Mr. Stevens will devote the whole range to carnations, with the exception of one house, which will be given up to Asparagus plumosus.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co is sending in good cut roses and carnations. Their pot plants are in excellent shape, especially hydrangeas.

The Alpha Floral Co had a heavy run in funeral work all last week, both in and out of town. W. J. B.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

The Plainfield Flower Shop, 122 Madison avenue, has gone out of business.

Charles L. Stanley says that, considering general business conditions, he is doing well. The blizzard on Easter Saturday cost him $800. If it had not been for this setback, his business so far this year would have been nearly normal.

The Lincoln Flower Shop, 327 Park avenue, has had much funeral work of late. Business generally is good. The Memorial day trade was large.

Mrs. L. J. Denton, who has conducted a florists' business at 216 Park avenue for a number of years, has gone out of business.

At the Plainfield branch of W. A. Manda, Inc., Somerset and Howard streets, Mr. Manda is raising a whole benchful of a new geranium known as the Everblooming Scarlet. A whole house will be devoted to the raising of these next year. Mr. Manda has a fine lot of Anthericum Mandaianum and Dracæna Rothiana.

James Smith, who conducts the business which formerly bore the name of Smith & Haff, reports business fair. He is still cutting sweet peas and carnations, but his spring and early summer stock is well cleaned out. He is beginning to get ready for the fall trade.

Brooks Carson had a good season and is now well cleaned out. He will soon begin to plant his chrysanthemum and carnation plants for the next season's trade.

Albert Brinkley, 308 Berckman street, has had a large sale of geraniums and other bedding stock, a considerable quantity of it for beds in St. Mary's cemetery, which is directly across the road from the greenhouses.

August Dressel, a grower at Seventh street and Terrill road, has found business satisfactory this season. While he grows a great variety of flowers, hardy plants are his specialty. He plans to build a new greenhouse this summer.

While business is a little quiet at present with John W. Pitts, 51 Leland avenue, he has grown and disposed of a lot of stock since the first of the year. There was a large Memorial day sale.

The newly organized Plainfield Nursery Co., on Front street, Scotch Plains, has done a good business this spring in its flower and landscape departments.

R. B. M.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Midsummer prices and conditions have already arrived, notwithstanding spring weather, weddings, commencements, graduations, and funerals of noted men and women. Shipments of roses, carnations and peonies have increased enormously, peonies coming in a perfect flood. For the week end, business was light, and the wholesale street was almost funereal before the day ended. Retail stores everywhere were gorgeously decorated with peonies, and the windows were most seductive, but the usual snap of early June was lacking. Peonies will have to resort to cold storage this week; cellars and iceboxes are already full. The quality of most of the peony stock is magnificent. The weather has been most favorable, and good prices, as high as $10 per hundred, were realized for the early arrivals. Three dollars per hundred was the asking price for these Saturday night, June 5, and many thousands were disposed of at as low as $2, and for the medium quality even less was obtained, as the present week began.

Roses of all the popular varieties are abundant. American Beauties have greatly improved in quality, but prices have fallen. Some splendid stock sold June 5 as low as $10 per hundred. All the hybrid teas are lower, even the novelties sharing in the depression. On the short stems and low grades, quotations have already retreated to $5 per thousand. Killarneys are the foundation of the surplus. There is no end to them.

Carnations, as predicted, could not hold long the excellent values of last month, and are now down to one-third the prices of Memorial day. Two dollars per hundred is extreme top, and some are down to $5 per thousand.

Orchids do not advance in price or lessen in quality. The finest Cattleya gigas were selling June 5 at $30 per hundred. Everybody of account in the wholesale section seems to have his icebox full of them.

There are plenty of lilies of all kinds at lower prices, fewer gardenias, and a steady demand for valley, thanks to the June weddings, though these seem to have been largely in the first week of the month. Some of the leading retailers have up to date averaged two a day, but the bookings from now on are much fewer.

Gladioli of local indoor growing will soon be supplemented by southern stock from the open field. Irises are about over for the season. There are still plenty of pansies and sweet peas.

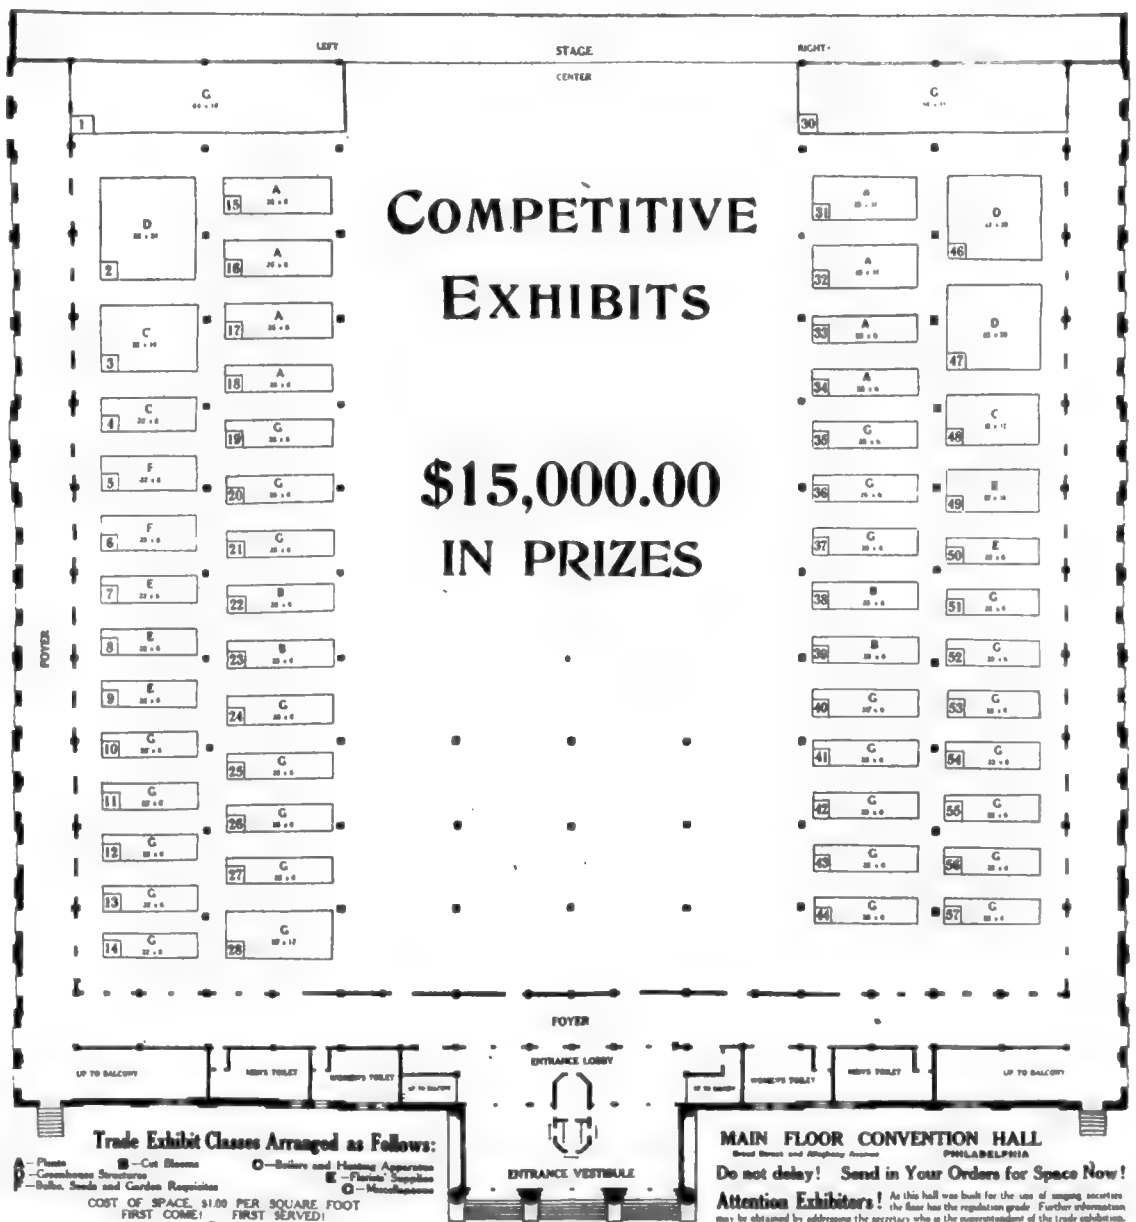

Various Notes.

The New York Florists' Club's date for its annual outing is Wednesday, July 14.

The New York Florists' Club's last meeting of the season will be held Monday evening, June 14. It will be rose and peony night, with a lecture by the

FOURTH NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Convention Hall, Broad Street and Allegheny Avenue
PHILADELPHIA, March 25-April 2, 1916

John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth Street, New York, Reserves Space.

president. C. H. Totty is back from San Francisco and will entertain with particulars of his visit to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The date of the June show of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society has been changed from June 11 to June 16, owing to the late season. It will be held in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. building.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was in the city Thursday, June 3, on his way to Cedarhurst, L. I., where he lectured on the dahlia before the Ladies' Garden Club of Lawrence, L. I. Mr. Vincent is greatly encouraged by the interest manifested in the American Dahlia Society, of which he is president, and says the dahlia show this coming September will be the best exhibition of this flower the world has ever seen.

The Uptown Seed Store had an artistic window last week, arranged by Frank M. Duggan, a miniature lawn, with samples of every appliance used, and also a fine display of iris in many varieties.

William Kessler and family will summer in the Catskills.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., will lecture before the Sabbath Day Association at its convention in San Francisco July 25. At the same convention Max Schling will lecture on "The Right of the Florist to Be Human and to Have a Weekly Day of Rest." Mr. Schling has been invited to speak before the Florists' Club of Scranton, Pa. He is busy with landscape work at present on a 340-acre estate in the Adirondacks, 120 acres of which is to be improved under his supervision.

Babcock & Son, of Norfolk, Va., say they will begin cutting gladioli from the open field June 20, including Fair Maid, America, Europa, Panama and the Burbank hybrids.

Patrick O'Mara and his party are back from an ocean trip to New Orleans.

The Kervan Co.'s bookkeeper, R. A. Johnstone, has recovered from a severe attack of rheumatism.

George Blake, the Brooklyn wholesaler, and his family have returned from a brief holiday at Washington, D. C., where Mr. Blake called on many of the prominent florists.

The death of W. C. Martin, who conducted a retail store at 284 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, for fifteen years, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

J. Austin Shaw.

Chicago Heights, Ill.—H. J. Peterson says business never was better than it has been this spring. In spite of, or because of, the large number of smoky chimneys in the town, the use of plants is increasing every year and dooryards will be especially gay this summer.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

Commencement bouquets, decorations and wedding orders combined have kept the market from accumulating any surplus stock, except a little of the under-grade varieties, and most of these have been used for funeral work. Consequently business has been good, with prices up to the average for this season of the year. A good quantity of stock was sent to Annapolis from this city last week, for use during June week at the Naval Academy.

Nearly all stock is deteriorating in quality now. Both roses and carnations are growing smaller and at times during the week first-grade stock was scarce. Peonies will be over in about one more week; the many spring rains brought them out better than for some years. Valley and white roses have been in good demand for wedding orders. Colored carnations have been a little druggy at times, but the wholesale houses were cleaned out completely at the close of business on Saturday, June 5. Greens are in good demand, with only a limited supply.

Various Notes.

James Hamilton is using a lot of hardy cut flowers, such as iris, coreopsis, clematis, etc., in the window decorations at his store on Charles street.

The Maryland Agricultural College will open a school in the city hall to give free advice on gardening to the city residents. The office will be open every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening from 8 to 10:30 and will be in charge of Professors B. W. Anspen, C. E. Temple and S. B. Shaw.

E. A. Seidewitz was toastmaster at the annual banquet of the Rotary Club, held at the Hotel Rennert June 3. He was also elected chairman of the membership committee for the ensuing year.

The Leo Niessen Co. is showing some fine nymphaea blooms in pink and white, which attract a good deal of attention.

Arthur Richmond says he is completely sold out of chrysanthemum cuttings by means of his ad in The Review and his only regret is that he did not have enough.

R. Vincent, Jr., delivered a lecture before the Cedarhurst Garden Club, Long Island, June 3. This organization is heartily supporting Mr. Vincent's latest accomplishment, the American Dahlia Society.

Pierce & Co are using a lot of white clematis in their attractive window displays. Their well filled boxes on the roof garden are a good advertisement for their business, showing how attractive a bare cornice or wall can be made by the use of a few vines and plants, artistically arranged.

The next club meeting will be held on Monday, June 14. A talk on "Humus" will be the feature of the evening.

At the bowling tournament held by the Baltimore Bowling Association the local florists were well represented. Mack Richmond won first prize in the tenpin singles and, with Henry Nicoll, put up a good total in the 2-man event. J. J. Perry and Otto Guerth finished well up in the 2-man duckpin class. Mrs. F. C. Bauer won second in the ladies' singles. Mrs. L. H. A. Klein and Mrs. James Boone won the ladies' doubles in tenpins. The standing of the 5-man teams in both tenpins and duckpins has not yet been given out, but in both classes the florists' team put up a creditable total. W. F. E.

WASHINGTON, D. C.The Market.

There has been a good demand for wedding decorations, producing a heavy sale of orchids and valley. The northern-grown Cattleya gigas seem to be nearing an end, while the local crop has not yet materialized.

Early last week business was so heavy as to cause the cleaning up of stock more closely than at any time during the year, but midweek brought a lull in social activities and consequently in trade. A heavy shipping business was done, large quantities of flowers, especially of the better grades, going to Richmond for use in the decorations incident to Confederate week festivities. American Beauty roses, valley, roses and peonies formed the bulk of the southern business.

Locally-grown peonies are fast going off crop, but they are being replaced by fine stock from northern points. White peonies have been scarce. The rainy weather of the last five weeks has materially helped the roses, and those received from local growers are exceptionally good. From the north are received fine Shawyer, Killarney Queen, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst and Ward roses. The cold and rain have, however, kept back all outdoor stock, and ramblers are fully two weeks late, and only a few outdoor sweet peas are coming in. Indoor sweet peas are to be had in fair quantities and of good quality. Gardenias are holding up their quality unusually well and are meeting with a good demand.

Various Notes.

J. E. W. Tracy, assistant superintendent of test gardens of the Department of Agriculture, is about to leave the city for the purpose of inspecting the contract fields of vegetable and flower seed for congressional distribution in Ohio, Illinois, Kansas, Colorado and California.

Peter Bisset has just returned from a long stay on the Pacific coast. Mr. Bisset was one of the judges of the floral exhibits at the San Francisco exposition.

F. L. Mulford, landscape gardener of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, left last week for Chicago, Minneapolis, Madison, Wis.; Missoula, Mont.; Spokane, Seattle, Portland, and Sacramento and Berkeley, Cal., for the purpose of making a study of ornamental trees, shrubs and plants.

Alfred E. Robinson, Sheldon A. Robinson, C. H. Breck and Luther A. Breck, all of Lexington, Mass., came to Washington to attend the meeting of the American Rose Society in an automobile. They made the trip in two days and declared it to have been an enjoyable one. After a short stay in the city, they returned in their machine, visiting points of interest en route.

Joseph W. Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa., was a recent visitor at the local stores.

Mann & Brown, the Hammond Co., and Ratcliffe & Tanner, of Richmond, Va., enjoyed exceptional business during the annual encampment of the veterans of the Confederate army, held in that city last week.

C. L. L.

BUFFALO.The Market.

The weather has become warmer and more seasonable. Business is much more brisk, and June weddings, commencements and receptions have added their quota to the volume of business, with the result that florists are somewhat busy. There are no large weddings, however.

The conditions in the market have changed to a marked degree. Peonies have thronged the June market, in all grades and colors. They seem to be somewhat soft and do not keep as well as in other years. Carnations still are good, but are getting scarcer each week. The demand for roses is increasing. The price is firm, and roses of all varieties are excellent. No special kinds of flowers are being used for commencements this year, but all kinds are sold for that purpose. Harrisii lilies have become great favorites for June decorations and are grown in quantities. Sweet peas are excellent and are much in demand.

Various Notes.

The recent frosts have done considerable damage in the Niagara grape belt. Grapes and cherries have been injured so as to cause a shortage in the fruit. Throughout the city parks, tender shrubs and plants show the effects of the frosts, for the foliage and some flowers are blighted.

Extensive repairs are being made on the C. B. Newman residence at East Akron, N. Y., which was recently purchased by Wm F. Kasting. As soon as the repairs are finished, Mr. Kasting and family will move to Akron for the summer.

S. A. Anderson's force was exceedingly busy last week with a number of weddings, a great deal of funeral work, and the graduation bunches for the Buffalo seminary June 3.

Barney Meyers is growing great quantities of Harrisii lilies at the Palmer greenhouses, in Lancaster. They are of fine quality and are useful for wedding and commencement decorations.

Miss Ruby Marks has moved to the Carlton court apartments, where she is most comfortably located.

At Stroh's Quality Shop a few specialties are being shown. These are blue marguerites, calendulas and snapdragons of a peculiar shade. Some fine sweet peas are also shipped in from the Attica greenhouses.

The opening of the mammoth piano stores at Poppenberg's made considerable work for the downtown florists. There were baskets, plants, large vases of Beauties, etc.

J. Benson Stafford had a most striking window display recently. It consisted of a handsome wreath of red amaranth elevated on a pedestal draped with plush. The wreath was enclosed in a good-sized frame of gilt and plush and a high-powered tungsten light was thrown upon it. It was most effective at night.

Felix Albert reports business as fair. He had an attractive graduation window last week, with a model girl graduate as a central figure.

Mr. and Mrs. David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., spent Sunday, June 6, in Buffalo. E. C. A.

OBITUARY

Charles F. Krueger.

Charles F. Krueger, one of the best known florists in Philadelphia, died at his home near Wayne Junction, June 4, after a long illness. Mr. Krueger, who was 41 years of age, had been in the florists' business for twenty-one years. He was associated with his brother as a grower of bedding plants and cut flowers, with greenhouses at Narberth, Pa. Later he took charge of the Reading Terminal flower stand, first opened by Robert Kift, succeeded by L. D. Goff. Mr. Krueger developed a good business at the Reading Terminal, leaving the greenhouses to his brother. After his brother's death the greenhouses were sold to A. E. Wohler, who has established a nursery there. Mr. Krueger had many improvements put in at the Reading Terminal, notably a handsome plate glass window in the blank wall of the stairway leading to Market street, thus giving the flower stand an opportunity for display both in the stairway and in the waiting-room that proved of great advertising value. Mr. Krueger was of a genial disposition and had many warm friends among his business associates. His business, which was extremely successful, has been carried on by his assistant, Alvin Saxer, during his illness.

The funeral took place from Mr. Krueger's mother's place near Wayne Junction June 7. It was largely attended by leading men in the profession. There were many beautiful flowers. Interment was at Fernwood cemetery. Mr. Krueger was not married.

Phil.

Henry J. Weber.

Henry J. Weber, founder of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., died of heart disease, at his home in Nursery, St. Louis county, Missouri, on Thursday, June 3, at the age of 74 years, after an illness of more than a year. He was one of the pioneers of St. Louis county, having lived there since his birth. He was the father of Frank A., Walter T., William A. and George Weber, all well known in nursery circles in this country. Five years ago he retired from active connection with the trade and turned the business over to his sons.

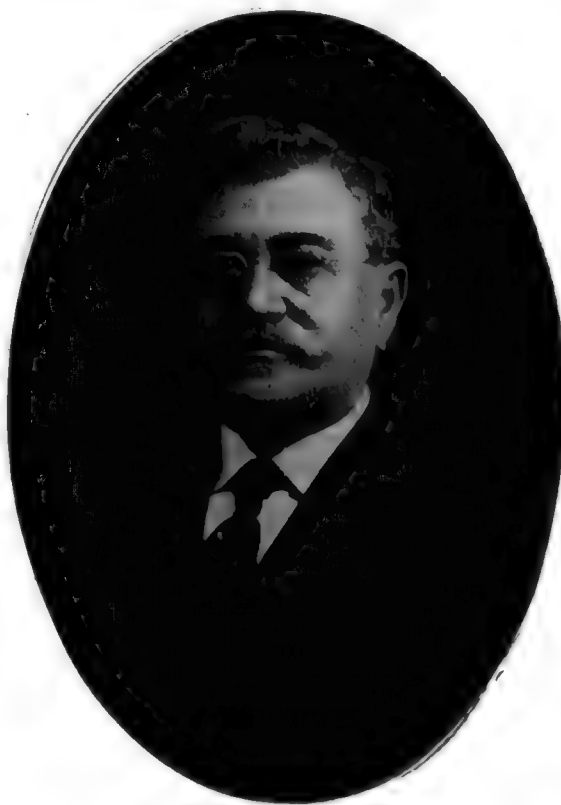

Mr. Weber was born on Gravois road, Nursery postoffice, May 20, 1841, and was the son of Carl Christian Weber and Margaret Weber (nee Mueller). His father came to this country from Germany in 1835, and for two years worked as a cabinetmaker in St. Louis. He then purchased eighty acres of land and began farming. The land, which now will average $500 per acre, was bought for $8 an acre. It was on this farm that Henry Weber was reared and upon which he worked until he was 21 years old. During this time he received his preliminary education. After working at various nurseries he returned to his father's place, which he managed for some years.

About 1867 he began in the nursery business on his own account on ten acres of land which his father had given him. He then added to the size of his farm by purchasing several adjoining tracts until he owned sixty-five acres. He also owned 123 acres of the original Grant farm. The business of which Mr. Weber was the head was incorporated in 1893, and since has grown to be one of the most widely known nurseries in the country.

January 31, 1867, Mr. Weber was married to Miss Christina Sutter, of St. Louis, a daughter of Michael and Gertrude Sutter, both natives of Germany. Eight children were born to this union, six of whom, with the mother, survive. Besides the four living sons, already referred to, and two daughters, Mrs. Amelia Keller and Mrs. Annie Aff, of St. Louis, he is also survived by seven grandchildren, one brother, J. G. Weber, of Clayton, and one sister, Mrs. Louis Stumpf.

Mr. Weber was an honorary member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and the members spent many pleasant afternoons as his guests at the summer outdoor meetings of the club. The funeral took place Saturday, June 5, from his late residence at Nursery, Mo., to St. Lukas cemetery, at Sappington, Mo. Many beautiful floral offerings were sent by members of the trade and by other friends. The St. Louis Florists' Club attended the funeral and extended heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

J. J. B.

Michael J. Aylward.

Michael J. Aylward, 62 years old, died June 4 at his home, 13 Willow street, Woburn, Mass. He had retail stores in Boston and Woburn. He was born in Ireland. He leaves four sons, William Aylward, of Roxbury, and Edward L., J. Joseph and Walter H. Aylward, of Woburn.

Mrs. Kate Bommersbach.

Mrs. Kate Bommersbach, wife of Nicholas Bommersbach, wholesale and retail florist, Decatur, Ill., died June 2 at the family residence, 703 Greenwood avenue. Her death was due to liver trouble. She had been in failing health for several months, but her condition was not regarded as serious until about three weeks ago.

Mrs. Bommersbach was born in Indianapolis, November 15, 1855. With her husband, she went to Decatur in 1881. Both were experienced florists and they started a small greenhouse in the south part of the city. A short time later they bought out Theodore Steinen. They built up an immense business, and their greenhouses are now among the most extensive in that part of the state. She was a member of the Lutheran church. She is survived by her husband and one son, John N. Bommersbach.

The funeral was held June 4 at the family residence. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Eunice B. Budlong.

Following an illness that extended over a period of a year or more, Mrs. Eunice Burlingame Budlong, widow of James A. Budlong, founder of the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., now the Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., died at the Budlong homestead, 604 Pontiac avenue, Cranston, R. I., Monday, May 31. She was in her eighty-seventh year and widely known through the section in which she had lived for so long.

Mrs. Budlong was born in Providence, R. I., where she received her education and was married at an early age to the late James A. Budlong, who died January 26, 1895. She is survived by one son, Frank L. Budlong, three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Since the death of her husband the extensive trucking and florists' business has been carried on by her son and a grandson, James A. Budlong II.

W. H. M.

William Chauncey Martin.

As Zach Wheat drove in the winning run for the Brooklyn National League team June 1 on Ebbets field in exciting circumstances, W. C. Martin, of 284 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, gave a lusty shout and collapsed. The cause of death was heart failure. He had complained of not feeling well just after Wheat made his home run that tied the score in the ninth inning.

Mr. Martin had been in the florists' business fifteen years and was widely known in the Sixteenth ward. He was formerly a resident of Huntington, L. I., where he was active in politics. It is said he had not missed a home game of the Brooklyn team this year.

He was born in Sparkill, N. Y., forty-four years ago, and was a member of the Patriotic Sons of America; the Ten Eyck Association, of which he was treasurer; the Graham Association and the Farmers' Club of Grand street. He is survived by his wife, Beatrice, four children, his mother, Anna; his brother, Frank, and three sisters.

Funeral services were held June 3, and burial was in Linden Hill cemetery, June 4.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

San Diego, Cal.—Thomas Cash, nurseryman, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court May 29. His liabilities are scheduled as $16,401.14 and his assets as $9,391.03. Of the liabilities $11,269.14 is unsecured. Of the assets the stock in trade is valued at $4,383 and the real estate at $2,000.

Salem, O.—V. A. Cowgill has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal court at Youngstown, giving his liabilities as $15,816.34 and his assets as $17,275. The first meeting of his creditors is set for June 12 by Referee Paul J. Jones.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

ONE of the features of this season's demand is the call for pink geraniums.

MATCHLESS, although some sarcastic persons refer to it as the white carnation that is not white, still is making friends steadily. It has performed well from beginning to end of the season.

It takes more than good intentions and fair promises to render good service, but the average man in the trade learns only by experience that the best resources seldom are available at cut prices.

FROM the number of growers offering rooted cuttings of chrysanthemums, and they are selling well, it might be inferred that there is not likely to be any serious shortage of stock during October and November, even if business is good.

GERANIUMS have sold splendidly so far this season, probably better than ever, as immense quantities were propagated. At present there is a shortage of good stock in bloom, but perhaps history will repeat itself and a surplus develop later; it not infrequently happens that a considerable number of plants are not ready until the season is far advanced.

ON the Editor's desk for several days a half dozen fine blooms of Humei have served to show that this old variety, introduced in 1810, still is one of the best after 105 years. The flowers came from H. F. Hillenmeyer & Sons, Lexington, Ky., who state that their plants have been on the home ground fifty years or more, the grandfather of the present owners having established the business in 1841. Humei is just a little weak in stem to hold up the heavy blooms.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Heurlin, Julius, Braintree, Mass.

TWO YEARS.

Pockett, Thomas W., Melbourne, Australia.
Santman, G. E., Philadelphia.
Miller, Geo. L., Newark, O.
Hobart, Thos. W., Sioux Falls, S. D.
Krieger, Wm., Lansing, Mich.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

DO YOU SELL BIRDS?

The Review would like to hear from some of its subscribers who handle birds as a side line. Does it pay? What sort of an equipment is needed to make it a success? What are the points to be avoided? Who are the wholesale bird dealers? Glad to hear from anyone who can offer suggestions.

PRICE AND QUALITY.

There are a great many ways of getting trade, but probably the least effective, in the long run, is the method of cutting prices to get the order and then cutting quality to get a profit. Cheap prices are not the means of building permanent business—certainly not if quality is skimmed. The buyer who is attracted by cheapness will not be satisfied unless he gets really more than his money's worth and, in any case, will be quickly lured away by a still lower offer. On the other hand, the man who knows and appreciates quality usually is willing to pay a fair price—he doesn't expect always to get standard stock below the standard price—and he sticks to the seller whose stock always can be relied on to meet his needs.

It is a mistake to cut prices at the expense of quality.

Bear in mind that quality is remembered long after price is forgotten.

WONDERFUL WEALTH.

Business in the United States scarcely can be expected to be normal so long as practically all of Europe is in a death grapple, but business can not be bad here so long as we are exporting so much more than usual. During the first nine months of the war exports show an increase of $625,000,000 over the corresponding period of last year. Florists' interests, of course, lie in the fact that when their customers prosper this trade prospers. As showing a few of those who are getting the money, note these comparisons:

9 Months' Exports.	Last Year.	This Year.
Foodstuffs	$260,986,000	$657,402,000
Horses	2,918,000	47,784,000
Leather goods	19,358,000	54,899,647
Zinc and lead	327,702	21,953,341
Clothing	8,790,000	24,953,000
Knit goods	7,510,039	18,070,335
Automobiles	934,330	23,997,968
Wagons, etc.	42,000,000	52,644,000
Arms and explosives...	7,068,090	27,881,547

There is every indication that this great flow of foodstuffs and manufactures will continue as long as the warring nations are able to finance themselves and continue to employ the energies of their people in the destruction instead of the creation of wealth.

NEXT WEEK'S WEATHER.

Weekly weather forecast, issued by the U. S. Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., for the week beginning Wednesday, June 9, 1915:

For the Region of the Great Lakes—Rain is probable June 9 and again about June 12. The temperature will be somewhat below the seasonal average.

For the Upper Mississippi Valley and Plains States—Showers are probable about June 11 and again June 15. The cool spell at the beginning of the period will quickly give way to warmer weather, and a short period of cool night temperatures will set in about June 11, alternating with warmer weather until the end of the period.

For the Ohio Valley and Tennessee—The cool spell at the beginning of the period will be of short duration. It will be followed about June 12 by showers, with higher temperatures. The closing days of the period will be fair.

For the West Gulf States—A week of practically fair weather, with temperatures slightly above the seasonal average.

For South Atlantic and East Gulf States—After the brief rains at the beginning of the period, fair weather will set in and continue thereafter. The temperature will be a little below the seasonal average.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

Owing to the lateness of the season, it has been decided to postpone the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society, announced for June 12 and 13, to Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20, at Horticultural hall, Boston.—Arthur H. Fewkes, for the committee.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last week, considering that it was right after a holiday, business was excellent, although there was no scarcity of stock. Then came a day of midsummer heat, June 6, to crowd the market with open flowers and now, were it not for the commencements and the shipping trade, conditions might truthfully be termed unsatisfactory. But after a careful consideration of the time and the attending circumstances, there is not much cause for complaint. True, nothing but the best grades of stock have been moved with any degree of satisfaction. Fancy and even standard grade stock has brought fairly good June prices, and for the rest, which constituted by far the greater proportion of the receipts, it brought fully as much as it was worth. The easing up in the market, following the Memorial day shortage, became apparent as early as June 2, but it was June 7 before the condition became pronounced. The dropping off, however, was confined almost exclusively to the local trade; the shipping trade held to the normal with no appreciable change.

Roses and Beauties were abundant after June 3, and continue to arrive in greater quantity than the market can conveniently handle. In quality the roses did not average quite as high as expected, but they were much superior to those of the week before. The demand seemed to be for the newer varieties, such as Russell, Ophelia, Shawyer and Sunburst. These moved fairly well, though it is doubtful if anything cleared after June 5. As usual, the shipping trade received the advantage of the fancy stock by coming in early with orders, while the local trade, not impelled by any urgent demand, was under the necessity of making its selection from a stock from which the cream had been removed. So much for delaying.

The supply of carnations, like everything else, is more than equal to the demand. In quality, there has been a large quantity of inferior stock, though there has been enough good stock to meet all demands.

Peonies held up in price and demand until June 4, when they, too, began to recede together with everything else. The hot day, June 6, started the local crops and next day the market was full of open flowers that had to be sold at once or lost. The result was that all stock fit for storage was sent to the freezer. The return of cooler weather has favored the harvesting of the crops and is tending to increase the quantities put away for use after the crop is gone.

Valley became sluggish early last week, but maintained a fair price. Mignonette and gladioli fared better than the conditions would seem to indicate. So, too, did yellow daisies. But none of these cleared. Their success was only relative. Snapdragon has not held its own since the arrival of peonies and is gradually receding into the background. Sweet peas are more plentiful than they have been for some time, but the quality is lacking in the greater part of the receipts. Easter lilies and callas find but a weak demand. Ferns alone stand on the short side of the market. The old stock is just about depleted, and the new is yet a bit too soft.

A New Loop Store.

Christ Pedersen has leased for a term of five years the store at 58 East Randolph street, in which he has opened a retail florists' business. Within a few days the partitions that divide the store into front and back rooms will be removed and fixtures installed. Mr. Pedersen was at one time located in the Stewart building. He will be assisted by his sister, Mrs. Theodore Callos.

Various Notes.

Speaking of the cost of high living for greenhouse stock this year, N. J. Wieter comments that not so long ago good cattle manure was to be had free at the stock yards if one would pay the freight for taking it away, $6 per car to Rogers Park. Now $12 per car is asked for the manure, while the freight has been shoved up to $20, and even at that the fertilizer has been difficult to obtain since the quarantine against the foot and mouth disease.

John Poehlmann, president of Poehlmann Bros. Co., is attending commencement exercises at the Culver Military Academy, at Culver, Ind., from which John Poehlmann, Jr., graduates this week. Mr. Poehlmann will return to the city June 11. Adolph Poehlmann left Morton Grove the night of June 8 to be present at the graduation of his son, Walter, from the Western Military Academy, at Alton, Ill.

It is not many years ago that the growers replanted all roses every year. Beauty was the last to come under the new method of carrying over and now most of the large growers replant only half their Beauties each year. Peter Reinberg is just starting up seven houses of Beauties that have been dried off and rested since Easter.

The trade is full of men who have other interests, or who have come into the business from other lines. For instance, John Brod is said to be Chicago's original osteopath. He devotes most of his time and energies to medi-

FLORIST'S PROBLEM IS CUT FLOWERS

Only One Satisfying Solution

No one greenhouse, whether his or someone else's, gives him a consistent supply.

His own greenhouse brings good profit, but for year-round supply the sagacious florist depends on a trustworthy service, such as the A. L. Randall Company, of Chicago.

It is, in fact, a co-operative service receiving the choicest offerings from the nation's largest growers and in turn distributing them to thousands of florists throughout the country.

Saving in shipping expense, labor and time, together with the certainty of always receiving the lowest prevailing prices, warrant your accepting Randall Service as an ally in your march to success.

Cut Flowers

ADVERTISING FOR THE FLORIST—DOES IT PAY?

How to Obtain Suggestions

Beyond the shadow of a doubt—it does. This statement is based upon careful observation and upon reports from florists cooperating with us in gathering information and suggestions for florists' advertising.

Your community spends a great deal of money on amusements, sweetmeats and gimcracks—far better spent on flowers because, dollar for dollar, flowers give more pleasure to more people.

Sales will increase when attention is directed to your store.

Advertise in the newspapers. Mail letters and cards to present and prospective customers. Remind them of appropriate flowers as gifts for certain occasions.

Suggest their depending on you for what is correct for Wedding Bouquets, Baskets, Corsages, Arm Bouquets, House Decorations, etc.

Offer a "Dollar Box" for birthday gift—a special Graduation Bouquet at $2.00—a special Table Vase with some abundant flower when the price is low.

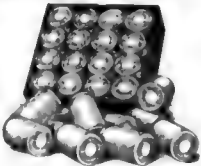

Announce your preparedness to provide complete decoration for house or lawn parties as well as wedding functions.

Above all—make your window a salesman. Keep new ideas always before passersby: Innovations in Gift Baskets, Table Decorations, Vases, Plant Boxes or whatever "special" you may be in position to offer.

All these are but suggestions. We will gladly answer questions and offer practical suggestions. Address your letters to "Advertising Department."

THE SITUATION ON EUROPEAN GOODS

The Supply Very Uncertain

With the determined entry of Italy into the European conflict, imported goods become more difficult to obtain than ever. The meager supply of such materials as florists use that reaches our shores is eagerly taken at top figures and sold at a premium.

Good fortune has attended us in our purchases and we offer a large and well assorted stock at extremely reasonable prices.

The uncertainty of future supplies is obvious to you. It is possible that future importations may be numerous and abundant, but more probable they will be scarce and scanty.

We conscientiously repeat our suggestion to buy now.

Find They Increase Trade

During the time of year when private gardens are abloom, the demand for the florists' offerings seems to wane.

Flowers alone do not draw sales, but an attractive basket filled with almost any stock and decorated with ribbon or chiffon will more likely find a buyer.

More and more are baskets filled with flowers given at betrothals, weddings, birthdays, receptions, and wherever something a bit more pretentious than the ordinary bouquet may be used.

Having purchased a first basket people are very likely to do it again—particularly in the case of young men who send flowers to their girl friends.

Two of our prettiest and most popular basket designs are shown and priced below. Order a few. Put them on display and we are sure you will sell them.

cal and pharmaceutical interests, but he never is happy for long without a greenhouse. He has been in the trade in several of its branches and at present is proprietor of the Grayland Nurseries & Floral Co., on Warwick avenue.

June 5 Winterson's Seed Store received several cases of kentias and aspidistras that left the nursery of Louis Van Houtte, pere, at Ghent, Belgium, April 29. It would appear, then, that transportation is not materially delayed via Rotterdam.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports that Peterson Nursery, Swain Nelson & Sons Co., James King Nursery and R. Scheffler were among those who started the annual peony shipments June 7, following the heat wave of the preceding thirty-six hours.

A similarity between the old Humei peony and the new Mrs. Russell rose has been discovered by Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel. Can you guess it? Both pink, you say? Sure, but that's not it. Mr. Erne says neither opens satisfactorily if cut tight; they must both be allowed to develop the flowers quite fully on the plant; then they're both unusually good keepers.

Kidwell & Ellsworth, members of the Chicago Flower Grower's Association, find Milady rose a sufficiently paying proposition to induce them to add 3,000 plants of it to their already liberal space allotment in Wellworth Farm Greenhouses, Downers Grove.

Amory W. Sawyer, who for many years was in the greenhouse business at Sycamore, Ill., now is secretary of the Chicago Auditorium Association and manager of the big Auditorium building. He is well known to the older generation in the trade and never has lost his interest in the business.

According to C. L. Washburn, Bassett & Washburn will double their stock of the Lady Hillingdon and Sunburst roses this year, as these two varieties have proved profitable. Rhea Reid is still a favorite with them. Prince d'Arenberg has been dropped, as Mr.

Washburn does not consider it a good shipper.

F. J. Benthey, 165 North Wabash avenue, has half a house of Hoosier Beauty already benched. He is inclined to regard this new rose with favor and will devote considerable space to it in his greenhouses at New Castle, Ind.

There is nothing like being a philosopher and making the best of things as you find them, thinks A. L. Vaughan. Sunday, June 6, he started out in his car to inspect a certain farm, but losing his way in the wilderness of roads about Chicago, he abandoned his object and spent the rest of the day riding through the country lanes enjoying the rural scenery.

According to Benjamin Gage, of the Peterson Nursery, there is no cause for uneasiness as to the local peony crop. The supply will be normal and the quality is quite up to standard. Cutting at Peterson Nursery began June 7.

office of the John Kruchten Co., Atlas block.

Our former fellow florist, Albert Fuchs, now characterized by the daily press as "the wealthy north side realty man," has this week started the erection of a 3-story theater and business building at Broadway and Grace street, within a few feet of the site of the greenhouses he ran in days of old. The new structure will cost $300,000, it is said.

George Reinberg is congratulating himself on the fact that he finished planting at an earlier date this season than in any other of the twenty-five years he has been in the business. He started planting in the latter part of February and finished May 22, after working without an hour's interruption.

Business has been so good with the Everette R. Peacock Co., 4013 Milwaukee avenue, that a second store will be opened June 12, at the intersection of Western and Sunnyside avenues. Mr. Peacock says the new store will be principally for retailing cut flowers and plants, only a small stock of seeds being carried. On Milwaukee avenue seeds were the original specialty, flowers and plants being added only to meet a demand.

The trade was represented in the historical pageant at Washington Heights June 5 by C. D. Coventry and Ralph B. Howe, both of the W. W. Barnard Co. Mr. Coventry impersonated one of the Pilgrim fathers and Mr. Howe appeared as Benjamin Franklin.

Co., who has just returned from a trip through western Illinois and Missouri, reports a general improvement in business conditions in spite of the fact that the growing season has been decidedly backward and wheat has been hit hard by the cold.

A most appropriate window display for a florist doing an extensive cemetery business is that of Ernest Oechlin, Madison street and Gale avenue, opposite the entrance to Concordia cemetery. He has in his window the representation of three well kept graves, planted with foliage and bedding plants, showing the possibilities of their use. The display is surrounded by a border of lawn.

Thomas Conlon, superintendent of the plant department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., is busy these days getting his geraniums, vineas and cannas into the field. Tony Gabel, who has charge of the mums, has one house planted with October Frost and Golden Glow. He has just started to plant another house with Bonnaffon. Poehlmann Bros. Co. will devote eight houses to mums this year. Mr. Gabel took a run to Union Grove, Wis., the other day in Richard Salm's automobile, and says French & Salm did a splendid business Memorial day. They are growing Mrs. Charles Russell rose exclusively and have about 35,000 plants, all of which are in excellent condition. Poehlmann Bros. Co. received a large shipment of palms and araucarias from Belgium June 7.

Recently returned from a trip to his home town, Corsicana, Tex., A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., says business conditions in that part of the country are rapidly improving as a result of cotton prices again approaching the normal.

T. Grabowski, 4523 Addison street, will add a new house to his establishment this summer and has already purchased a new tubeless Kroeschell boiler, No. 24 size, for it.

Carl Ickes, of the Ickes-Braun Mill Co., reports orders coming about as last year and enough to keep all hands busy.

The Market.

Everybody seems to agree that Memorial day would have shown an enormous increase in business had there been sufficient stock to take care of all orders. That the demand showed such an increase, however, was due partly to the fact that individual customers tried at a number of different places to get what they wanted and every dealer would not have had all the orders he turned down if stock had been more plentiful. The customary glut has been held off so far by the weather, which has not as yet turned sufficiently warm to bring the stock on in unmanageable quantities. True, there have been some bright, warm days and stock in consequence is arriving in increasing quantities.

Business has been good during the last week. While there has, of course, been the usual drop in prices after Memorial day, the decline has not reached the bottom so quickly this year as usual. Roses are more plentiful, but retain the same high quality as during the shortage. Russells have increased in quantity, but are being disposed of easily every day. Confirmed Beauty buyers are turning to this rose and are being more than satisfied. Carnations are moving fairly well in spite of the increased supply, as the quality remains good. Peonies are still coming in from the south and are moving well, as the local cut has not yet begun. Sweet peas are also finding a ready sale and are bringing good prices for this time of year. They are of fine quality, especially some of the butterfly stock. Valley and lilies are moving well. There is a large demand for greens for decorative work, as the June brides are with us again.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports good business for the entire spring, both in cut flowers and bedding stock. Though the firm had a large supply of bedding stock, it has moved so rapidly that it is now entirely cleaned out. A recent fire at the Pollworth greenhouses did some damage to one shed and killed two horses. The other day a Ford car belonging to the firm started without the aid of the chauffeur and ran three blocks through alleys, passing all obstacles safely, until a wagon got in the way and the Ford was forced to stop. A wheel of the wagon was smashed and the auto suffered some scratches, but rists' Club in Kurtz Bros.' cafe, June 3, plans were discussed for the holding of a picnic August 1 in Kiepper's park.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There are signs that the market is falling off a little during these early days in June. The demand is largely for the best flowers, making the disposal of the poorer grades increasingly difficult. The weather has been mostly cool, favoring quality; this is a great help to both supply and demand. White roses with long stems and foliage free from mildew are the only scarce flowers in the market. Peonies are extremely plentiful, at declining prices; the best bring respectable figures, but the short stems and leftovers sell cheaply. Carnations have taken a new lease of life and are coming in quite freely, rather in excess of the demand. Sweet peas of quality bring fine prices, while ordinary stock is hard to sell. Valley is not so much sought as was expected. Cattleyas, including gigas, Mossiae and Gaskelliana, are in fair request. Gardenias are scarce and bring good prices when fine. Cornflower is becoming plentiful. Fancy gladioli keep up well; the baby type is shortening. Outdoor flowers have suffered from the copious rains.

The National Flower Show.

Progress is marked by two events in the great flower show to be held here next spring. One was the signing of the lease on behalf of the city that gives us Convention hall, at Broad street and Allegheny avenue, for the exhibition; the other was the appointment by Chairman George Asmus of Fred Cowperthwaite as chairman of the bureau of information. This completes the list of chairmen of the committees. It now stands as follows: Advertising, Charles Henry Fox; pub-

A Charming Scene.

The sixth annual flower show of the Natural History Club of Lansdowne was held in the auditorium of the Twentieth Century Club house, in that thriving suburb, on the afternoon and evening of June 5. There are fifty-two members of the club and it really seemed as though nearly all of them had brought exhibits of flowers from their gardens. They had shown enterprise in affiliating with the American Rose Society. The tangible results thereof were a silver medal and two bronze medals offered by the Rose Society as prizes at this show. Whether it was the honor of winning these prizes, or just the spirit of comradeship developed in the club, or real love of flowers, or all three together, matters not; the real spirit was there, a spirit that seemed to prevail everywhere, making the show what it should be, an exhibition in which everyone took part and was the better for so doing.

The hall was beautifully decorated with handsome foliage and showy flowers; William McCrea Thompson is an artist of ability. The stage was used as a background for the exhibits, the exhibits themselves arranged on tables that displayed their beauty to advantage; they were carefully labeled. Roses predominated. There were many outdoor flowers and some wild flowers for children's prizes. The vegetables were in a room by themselves.

Abram L. Pennock was the distinguished horticultural guest of honor. Mr. Pennock, who was one of the founders of the firm of Pennock Bros., spends two-thirds of each year in Florida, making his home there. The summer months are spent at Lansdowne.

The American Rose Society's silver medal for the best twelve varieties of hybrid tea roses was won by Samuel

S. Pennock, who distanced his nearest rival by cutting his flowers with all the foliage possible. Mr. Pennock's varieties were Mrs. Jardine, James Coey, Robin Hood, Richmond, Double Pink Killarney, Mme. Caroline Testout, Lady Alice Stanley, Mme. Edmond Rostand, Margaret, Alexander Hill Gray, Bessie Brown and an unknown. James Breen won the bronze medal for the best six hybrid teas and Mrs. Rupert Schaeffer captured the bronze medal for the best six hybrid perpetuals. Miss McIlvaine won the cup offered by Mrs. Edgar Scott for the best exhibit of garden flowers. The best rose in the show was Lady Hillingdon, grown by M. H. Cryer.

The judges were C. C. Lippincott, Casper Pennock, Alphonse Pericat and W. M. Thompson.

Outing at Hammonton.

A party of Philadelphians from the Leo Niessen Co. went down to Ham-monton, N. J., on the 9:20 train on the morning of June 6, to visit J. Murray Bassett. Favored by glorious weather and a hearty welcome, they had a splendid time, enjoying their holiday thoroughly. They had a ball game and a good dinner and saw the dahlias that had just been planted, and strolled in the woods. What else they did they will tell you themselves, for here are the names:

The M. Rice Co. has been importing German goods up to the last moment allowed by the blockade, for orders before March 1 for shipment until May 15. A large stock has been gathered for next season. Statice, moss wreaths and prepared foliage will likely be scarce.

Fifteen days of rainy weather during May, scattered over the whole month, with June starting out in a similar manner, have proved bad for the development of some flowers. Carnations, especially, have been retarded and have often brought from 3 to 5 cents each at wholesale. Retailers who have been in the habit of selling carnations at from 50 to 75 cents a dozen have had to charge from 75 cents to $1.25 a dozen, or be satisfied with an extremely close margin of profit. quality are becoming more abundant, but are high-priced, costing 9 and 10 cents wholesale. Sweet peas are abundant and of fine quality. Valley is abundant and cheap. Some potted French marigolds are seen in the markets. Geraniums, fuchsias and other bedding plants, which have had a large sale during the last few weeks, are not in as great demand, as most people who have planned for flower beds have already had them made. Not so many pansies are seen and these are of poorer quality. Gladioli are more abundant and are of good quality. Roses keep up well and are in considerable demand. Some outdoor roses are seen in the market. Bachelor's buttons are coming into the market in good quantities and are in considerable demand, both as cut flowers and for making up pieces. Potted begonia plants are appearing in considerable quantity and are of good quality.

There has been considerable funeral work of late among the Newark florists, and they are beginning to get busy on June weddings. A large number of weddings have taken place and more are scheduled for later in the month.

Various Notes.

Peter Penek had a display of the new Ophelia rose in his window last week.

William Weismantel, dealer in both artificial and natural flowers, at 245 South Orange avenue, reports that business is good, though the high prices charged for cut flowers in the New York market makes small profits imperative unless his customers are to be charged so high a price as to cause complaints. By Memorial day he had sold all of the bedding plants in his greenhouses.

Business is good with J. D. Kroehl, 20 Belmont avenue. He had considerable funeral work and looks forward to a good deal of wedding work during June.

"Business better than last year," is the report given at the store of William Gahr. Business was somewhat slow before Easter, but has been excellent since that time, especially in potted plants.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, is a little ahead of last year, but says business is not as good as it should be at this time of year.

Mrs. L. Jahn has had considerable funeral work. Business generally is reported as fair.

ROOTING EUONYMUS RADICANS.

Will you give me some instructions as to the best way and time to propagate Euonymus radicans? I have just received a shipment of the plants, and the grower from whom I purchased them advises me to propagate from outdoor stock in January, under glass. In the columns of The Review, however, I have recently read that summer is the best time for propagation. Please give me some further light on the matter.

J. N.—Mo.

Euonymus radicans can be successfully propagated either in early August or in winter. I prefer the summer cuttings, as they root much more quickly than the winter ones if kept in a close frame, shaded and freely syringed. Flats are really preferable to frames, however, because they can be moved about. A flat 12x24 inches and four inches deep will hold 200 to 250 cuttings and not one per cent will fail to root, provided the cuttings, when taken off, are plunged in fresh water and are not allowed to dry at any time. Use sandy loam in the flats, placing some coal ashes or other material underneath for drainage. These flats, if kept freely syringed and properly cared for, will be a mat of roots in eight weeks, when they can be stood outdoors until cold weather. Then they can be packed away in a coldframe, under a bed of dry leaves, for the winter. Or the little plants can be potted up if required for early spring sales.

There is more leisure in winter to make cuttings, but these take a much longer time to root than the half ripened wood in summer and will not make as good plants for spring sales. If you want strong field-grown stock, put the young plants out in nursery rows. Those from summer cuttings will make fine plants the first season, far ahead of what you can get from the winter cuttings. If you wish to propagate large quantities, and if you have the necessary frame space to spare, I would place the cuttings directly in the frame instead of in the flats.
